

DO NOT CIRCULATE
NN 6/81

Form 16-20M-11-2-14

Accession

Class

88615 ✓

827 W83w

5

SAN FRANCISCO PUBLIC LIBRARY

3 1223 03672 7098

Form No. 11. 50M—10-24-14.

SAN FRANCISCO PUBLIC LIBRARY

Careful usage of books is expected, and any soiling, injury or loss is to be paid for by the borrower. A fine of five cents will be imposed for each day or fraction thereof that this book is kept overtime.

SEE DATE WHEN DUE BELOW

--	--	--

THE
WORKS
OF
PETER PINDAR, ESQ.

TO WHICH ARE PREFIXED
MEMOIRS OF THE AUTHOR'S LIFE.

A NEW EDITION,
REVISED AND CORRECTED;
WITH A COPIOUS INDEX.

John Wolcott
IN FIVE VOLUMES.

VOL. V.

LONDON:

PRINTED FOR J. WALKER; J. ROBINSON; LONGMAN, HURST, REES, ORME,
AND BROWN; AND G. ROBINSON, PATERNOSTER-ROW; AND G. GOULDING
AND CO. SOHO-SQUARE.

1812.

THE
WORKS
OF
PETER RINDAR, ESQ.

MEMOIRS OF THE AUTHOR'S LIFE

827

W 83 w 5

88615

IN FIVE VOLUMES

VOLUME I
VOLUME II
VOLUME III
VOLUME IV
VOLUME V

LONDON:

CONTENTS.

1. TEARS AND SMILES	1
2. EPISTLE TO COUNT RUMFORD	127
3. THE ISLAND OF INNOCENCE	147
4. GREAT CRY AND LITTLE WOOL	159
5. EPISTLE TO THE LORD-MAYOR	201
6. THE HORRORS OF BRIBERY	211
7. TRISTIA, OR THE SORROWS OF PETER	231
8. ONE MORE PEEP AT THE ROYAL ACADEMY	347
9. EPISTLES TO MRS. CLARKE	383
10. CARLTON-HOUSE FETE	407
11. INDEX	431

TEARS AND SMILES;
A
MISCELLANEOUS COLLECTION
OF POEMS.

OMNIS Aristippum decuit color.—HORACE.

JULIA;
OR,
THE VICTIM OF LOVE:

A PASTORAL BALLAD.

*Illa mihi sancta est ; illius dona sepulchro,
Et madefacta meis sertis, feram lacrymis.* TIBULLUS.

FROM memory nought shall force her form away,
For ever sacred and for ever dear:
I'll seek her tomb at morn and closing day,
And wet each flower I offer with a tear.

SHE is dead, who gave life to the groves ;
And covers our valley with gloom :
She who led all the Pleasures and Loves,
Now joins the pale band of the tomb.

She whose beauty commanded the heart,
So praised, so adored, so desired ;
Sunk, the innocent victim of art,
And the passion her beauty inspired.

Yet silent was she on the Swain

Whose cruelty doom'd her to mourn :

In secret her soul would complain,

In secret her anguish would burn.

Though faint was the blush on her cheek,

And deep in her bosom the thorn ;

A Smile midst her sorrows would break,

Like a Ray through the clouds of the morn.

She would sit near yon willow and sigh,

And pant in the shade of the trees :

“ Sweet Zephyr, bring health,” she would cry ;

But Health never came with the breeze.

And oft she would drink of the brook,

But Health never came with the rill ;

Then around on the heights she would look,

But Health never came to the hill.

On her Dog she look'd down with a tear,

And sighed, as she patted his head,

“ Poor Fidelle ! thou wilt suffer, I fear,

When thy Mistress, who loves thee, is dead.

“ Thou hast ever been constant and kind ;
My fondness ne’er met with a slight :
In thee a firm friendship I find ;
How unhappy when out of my sight !

“ When with speed I could travel the plain,
With thy Mistress to sport was thy pride ;
And now I am weak and in pain,
Thou art heartless and dull by my side.

“ When I’m gone, thou, poor fellow, wilt pine,
And seek me, uneasy, around ;
Beseeching the Swains, with a whine,
To tell where thy Friend may be found.

“ Shouldst thou find my cold dwelling at last,
Near my sod thou wilt mope the long day :
Nor the night, nor the rain, nor the blast,
Nay, nor hunger, will force thee away.”—

Thus she spoke to her Favourite, whose eyes
Were fix’d upon those of the Maid :
Then he lick’d her fond hand at her sighs,
As if conscious of all she had said.

Sweet Nymph, what a sudden decay!

Now her limbs she could scarcely sustain;
Now her Head would sink feebly away,
Like the Lily press'd down by the rain.

At length on her pillow she fell;

In silence we watch'd her last breath:
When she bade us for ever farewell,
How divine, though the whisper of Death!

No struggle in dying she knew,

Life pass'd with such sweetness away:
So calm from the world she withdrew,
Her last Sigh seem'd the Zephyr of May.

Beneath a plain stone she is laid,

For needless of praise is the tale;
Since the virtues that shone in the Maid,
May be seen in the tears of the vale.

TO THE READER.

THE unfortunate subject of this Elegiac Ballad was a Young Lady, possessed of uncommon beauty, united with a highly cultivated intellect, and the most fascinating manners. A tender attachment, terminating in disappointment, so affected her spirits as to occasion a fatal decline. Her Lover, from whose professions of regard she expected every happiness, deserted her almost in the hour of leading her to the Hymeneal altar: deluded by the idea of immense riches, he gave his hand to another; thus sacrificing peace, honour, and humanity, at the tinsel shrine of Fortune. His marriage, as might be expected, commencing with infamy, terminated in sorrow, and shortened a life that seemed to possess a claim to longevity. His last hours were those of repentance and horror: before his death he frequently visited the grave of his beloved but deserted Julia, and strewed flowers, mingled with sighs, on her sod; and, if a long and unfeigned contrition might be allowed to atone for the insanity of a moment, his tears must have obliterated his offences. Naturally of a poetical turn, he wrote a number of what he modestly called his love trifles, and sent occasionally to his Mistress during the paroxysm of his passion; some of which we have subjoined, that seem to breathe a spirit of sincerity, whose foundation one would imagine could never have been shaken by the feeble arm of a puerile ambition.

ELEGY I.

He despairs of obtaining the Smiles of his Mistress.

WHAT are the Thunders of the ruthless wind ?

And what the Billows that tumultuous roll ?

Calms, to the raging tempest of my mind :

Rills, to the restless surges of my soul.

Intent to please, I vainly urge my toil ;

No hopes, alas ! the Virgin's looks impart :

Oh tell me, Julia, what can win thy smile ;

Oh speak, and heave the mountain from my heart.

What can I do to win a cruel Maid ?

The front of Danger willing would I brave :

No coward terror can this heart invade ;

Whose chiefest glory is, to be thy slave.

Fate holds no horror while I please my Fair ;

Then, Julia, bid me my fond passion prove :

All, all thy rigour can command I dare,

But lose thine image, and forget to love.

ELEGY II.

Instead of composing for Fame, he resolves to write the Praises of Julia.

No more I'll idly pour the Line for praise :
Far loftier hopes my glowing fancy move ;
I ask the Muses for their sweetest Lays,
To tell a beauteous Maid how much I love.

Vain are our vows to Fame ; alas, how vain !
She waits to see us on the mournful bier ;
Before she yields of eulogy the strain,
What cruel mockery to the lifeless ear !

To Julia's hand, I own, my wish aspires :
Mean are my merits ; hers, how far above !
Yet can I boast what only she requires ;
A heart to guard her, and a soul to love.

Though Courts admired, the modest Julia chose
The silent shade, remote from public view :
How like the Berry that in secret glows,
And hides beneath a leaf its blushful hue !

Few are the wishes of the constant Pair :

What though no gold their humble cot displays?
Content, their guest, thus cries with careless air,
“ Go, leave us, Wealth, and palaces emblaze.”

In rural bowers Content delights to dwell ;
To cull the sweets of Nature's simple vale ;
To woo the Hermit in the mossy cell,
And join the Nymphs and Shepherds of the dale.

To Fortune's tinsel shrine let others bow,
And to their wishes rear the golden pile ;
To one fair Virgin while I breathe my vow,
And let my only treasure be her smile.

ELEGY III.

He complains of Julia's not keeping her Appointment to meet him.

WHAT Demons keep my Soul's Delight away,
And cruel thus my fondest wish invade?
Alas ! I tremble at the setting ray ;
Pale evening waves around an envious shade.

How expectation loads th' important hour !

Impatience wilder with each moment grows.

Thou loitering Fair-one, bless th' appointed bow'r,

And snatch thy Lover from a thousand woes.

From vale to vale my eager gaze I strain ;

From glade to glade with wild emotion move ;

Now turn and sigh, now move and turn again,

Devour each sound, and chide my lingering Love.

Desponding, now upon the ground I lie,

And, anxious, murmur to the desert air ;

Now call on slumber to my closing eye :

But slumber lights not on the lids of care.

Dark as the bosom of the stormy Deep,

Wild as its Waves, my Thoughts succeeding roll.

Cool reason vainly soothes the wretch to sleep :

Oh ! what is reason to the love-sick soul ?

Ye sweet Companions of my lonely bow'r,

Whose simple melodies my shades inspire,

Oh that my bosom felt your happy hour !

Oh that my voice could join your cheerful choir !

Light as your wing that skims the midway sky,
From joy to joy my Heart so lately flew :
With me my moments never left a sigh,
Nor bathed my lids in sorrow's baleful dew.

Hate to the Nymph I vow, and cold disdain :
Yet, at each idle sound, alarm'd I start ;
To meet her, panting, every nerve I strain,
And show too plain her triumph o'er my heart.

Where is my Love? Alas ! my transports die :
My cheek, that redden'd with despair, turns pale ;
With disappointment drops my clouded eye ;
Each pining feature tells a mournful tale.

See, see, the Sun descends beneath the deep ;
Behold the melancholy Bird of Night !—
In vain along the winding gloom I weep,
And wish in vain to stay the parting light.

ELEGY IV.

Disappointed at not meeting Julia, he accuses her of Inconstancy.

FAINT as the lustre of a lonely Star,
That sheds through night's abyss his distant fire,
Hope feebly glimmer'd on my heart's despair :
Behold, behold, at length her lamp expire !

Know, lovely Virgin, thy deluding art
Hath lodged a thousand scorpions in my breast.
Oh say, what happier Rival wins thy heart ?
Say, am I there no more a welcome guest ?

To a false Fair-one have I told my tale ?
For a false Fair-one fondly sigh'd so long ?—
Why, dear Deceiver, did thy charms prevail ?
Thy charms the subject of my every song.

Ye Swains who heard so oft my raptured Lays,
False is the Damsel that your wonder drew :
Ye Nymphs who listen'd to the lavish'd praise,
My soul's soft Idol proves at length untrue.

Nymphs of the vale, for me your pity spare ;
Let not my fate, ye Swains, your pity draw :
Alas ! for faithless Beauty drop the tear,
And grieve so fair a Diamond holds a flaw.

Can Falsehood's stain that dove-like heart defile ?
Ah, see the tear by blushing Honour shed !
Lurks perfidy beneath that heavenly smile ?
See Love with horror mark the guilty Maid !

Yet, yet the Tyrant of my Breast she reigns ;
Restless for her it heaves with constant sighs :
My wounded heart of cruelty complains,
Yet softly pleads her pardon while it dies.

ELEGY V.

He condemns the Licentiousness of the Age.

To false delights the Youth of Britain fly :
They court for happiness the Wanton's arms,
Who darts on all the fond inflaming eye,
And choiceless yields to all, for gold, her charms.

When in the Syren's fond embrace you sigh,
And on her lip impress the burning kiss,
Doth Friendship mingle with th' unhallowed joy,
Or Love's pure spirit swell the surge of bliss?

When droops enjoyment, what is then the Fair?
A Flower that blooms, but quickly doom'd to fade;
A Sun that pours a momentary glare,
And 'mid the tempest sinks o'erwhelm'd in shade.

O Swains! to Modesty's fair daughters turn;
By mental beauty let your hearts be led:
Bid by your flight the venal Fair-one mourn,
And press in tears her solitary bed.

When round your neck her fondling arms she glues,
And, bent to please, exhausts each winning art;
With false delights she shamefully subdues,
And leads the passions captive, not the heart.

Their midnight orgies while they madly hold,
I of a tender Maid shall be possest:
What bliss her tender beauties to enfold,
And sooth my slumbers on her faithful breast!

Time from her bosom all its snows may steal,
His iron hand her cheek's pure blush invade ;
Still to my Julia will I fondly kneel,
And love her most when all her roses fade.

Who spurns the weeping Fair-one from his breast,
Hard is his heart, in every virtue poor :
Hard is his heart to wound the Fair distrest,
Who sighs that she can charm his eye no more.

Cruel, to bid with grief her bosom heave,
Because her cheek no longer glowing warms :
Base, to forget the joys her beauty gave ;
And oh, forget it faded in his arms !

SONG.

FROM her whose every Smile is Love,
I haste to some far-distant cell :
My sighs too weak the Maid to move,
I bid the flatterer Hope farewell.

Yet, as I quit her vale, my sighs
At every step for Julia mourn ;
My anxious heart within me dies,
And panting whispers "Oh ! return."

Deluded heart ! thy folly know,
Nor fondly nurse a fatal flame :
By absence thou wilt lose thy woe,
And only flutter at her name.

SONG.

O SUMMER, thy presence gives warmth to the vale ;
The song of the Warbler enlivens the grove ;
The pipe of the Shepherd too gladdens the gale :
Alas ! but I hear not the voice of my Love.

The lilies appear in their fairest array ;
To the valleys the woodbines a fragrance impart ;
The roses the pride of their blushes display :
Alas ! but I meet not the Nymph of my heart.

Go, Shepherds, and bring the sweet Wanderer here,
The boast of her sex, and delight of the Swains.
Go, Zephyr, and whisper this truth in her ear,
“ That the Pleasures with Julia are fled from the plains.”

If thus to the Maid thou my wishes declare,
To the cot she has left she will quickly return :
Too soft is her bosom to give us despair,
That sooner would sigh than another's should mourn.

SONG.

ON JULIA.

ERE witching Love my heart possest,
And bade my sighs the Nymph pursue ;
Calm as the Infant's smiling rest,
No anxious hope nor fear it knew.

But doom'd, ah! doom'd at last to mourn,
What tumults in that Heart arose!
An Ocean, tumbling, wild, and torn
By tempests from its deep repose.

Yet let me not the Virgin blame,
As though she wish'd my heart despair :
How could the Maid suspect a flame,
Who never knew that she was fair?

TO JULIA.

FROM her whom every heart must love,
And every eye with wonder see ;
My sad, my lifeless steps remove :
Ah, were she fair alone for me!

In vain to solitudes I fly,
To bid her Form from memory part :
That Form still dwells on Memory's eye,
And roots its beauties in my heart.

In every rose that decks the vales,
I see her cheek's pure blush appear;
And when the lark the morning hails,
'Tis Julia's voice salutes my ear.

Thus, let me rove the World around,
Whatever Beauty's charm can boast,
Or sooth the soul with sweetest sound,
Must paint the Idol I have lost.

SONG.

BY JULIA.

WHEN Love hath charm'd the Virgin's ear,
She hides the tender thought in vain :
How oft a blush, a sigh, a tear,
Betrays the sweetly anxious pain !

Dear Youth, a mutual flame I own :

The sorrows of thy breast are mine ;

Thy virtues all my heart have won,

That boasts a passion pure as thine.

No more shalt thou my coldness mourn :

I trust the drop that dims thine eye ;

I see fair Truth thy lips adorn,

And hear her voice in every sigh.

TO JULIA.

WRITTEN NEAR HER GRAVE.

MUCH-INJURED Maid, who liest pale below,

To thee a pilgrim sad I steal away ;

In mournful silence steal, o'erpower'd with woe,

To bathe with floods of penitence thy clay.

Oh ! can thy gentle Ghost the wretch forgive,

Who seeks thy sod at this lone hour of night :

A wretch whose greatest hardship is to live ;

Who, dead to pleasure, sickens at the light ?

Oh! if my grief could sooth the sweetest Shade,
And pardon gain, which Justice must deny ;
Near Julia's ashes should this form be laid :
Its crimes forgotten, then what bliss to die !

Tired of the World, my heart no longer prays
(What others covet) for extended years ;
For who would madly court a length of days,
To count, alas ! the moments by his tears ?

ELEGY.

TO JULIA.

Detained in Italy by contrary Winds, he expresses his ardent Desire of sailing for England.

FAR from my Julia's arms I lonely sigh,
And wish to clasp thy beauties, but in vain :
The surly Winds my only wish deny ;
Yet would I dare the dangers of the main.

Ye Winds and Waves, how cruel to combine !
Oh let my prayers your rude rude pity prove !
Think of the gloomy moments that are mine :
Alas ! ye know not what it is to love.

To stately structures now I urge my way,
And weakly think the minutes to beguile ;
But anxious Love will not be led astray :
Love goads my bosom for the Virgin's smile.

Now, where the Painter shows his mimic art,
I strive to free my soul from Love's alarms :
Lo, every Venus but augments my smart,
And to my view presents thy brighter charms !

To Music now fatigued I yield my ear,
But Music cannot the dull hours control ;
With cold indifference every chord I hear,
While not a sound descends into my soul.

Oft as I mark the Tribes of Air, I cry,
“ How with your pinions would I mount the wind !
Oh ! with what rapture, lifted, cleave the sky,
And, turn'd to Britain, leave my cares behind ! ”

In wishes thus, I daily waste my breath,
Chain'd by the tempest to this hated shore.—
When shall I leave, alas ! this land of death,
For life and thee ; to part, my Love, no more ?

ELEGY.

To a Friend, describing the Horrors of his Situation after the Death of Julia.

FRIEND of my bosom, all my joys are o'er ;
Peace, gentle Peace, alas ! no longer mine :
Since Julia, once my idol, lives no more,
To gloom and solitude I steal to pine.

There, as I sit upon the sod, and sigh,
I hear reproof from every happy Dove :
In Fancy's ear they cooing seem to cry,
“ We know not of inconstancy in love.”

Lo, darkness, tenfold darkness, suits my soul !
The haunts of Spectres let me court, to weep ;
The beach where black with fate the billows roll,
And tempests raise the thunders of the deep.

Thou tellest me that Time a balm will bring,
Sooth every sigh, and calm my keenest woes.—
Go, seek in Winter's wild the blooms of Spring ;
Go, whisper to the restless surge repose.

Love, injured Love, a sure revenge can boast ;

Love hears my groan, and mocks my soul's despair :

"Bleed, victim, bleed," he cries, "thy all is lost ;

Such be their portion who deceive the Fair !"

I thought that Grandeur with a liberal hand

Could strew my path of life with sweetest flow'rs ;

That Wealth omnipotent could Time command,

And from his pinions pluck his whitest hours.

Constant in Memory's eye her form appears :

Where'er I tread, a source of woe I find ;

In every rill methinks I see her tears,

And hear her sigh in every passing wind.

What now remains, my horrors to beguile?

Away ye dreams of grandeur, wealth, away ;

Who cannot give my cheek one little smile,

Nor bribe a single moment to be gay !

ORSON AND ELLEN;

A LEGENDARY TALE.

Sequiturque patrem, non passibus æquis.

VIRGIL.

I TRY t'excel, in Legendary Tale,

The Lady, Gentleman, and Miss, of Rhyme;

In vain, alas! My creeping efforts fail;

Far, far unequal to their march sublime.

CANTO I.

“TURN, Farmer, turn thy horse's head,
And taste my ale so bright,”

Cried Boniface, whose sign display'd
The Lion in his might.

Yet how unlike the Royal Beast,
Who for his phiz ne'er sat !
Wherefore deriding tongues did call
The sign, the Old Red Cat.

Yea, much unlike indeed was it :

Jove's Eagle, and a Gander ;

Mathias, and the tuneful Pope ;

Lord Rolle, and Alexander.

“ Who boasts such ale ? ” quoth Boniface ;

“ No Landlord that draws breath.

A gallon I could fairly drink,

Even in the pangs of death.”

Young Orson from his horse leap'd off,

And shook the Landlord's hand ;

Then sought a room to taste this ale,

The best in all the land.

The Landlord had a red round Face,

Which some folks said, in fun,

Resembled his Red Lion's Phiz ;

And some, the Rising Sun.

Large Slices from his cheeks and chin,

Like Beef-steaks, one might cut :

And then his Paunch, for goodly size,

Beat any Brewer's Butt.

This Landlord was a boozier stout,
A snuff-taker, and smoker ;
And 'twixt his eyes a Nose did shine,
Bright as a red-hot Poker.

Were gunpowder put on his snout,
No flint it would require,
And steel, to make the sable grains
Flash off in sudden fire.

Thus when we see a nose so red,
It is as day-light clear,
That ruby nose is not maintain'd
On water or small beer.

Young Orson was a comely Youth,
Stout as an oaken tree :
A farm he had in Taunton Vale,
And money too had he.

Whene'er he spied a buxom Lass,
His chops began to water ;
And, as the Kites on Pigeons pounce,
The rogue was sure to patte her.

But he his neck to wedlock's yoke
Would not consent to bow.
Quoth he, "The man who milk can buy,
Should never keep a cow."

Of lovely Maids at least a score
Did rue his wanton tricks ;
A mournful band, a sable list,
Like Moles between cleft sticks.

Now at the table Boniface
And Orson sat them both,
While 'twixt the twain a pewter-pot
Did mantling foam with froth.

Now Orson raised the pewter pot,
And blew the froth away ;
And, having drunk, he smack'd his lips,
And cheerily did say :

" Old Boniface, thou'rt in the right ;
Thy taste is sound enough :
I wish my cellar now could boast
A tun of such rare stuff."

Sweet Ellen gave the pot with hands
That might with thousands vie ;
Her Face, like Veal, was white and red,
And sparkling was her eye :—

Her Shape the Poplar's easy form,
Her Neck the Lily's white,
Soft heaving, like the summer Wave,
And lifting rich delight ;

And o'er this neck of globe-like mould,
In ringlets waved her hair :
Ah, what sweet contrast for the eye,
The jetty and the fair !

Her Lips, like Cherries moist with dew,
So pretty, plump, and pleasing !
And, like the juicy Cherry too,
Did seem to ask for squeezing.

Yet Ellen modest was withal,
And kept her charms in order ;
For beauty is a dangerous gift,
And apt to breed disorder.

Yet what is beauty's use, alack !

To market can it go ?

Say, will it buy a loin of veal,

Or rump of beef? No, no.

Will Butchers say, " Choose what you please,

Miss Nancy and Miss Betty?"

Or Gardeners, " Take my beans and peas,

Because ye are so pretty?"

Too oft, alas ! a Daughter's charms

Increase a Parent's cares ;

For daughters and dead fish, we find,

Were never keeping wares.

Yet spotless was this Virgin's heart,

Quite spotless too her fame ;

And, if a Swain but kiss'd her neck,

It showed the blush of shame.

For once a saucy Oxford Youth

Dared kiss it to a Glow ;

How like the modest Blush of morn

Upon a hill of snow !

Yet blushes are exceeding scarce :

The great folk scorn to name 'em ;
Since Fashion, ruling with strong sway,
Has bid all Courts disclaim 'em.

Yes, yes ; a blush is vastly scarce :

Oh fie, oh fie upon't !
And when it glows, lo, Fashion calls
The virtue, mauvaise honte !

Oh ! can the great for modesty

Not care a single rush ?
Ah, never be a British Maid
A stranger to a blush !

Ah ! who can pierce the simple heart,

Give modesty a fear,
Raise with rude hands the burning blush,
And force the pearly tear ?

Yet there are Demons who delight

Her panting heart to wound,
Darken with Sorrow's cloud her eye,
And force the groan profound.

Ah wanton Fashion, thou loose Dame,
Who biddest every man see
The charms which darkness should conceal,
And man should only fancy!

The ancle, nay, the knee and thigh,
Are secrets now no more:
God bless us! every day, of each
A man may see a score.

The Bishop was not in the wrong,
But really in the right,
Who at the Opera saw such things
As shock'd his holy sight.

Yet some have said, yea, loudly said,
With many a scornful jeer:
"A poor old wither'd blinking fool,
What business had he there?

"If Bishops and their Wives will leave
Their church for wanton places,
'Tis rank hypocrisy to make
A set of prudish faces."

Now Orson's eyes forsook the pot,
And mark'd the Maid with fire;
For Ellen's fair and artless look
Did kindle high desire.

For beauty doth possess the charm,
To pull abroad men's eyes ;
And wake the wishes of the soul,
And bid the passions rise.

For why? Because 'tis Nature's plan,
The World should be supported ;
Therefore, wherever Beauty smiles,
It will be press'd and courted.

Thus amber doth attract the straws,
The loadstone draws the needle ;
And drawn too are the female heels
By tabor, pipe, and fiddle.

Now Orson whisper'd to himself,
“ Gadsbob ! if things go right,
With that nice Girl who gave the pot
I'll sleep this very night.”

O monstrous thought! O wicked wish!
O soul-destroying sin!
Yet for his soul (O graceless Youth!)
He did not care one pin.

Thus on the Dolphin's beauteous scale,
The Shark he opes his jaw;
Poor fish! who, ere he danger feels,
Is in the tyrant's maw.

Thus Spiders when they see a Fly,
How Bailiff-like they watch it!
And ere, poor imp, he thinks of harm,
The grimly rascals catch it.

CANTO II.

FAIR Ellen lived with Boniface,
Nor scorn'd her humble sphere ;
And with unsullied fame she drew
Her customers their beer.

How neat was Ellen in her dress !
As neat as a new pin.
By this she brought full many a pound
To Boniface's inn.

Thus Goldfinches, in fields well placed,
The distant birds engage ;
And, by their dainty forms and voice,
Invite them to their cage.

And thus the Pastry-cooks should do,
To sell their tarts and pies ;
Put in their shop some pretty Lass,
To hook-in passing eyes :—

For many a man, whose appetite
Desires nor pie nor tart,
May like to squeeze a charming Girl,
And ogle for her heart.

Nay, Milliners should do the same,
For custom if they hope ;
And many a trade beside should keep
A nice tit in the shop.

And let me own, in times of yore,
When Love was seldom quiet,
But quicken'd night and day my blood,
And bred a constant riot ;

I bought my garters and my gloves,
Wherever Beauty shone :
When Ugliness was in a shop,
I let that shop alone.

For Beauty may be well compar'd,
I think, unto a Hook ;
Which, baited with a lady-bird,
Draws fishes from the brook.—

Ellen was chaste as new-fall'n Snow,
And modest in her air ;
Unlike some Lasses, common known
As is a Barber's Chair.

Of goodly parents was she born ;
 But in disguise did rove,
 Because a Youth to her was false :
 She left her vale for love.

Six years she pass'd in servitude,
 At last forgot the sigh :
 Her Lover's image forced no more
 The pearl-drops from her eye.

Yet many a month she ceas'd to smile,
 And droop'd the languid head ;
 And many a lonely walk she took,
 The secret tear to shed.

“ Ah, happy birds !” she oft would sigh
 Amid the tuneful grove ;
 “ You bear no guile within your hearts,
You break no vows of love.

“ Alas ! 'tis man alone deceives :
He wins the witless heart ;
 Then meanly treads it in the dust,
 And triumphs in his art.”

Thus in her solitary walk
Would Ellen say and sigh ;
And then sweet ditties she would sing,
Of Maids for love that die :—

For Sorrow listens with fond ear
To Music's plaintive flow ;
Devours the sweetly dying strain,
And feeds on tales of woe.

The Parish Squire, though wedded he Unto a Lady fair,
Hath often at the Lion stopp'd,
On Ellen's charms to stare :—

For married eyes, if not well watch'd,
Are very apt to stray ;
For which some Ladies give their Lords
A lesson night and day ;—

And very properly, I wot ;
For eyes of married men
Should only on one object look,
Whereas they stare on ten.

A married man should winkers wear,
Like coach-horses and cart;
To rule the eyes, those squinting pimps
That oft seduce the heart:—

For so depraved our sex, I've known
A man deep read in books,
Who had a jewel of a Wife,
Yet kiss'd his greasy cooks:—

And, what did make it ten times worse,
T' increase his Lady's woes,
He kept the bastards of those Cooks
All underneath her nose;—

Who if she dared to speak or weep,
He instantly would kick her;
And oft (to use a Devonshire phrase)
The gentleman would lick her.

Ah! Matrimony, thou art like
To Jeremiah's Figs:
The good were very good, the bad
Too sour to give the pigs.

Now to fair Ellen to return.—

The Parson of the parish,
Although his mouth was most devout,
His eyes were oft vagarish :—

For oft on Boniface he call'd,
The news to ask or tell ;
Hoping his ale was fresh and good,
And that his hogs were well :—

And, were fair Ellen in the way,
He catechised the Maid ;
Hoping she always went to church,
And like a Christian pray'd :—

And gently would he squeeze her hand,
When nobody was near ;
And kindly pat her rosy cheek,
With many a holy leer :—

And when the Parson took a draught,
He did persuade the Lass
To wet her lovely lips, and leave
A kiss within the glass :—

For even the gravest of Divines
To Beauty's empire yield ;
And, spite of all their zeal and grace,
Old Nick hath won the field.

Lo ! Bishop Keppel felt the charm,
And waver'd from his duty :
Confirming once a nice young Maid,
He gave up God for Beauty ;

So press'd her head with amorous hand,—
When lo, two large black pins,
That slily lurk'd within her hair,
Attack'd him for his sins.

Deep in his flesh they urged their way ;
When, starting, the Divine
Exclaim'd, " God damn the head ! I think
The Girl's a porcupine."—

Old Snuffle too, the Parish-clerk,
Did sometimes call for ale ;
And knew not, when the Maid was near,
If mild it was or stale.

Of spectacles that rode his nose,
He wink'd through each horn'd glass ;
And, Goat-like, lick'd his watering lips,
That long'd to buss the Lass.

'Than o'er his Bible in the pew,
Of pounds I would lay ten,
Old Snuffle would much rather say
O'er Ellen's lips, "Amen."

The dullest eye can beauty see,
'Tis lightning on the sight ;
Indeed it is a general bait,
And man (the fish) will bite.

Now Boniface talk'd of Lord Rolle,
A Lord in fight so frisky ;
Who made an old Dame prisoner,
And took away her whisky :—

And eke on travelling corpses seiz'd,
As fierce as any Shark ;
And bullied, like a Thunder-storm,
The Parson and the Clerk *.

* Actually in Ireland, where his Lordship performed prodigies of valour.

And now they talk'd of Sunday schools,
Once deem'd a glorious thing;
Praised and supported by the Great,
Admired by Queen and King.

But now 'gainst Sunday schools, alack,
The Great Folk turn their faces;
For fear the poor, by learning, should
Grow wiser than their Graces.

For no great man indeed can bear
That man of low degree
Should read and write; since that poor man
May be as wise as he.

There is a lofty Dame call'd Pride,
With corns upon her toes;
On which the mob is apt to tread,
And very oft, God knows.

Now this high Dame companion is
Of Lords, and Dukes, and Kings;
And Duchesses, and eke of Queens,
Indeed, and such-like things.

And lo ! she whispers to the Great,
To keep themselves aloof ;
Nay, crush the Poor, like some sad Worm
Beneath a horse's hoof.

And lo ! the Great her counsel take,
And ears of poor folks crop ;
Nay, flog the poor at times (poor souls !)
As schoolboys flog a top.

Now of a Princess sweet they talk'd,
And pitied her hard fate.
“ O Lord ! O Lord ! ” said Boniface,
“ Heaven keep me from high state ! ”—

“ Poor Lady ! ” Orson pitying said,
“ I've seen her many a time ;
And seen the Baby too with tears,
And ask'd about her crime.

“ However people may invent,
Whatever folks shall say,
I won't believe ; but think her still
A jewel flung away.

“ Such sweetness never could offend ;
Then what’s her guilt ? I cried :
But folks seem’d all afraid to speak ;
And shook the head, and sigh’d.”

Then Ellen said, “ I would not be
A Princess, for the world.”—
“ Thou’rt more,” quoth Orson ; “ or may I
To Old Nick’s house be hurl’d !

“ Thou art a Queen,” exclaims the Youth ;
And for a kiss he starts.—
“ Who ? I !” rejoin’d the astonish’d Maid.—
“ Yes, thou ; the queen of hearts.”

The Maid received the Youth’s salute
With such a modest air,
As though from Mistress Stevenson’s*,
The Empress of Queen-square.—

Now, gentle Reader, with thy leave,
I’ll rest my tuneful tongue ;
And shun of Nightingales the fate,
Who die by too much song.

* A Lady who keeps a Boarding-school.

CANTO III.

AND now they talk'd of good great men,
Who by their merits rise :
When Bishop Porteus was the theme ;
Great, though of little size :—

Who, though before the Chancellor
He humbly bore the mace,
Did at the last a mitre wear ;
Such friends are Faith and Grace.

Now Boniface did loud exclaim,
For wondrous proud was he :
“ D’ye know that this same Bishop’s Wife
No better was than me ?

“ No better, though the lofty Wife
Of this most grand Divine !
Her father did an alehouse keep,
No better, man, than mine.

“ There Madame Porteus, a young Maid,
Did draw the ale and beer ;
And drew good customers, ’tis said,
Indeed from far and near :—

“ When Parson Porteus trudged that way
 (Now see how things may hap) ;
And, sweating, took a pint of stout
 From this young Maiden’s tap.

“ Now Love within the pewter pot,
 So wondrous is his art,
Lurk’d sly; and, as the Parson swill’d,
 Slipp’d down into his heart.

“ At once he glowed with furious flame,
 And eyed the comely she ;
And very soon he squeez’d her hand,
 For wounded much was he.

“ Thus, when the Linnet flies to drink
 To some fair crystal spring,
By lime-twigs quickly is he caught,
 And cannot move a wing.

“ Now soon as the young Girl’s Papa
 The courtship did explore,
He took them by the shoulders both,
 And shoved them to the door.

“ As Adam and his dearest Eve
Left Eden with a tear ;
So Porteus with his Sweetheart left
The tap-room and the beer.

“ Forth wander’d they in homely plight,
Grieved that their plan miscarried ;
But soon, in spite of poverty,
The loving pair were married.

“ Nor proud is Mistress Porteus now,
Though lofty is her lot ;
For glad is she old friends to see,
And eke a pewter pot.”

Thus ended Boniface : and now
They talk’d of Hannah More ;
Whose fame the Bishop’s trumpet sounds,
That makes a mighty roar.

Then on each other they did wink,
Which thus might be translated :
“ Some people may a mitre wear,
And yet be shallow-pated.”

And now they praised the Bishop's care;
Who makes it all his pride
To see the Clergy well behave,
And on their cures reside :—

For, lo ! the Bishop finds it hard,
Unto their cures to pull 'em ;
Though he, good man, for reasons wise,
Doth seldom preach at Fulham.

“ I fear some Bishops are in fault,”
Quoth Boniface, and sigh'd :
“ They are a proud and haughty set.”—
“ Too true,” the Youth replied :

“ Over poor Curates' backs, alas,
How Jehu-like they drive !
And, Lord ! how these old Drones will suck
The honey of the hive !”—

Of Dame Religion now they talk'd,
Beloved by each Divine ;
Who thinks their wealthy Patroness
All in a deep decline.

To bring her back to health again,
Of recipes a score
Good Doctor Porteus jointly wrote
With Parson Hannah More :—

For, lo ! the Dame with these great folk
Has always been in favour ;
For which they both for her would fight,
And risk their all to save her.

Most grossly was she used in France ;
Most cruelly, alack !
Her pockets pick'd, and her best clothes
All pilfer'd from her back.

The French swore, she a bastard was
Of some old canting friar ;
And from her childhood known to be
A hypocrite and liar.

Her rings they robb'd, and diamonds too ;
Her gold they stole by tons ;
With which they shot and powder bought,
Swords, muskets, and great guns.

Not only this indeed was done
By this same rabble rout ;
They broke the bones of Saints, and kick'd
The saintesses about.

Such was their treatment by the mob,
Such rage did Hell inspire :
If gold, they coin'd them ; and, if wood,
They put them in the fire :—

Old jawbones of the sainted tribes,
Old teeth, old nails, old noses,
Old toes, old shoes ; that wonders work'd,
As every one supposes :—

Old wigs, and night-caps, gowns, and rags,
Spoon, trencher, knife and fork ;
Pap-spoon, and frying-pan, and spit,
That many a marvel work.

“ Religion was a gentle Maid,”
Quoth Boniface agen,
“ In the year one ; but since, she's spoil'd
By wicked artful men.

“ The Bishops taught her to be proud,
And heap of wealth a store ;
To paint her cheeks, and wear the garb
Of some sad tawdry whore.

“ I think she is too well dress’d out
By every great Divine.”—

“ Indeed,” quoth Orson with a sigh,
“ I think she goes too fine.”—

Of Peter Pindar now they talk’d,
Who so divinely sings ;
Renown’d from pole to pole for Odes,
And compliments to Kings.

Then, raptured, on his Works they dwelt,
And on his high pretension ;
Lamenting much he had not got
From Majesty a pension :—

While parasites, and pimps to Lords,
Enjoyed their wealth and state ;
Though he, poor soul, did make wry mouths
Upon an empty plate.

On which they sagely did remark,
That slight was Merit's meed ;
And that the Sun, for one fair flow'r,
Did foster many a weed.

" I have his Works," quoth Boniface,
" This moment in the house.
Pray, Farmer, did you ever read
His poem on a Louse?

" And Apple Dumplings, and choked Sheep,
The Pilgrims and the Peas ;
The Brick-kiln, Brewhouse, Parson Young,
And Songs that ladies please?"—

" This Great Man's poems I have read ;
Yes, over, Sir, and over,"
Quoth Orson, with a wink and smile
That pleasure did discover.

" But then," said he, and gave a shrug,
" Some Aldermen and May'r
Swore that his impudence is such,
It bristled up their hair :—

“ Said that he grins too much at Courts,
And never would refrain ;
And, in respect of titled folk,
Was wicked as Tom Paine.

“ They call’d him every name that’s bad,
Turk, Infidel, and Jew ;
And wanted, when thy burnt his books,
To burn the author too.”—

“ O shameful Aldermen and May’r,
To burn so sweet a Bard !”
Cried Boniface : “ alas ! alas !
’Twas very, very hard.

“ The Justice too, I do suppose,
Did hate him from his marrow ;
And with as much good will would shoot
The poet, as a sparrow.

“ I hope this wondrous Man of Verse
Is steel’d with resolution ;
As virtuous people in all times
Have suffer’d persecution.”—

And now they talk'd of one George Rose ;
Who, born in low estate,
Did mount to worship and to wealth :
So very blind is Fate.

Of George's mother then they talk'd,
Her hut, and dirty geer ;
And said, that George allow'd his dam
But thirty pounds a year :—

Poor crone ! who swore she would have more ;
Or, lo ! his pride to sting,
She'd run to London in her rags,
And show them to the King.

But George disliketh much to hear
About his Scottish home :
Thus scabby heads, the proverb says,
For ever hate a comb.—

And now of Hawkesbury they talk'd,
Who wrote in mags for hire ;
Whose works, till in the chimney put,
Ne'er felt one spark of fire.

Of taxes now they talk'd, and curs'd
The Emperor o'er and o'er;
And then on Paul they pour'd some gall,
And very loudly swore.

"The Game Laws too," quoth Boniface,
"Provoke me to the quick:
We must not knock a pheasant down,
Although 'tis with a stick.

"Curse on the Justices (the thieves),
That send a man to jail
For touching, with an inch of gun,
A partridge or a quail;—

"Who threat my licence too to take,
And ding, and huff, and vapour,
Because I won't be humm'd, and buy
George Rose's stupid Paper *!"—

• Which of the two Papers is meant by Boniface, we cannot ascertain; as the Sun was accustomed to lick up the leavings of the poor dead or dying True Briton, and disgorge for the benefit of the Public. Either of those Newspapers, therefore, may be alluded to by the Landlord; as their respective merits are rather beneath the dignity of criticism. We must say indeed, that every exertion has been made, particularly by the Post Office, to cram their trash down

Now talk'd they of the Princesses
Elizabeth and Mary,
Whose taste in all the polish'd arts
Is most extraordinary:—

Then of the sweetness of their looks,
Their manners all so mild;
That win, where'er they pass, the heart
Of man, and maid, and child.

And let me also join my praise,
Before I further sing:
The Muse with rapture oft hath mark'd
The Daughters of the King;—

And, if her voice could pour a strain
To yield their hearts delight,
Lo! all Parnassus with their names
Should ring from morn to night.

the throats of the nauseating people of England. A Newspaper is made the test of our political principles. Is the Morning Post, or the Courier, or the Morning Chronicle, called for, the man is branded with the odious name of jacobin. Yet who reads of a defeat in the ministerial hirelings? Pæans are for ever sung: British laurels neither decrease nor fade—all alive and blooming! Victory attends the chariot of every British Mars; and the fool's cap which the conquering and contemptuous enemy now and then clapped on the heads of some of our Generals, has been, by the hocus pocus of a misrepresenting Newspaper, converted into a triumphal crown.

CANTO IV.

Now Negress Night came solemn down,
To put to roost the fowls ;
To bid her bats a hunting go,
And likewise all her owls.

And eke she oped the dreary tombs,
T' enjoy her spectre-races ;
Unlocking Ghosts, to frighten folk
With shrouds and mealy faces.

And now amid the hags and owls,
And gliding Spectres pale,
Mute Silence, with her feet in felt,
Did stalk from vale to vale.

The birds their thatch and bushes sought,
Forsaking trees and springs ;
To hide their slumbering heads beneath
Those downy quilts, their wings.

Now Darkness, with her pinions black,
All waving wide outspread,
Moved solemn ; and, with Horror join'd,
Did wrap the World in shade.

Now Theft and Murder sly stole forth
From caves of dread and death,
In quest of damned deeds, to roam
The wild and spectred heath :—

To meet some Wanderer of the shade,
And make his life their food ;
To seize his throat with ruffian grasp,
And plunge their knives in blood.

And now amid the London streets,
Poor outcasts from their home,
The female bands, ah ! lost to fame,
(Sweet beauty's wrecks !) did roam.

For these, let Pity heave the sigh,
And Prudery stay her rage ;
And rather curse seducing pimps,
The Giffords of the age :—

Who prowl where innocence appears,
And watch for beauty's smile ;
To tear the rose-bud from its bed,
Then stamp it in the soil.

Now artfully, with rueful face,
Did Orson, cunning spark,
Step to the door, and cry, "It rains;
And, Lord! how dismal dark!

"And then the wind it is so high
That I can scarcely stand:
And all the Sky's like Murder black;
I cannot see my hand."—

"Sleep here, my friend," the Landlord said:
"A bed, but not of flocks,
Is thine; of feathers nice and soft,
Pick'd all from hens and cocks.

"Fine too the Sheets, like Lilies white,
And warm too is the rug;
And trust me that it has not got
A single flea or bug.

"A little supper we will have;
And, if I'm not mistaken,
Thou likest meat: now what dost say,
My friend, to eggs and bacon?"

To which the smiling Youth replied,
 “ I’m vastly fond of hog ;
And, when ’tis fried with eggs, I vow
 I know no prettier prog.”

Now Ellen, with a knife so keen,
 To slice the flesh began ;
And then she broke twelve new-laid eggs,
 And put them in the pan.

But, growing warm, against the hog
 The Eggs unpleasant mutter’d ;
While, waxing hotter, ’gainst the eggs
 The Hog with fury sputter’d .

Alas, how much like Man and Wife !
 (What pity such things be !)
Who at each other fiercely spit,
 And often disagree.

The eggs and bacon soon were fried,
 And placed upon the table ;
When Orson and the Landlord ate
 As much as they were able.

And now the merry mug went round,
And many a tale they told ;
And many a wanton joke they crack'd ;
Some new, and others old.

While Ellen, busy at her work,
Seem'd not one word to hear ;
But not a serious word, or joke,
Escaped the Maiden's ear.

For where is she, the Maid, I wot,
'Mongst high or humble folk,
That liketh not a merry tale,
Nor yet a wanton joke ?

Now Boniface to Orson said,
" As we no longer munch,
Suppose, my friend, with this our ale,
We take a glass of punch ?"

To which the Youth did answer make,
" Dear friend, with all my heart ;
And Ellen shall the lemons squeeze,
And likewise take a part.

“ And Ellen too with us shall sit,
And take her cheerful glass ;
For what are meat and drink, and life,
Without a charming Lass ?”

Now Ellen did the lemons squeeze,
The sugar put and rum in ;
And made what even a King would call
A bowl of liquor humming.

“ Landlord,” quoth Orson, “ with your leave,
And Ellen’s too I mean,
I’ll take a kiss from her nice lips,
That would adorn a Queen.”—

“ Aye,” cried the Landlord, “ kiss her, man ;
She’s sweeter than the rose :
A kiss can do no mighty harm ;
So, Girl, hold up thy nose.”

Then from those cherries of delight
He kisses took a score ;
And, but for decency, the rogue
Had ravish’d twenty more.

For Kisses are the Food of Love,
Well known in every nation ;
And such a dainty dish, indeed,
Will ne'er be out of fashion.

And Ladies' lips the out-works I
To Ladies' hearts may call :
Soon as the first are storm'd, the last
Most naturally will fall.

" Now sing a song," said Boniface,
" Thy best, and do not grudge it."—
" Yes, that I will," the Youth replied ;
" I've many in my budget."

Then Orson oped his throat, and sang,
Both loud, and sweet, and clear,
A song that much the Landlord charm'd,
And caught fair Ellen's ear.

SONG,

BY ORSON.

I own I am fickle: to Phyllida's ear

I first told the story of love;

Kiss'd her hand, press'd her lip, with what ardour sincere!

And declared that I never would rove.

But my sighs were scarce breathed, when Chloe tripp'd
by:

The Nymph was no longer my boast;

From Phyllida's beauty away went the sigh,

And my heart to sweet Chloe was lost.

Could I dream of a change, when Chloe was mine?

"No, no," I a thousand times swore;

"My heart cannot rove from a Girl so divine:

No, no, it will wander no more."

But Fate, who delighted to laugh at the Swain,

Presented a Damsel more fair:

My heart, the sad rogue, turn'd inconstant again,

And sigh'd to Corinna his pray'r.

“With Corinna,” I swore, “every hour must be blest ;
These eyes shall no other pursue :”—
When again, to alarm with new tumults my breast,
Thou, Sylvia, beam’dst full on my view.

But, Sylvia, I’m sure thou hast nothing to fear,
That my heart for another can pine ;
Since, to make it a traitor, a Girl must appear
Whose beauty is equal to thine.

“ Now sing thy song,” the lark-like Youth
To Boniface did say ;
When Boniface most loudly sung
This merry roundelay :—

SONG,

BY BONIFACE.

TOPER, drink, and help the house ;
Drink to every honest fellow :
Life was never worth a louse
To the man who ne’er was mellow.

How it sparkles ! here it goes :

Ale can make a blockhead shine ;

Toper, torch-like may thy nose

Light thy face up, just like mine !

See old Sol : I like his notion,

With his whiskers all so red ;

Sipping, drinking from the ocean,

Boozing till he goes to bed.

Yet poor beverage to regale !

Simple stuff, to help his race !

Could he turn the Sea to Ale,

How 'twould make him mend his pace !

Now Boniface to Ellen said,

“ Now for thy roundelay.”

The Damsel blush'd, and hemm'd, and blush'd,

And then she sung away.

SONG,

BY ELLEN.

ADIEU to the grotto and glade !
Adieu to the song of the grove !
Since Colin is gone from the shade,
Adieu to the valley of Love !

When a garland he wove for my hair,
When he gave me his hand at the stile,
How buxom and sweet was the air !
How the fields were all clothed with a smile !

But Nature seems changed, to my mind ;
The fields are all dark on my eye ;
Each Song is a Dirge on the wind,
And the flowers seem all drooping to die.

All alone must I wander at morn ;
And lonely at eve, a poor ghost ;
While each object around me forlorn,
Will pity the peace I have lost.

Then ask me not, Virgins, to stay :
With a sigh seems the zephyr to blow ;
And the runlet that murmurs away,
To wind with a murmur of woe.

O ye Virgins, O Shepherds, farewell !
I wander, in secret to pine.
May Content be the guest of your cell,
Who has long been a stranger to mine !

The Youth upon her tuneful lips
Did full of rapture glote ;
And seem'd so pleased, as though he could
Have galloped down her throat.

He look'd and sigh'd, and sigh'd and look'd
With longing wishful eye ;
And felt his heart all fluttering beat,
And guess'd the reason why.

For who can see the lovely Maid,
And feel not sweet desire ?
With him may Life's fair prospects fade,
And Hope itself expire !

The clock, the crier shrill of time,
That tick'd behind the door,
Now with his hammer struck the bell
Twelve times, and lo ! no more.

And now the fire was all put out,
Which Boniface did water ;
For fear a spark might burn the house,
And make a serious matter :—

For fire, permitted once to rule,
Consumeth all it handles ;
Even from the palaces of Kings,
Down to a pound of candles.

The cat amid the ashes purr'd
(For purs to cats belong) ;
While chimney-minstrels, crickets call'd,
Did join Grimalkin's song.

O gentle Crickets ! to your airs
I've listen'd o'er and o'er.
O lucky imps ! where'er ye dwell,
That house is never poor.

Old Towzer too lay stretch'd along,
And yelping much did keep ;
And with his trembling joints did chase
The rabbits in his sleep :—

Eager he seem'd to hunt indeed
The nibblers to their holes :
Thus dogs can dream like gentlemen,
Although they have no souls.

Now Boniface said, “ Sir, good night,”
And shook young Orson's fist.
“ Good night,” again young Orson said,
And then he Ellen kiss'd ;—

And on her pouting lip he left
A thousand wanton wishes :
“ Good night,” quoth he, “ fair Maid, whose eyes
Eclipse thy pewter dishes.”

Yes, 'twas a kiss, a kiss indeed !
A very wanton kiss ;
Which seem'd upon her mouth to say,
“ I long for higher bliss.”

CANTO V.

Now as he kiss'd her, on her neck

A golden cross he spied.

“Who gave thee this?” the starting Youth,
All fraught with wonder, cried.

“A young man gave me this,” quoth she,
And then she dropp'd a tear ;

“A youth who won my heart away,
And still to me is dear :—

“But riches forced him from these arms,
And men do wealth adore ;
And thus he left my heart to pine,
For I was rather poor.

“A Damsel of a great estate
Did steal his heart away ;
At which I left my native vale,
For there I could not stay.

“For who can stand the scoffs and jeers,
That bitter flow like gall ?
So, when I lost my Sweetheart's love,
Alas ! I lost my all.

“ Where now he lives, God only knows :
Five years it is and more,
That here in Hampshire I have dwelt,
And here my loss deplore.

“ Methought, Sir, when the mug of beer
This very night I drew,
That Orson, whom I thought my own,
Did much resemble you.

“ My heart so beat, my head turn’d round ;
My eyes both misty taken :
I almost dropp’d the frying-pan,
With all the eggs and bacon.”—

“ My Ellen sweet,” the Youth replied,
And hugg’d her to his heart ;
“ Behold that Orson thou hast lost,
And we will never part.

“ I am not married : no, my Dear ;
To marry I am free :
And I have search’d half England through,
To gaze again on thee.

“ But thou wert gone the Lord knows where,
And wert not to be found;
But all the neighbours said with sighs,
Thou certainly wert drown'd. ”—

“ O Orson dear ! ” the Maid replied,
“ And am I in thy arms ? ”—
“ Thou art, thou art, ” the Youth rejoin'd,
And closely press'd her charms.

“ How was't I knew thee not ? ” quoth she.—
Quoth he, “ I wasn't so big;
And now thou seest I wear my hair,
And then I wore a wig. ”—

“ Ah me ! I recollect, ” quoth she,
“ Full well thy natty bob ;
And then I only wore my hair,
And now I wear a mob. ”—

“ Sweet Ellen, ” cried the raptured Youth,
“ The reason now is plain :
The mob and ribbon are the cause
I knew thee not again.

“ I think that thou art taller grown,
Thy shape’s so nice and clever ;
And, without compliment, thou art
A prettier girl than ever.

“ Landlord, behold the girl for whom I’ve hunted round and round.”—
“ Gadsbob,” cried Boniface, “ what luck !
The lost sheep then is found.”

To tell the joys of both their hearts,
Would puzzle my poor pen ;
But lo, they kiss’d, and sigh’d, and kiss’d,
And kiss’d and sigh’d agen.

And now they did a sixpence break,
In plight of mutual troth ;
While Boniface, with happy looks,
Did smile upon them both.

“ Well, now, good folks,” quoth Boniface,
“ I’ll leave you, if ye choose,
To tell your tale, while I go take
A comfortable snooze.”

Thus having said, old Boniface
March'd, hobbling, off to bed ;
And put a good red night-cap on,
Of yarn, about his head.

Night-caps of different stuff are made ;
Of different colours too :
Of flannel, and of cotton, some ;
Some yellow, and some blue.

Sleep is an article we want,
Although it looks like death ;
Since all from mortals seems retired,
Except it be the breath.

How often have I said and thought,
Lost in reflection deep,
“ What pity 'tis, since life's so short,
To spend one half in sleep !

“ But then,” quoth I unto myself,
“ Sleep calms the folks that fret ;
Is kind to souls with hungry maws,
And people much in debt.

“Nay, sleep has this advantage too,
It goodly feasts doth make ;
And furnisheth rare food in dreams,
We cannot find awake.”

Now Orson with his Ellen sat,
The Damsel on his knee ;
No loving couple in the world
Were blest like he and she.

And now they smiled, and told old tales
That happen'd when they courted ;
Together when to fairs they went,
And danced, and played, and sported.

Time stole most happily away :
While Boniface, above,
Lay senseless snoring, they below,
Alive, were making love.

Now Morning from her clouded east
Did through the window peep
Upon the playful loving pair,
Whose eyes look'd not for sleep :—

For they were otherwise employed,
In ogling soft desire;
In telling stories of the heart,
And fanning Love's sweet fire.

Their eyelids did not once pick straws,
And wink, and sink away :
No, no ; they were as brisk as Bees,
And amorous things did say:—

For eyes are eloquent, though mute ;
They speak all sorts of tongues :
Such very cunning things are eyes ;
Such power to them belongs.

Now Ellen unto Orson said,
“ Retire, my friend, to rest ;
Thou with thy journey must be tired :
And I will seek my nest.”—

“ Ah ! Ellen, I feel no fatigue,”
Said Orson with a smile :
“ I am this moment fresh as though
I had not rid a mile.

“ ’Tis thou hast given me spirits gay,
And made my heart so light :
Well, Ellen, now I think ’tis time
Indeed to bid good night.”

And now he took her in his arms,
And said, “ Good night, my Dear :”—
When Ellen said “ Good night” again,
And dropp’d the tenderest tear.

It was a tear, a precious tear,
More worth than diamonds bright ;
For love and friendship form’d the drop,
That charm’d young Orson’s sight.

As down her cheek this pearl did flow,
Young Orson, mad with bliss,
Quick to her cheek his lips applied,
And caught it with a kiss.

Then gallantly the young man said,
And swore of oaths a round :
“ That pearl of thine, my lovely Girl,
Shall never kiss the ground.

“ O dearest Ellen ! mind my words,
And mind I tell thee true :
Wherever that bright gem had dropp'd,
The ground had been Peru.

“ But I will go, since 'tis thy wish :
My Angel fair, good night ;
Sweet dreams to thee, my only Dear ;
Aye, dreams of rich delight.”—

“ Sweet dreams unto my friend also,”
With sweetest smiles said she.—
“ Ah, then of Ellen I must dream,”
With gallantry said he.

And now they both retired to rest,
Both bidding soft farewell ;
And which was happiest in their dreams,
Is difficult to tell.

Now Sol had mounted up the sky
A pair of yards at least,
When from their beds the couple sprung,
And very soon were drest.

To breakfast down they happy came,
With Boniface likewise ;
Who stretch'd his limbs, and yawn'd, and gaped,
And open'd both his eyes :—

For Boniface's eyes had long
The winks of Love forgot ;
Preferring to the fairest Maid,
A foaming Pewter Pot.

To tea and toast down sat they all ;
And not long after tarried,
Before they went before the Priest,
And happily were married,

“ And now,” said Boniface with glee,
“ You shall not go away :
A sumptuous dinner I will give,
In honour of the day.”

Now goose and turkey came, and hare,
And apple-pie and custard ;
And chicken and asparagus,
And Yorkshire ham, and mustard :—

And friends, invited to partake,
Did from the village come :
Of different ages were they all ;
Some young, and aged some.

Within the house did mirth resound ;
Without, with cheerful ray,
Sol pour'd his radiance on the roof,
And all the world was gay.

The chirping Sparrows came in flocks,
And Linnets with a tune ;
And round in merry gambols flew,
To hail the honey-moon.

The Wrens delighted cock'd their tails,
And twitter'd many an air ;
While Redbreasts, trilling, through the panes
Peep'd in upon the pair.

And eke the Pigeons, birds of love,
Did sport upon the thatch ;
And coo'd and bill'd, and flapp'd their wings,
In honour of the match.

No happier hours were known, so swift
The moments took their flight ;
'Twas laugh and song, and jibe and joke,
And stories of delight.

At night, all slily, from their friends
The couple stole away ;
Which night, if I don't much mistake,
Was happier than the day.—

God prosper long the married state,
And give it every bliss ;
And may we kiss the Nymphs we please,
And please the Nymphs we kiss !

NEW-OLD BALLADS.

WRITTEN BY QUEEN ELIZABETH, DURING HER IMPRISONMENT
AT WOODSTOCK.

AH ! woe is mee, who sighe forlorne,
Sith woe has fixed depe his thorne
In thys poor harte.

The Milkmaid's songe, when Morne doeth smyle,
And Phebus gildeth fielde and style,
Doth greefe emparte.

I envy Birdes that cleave the skye ;
“ Ye live in freedom, imps,” I sighe,
Then droppe a teare :
And eke I cast an envious looke
Upon the little babbling brooke
That runneth neare.

Like the swete brooke I wish to flee
From fielde to fielde in merry glee ;
But my poore harte doth pant in vayne
To joine the Milkmayde on the plaine,

Who seemes so blest.

Dispayre approaches, and thus cryes :

“ To Freedom cease to turne thine eyes,

Sith I'm thy guest.”

O drear companion ! ah, most drear !

Whose voice is horror to mine ear.

TO THE GLASS.

GIVE me the Glasse that felt her lippe,

And happy, happy, shall I sippe ;

And, when is fled the daintie wyne,

Something remaineth still divyne.

Heaven's dewes that on the flowers doe falle,

Make them to smyle, and fayre withal ;

And thus the dewe of her sweet kisse

Doth bathe my heart with balmy blisse :—

But dewes to vapoure flye awaye,

While her rich fragrance lasts for aye.

J. D.

TO THE DAISIE.

O MODEST Flower! thou tellest of the Springe:

Welcome unto this little fielde of myne!

With joy I see thee from the green earth springe,

And smiling in thy silvery vesture shine.

Ay! nought disturbeth thy fayre tender frame;

Zephyrus kisseth thee, and tastes thy sweet:

Thou dost not chide the wanton rogue, nor blame,

Nor biddest him sighe lowly at thy feet.

Agayne he whispereth love; and now agayne

He tasteth of thy honey'd leaves, and sighs:

And, though he wantons, thou dost not complayne;

Thy little snowy bosom nought denyes.

O gentle Daisie! speak to her I love,

When she doeth come, and casteth lookes on thee;

Persuade her my pure passion to approve,

And not with coldness from her Shepheard flee:

But imitate thy ways; and learne thy smyle,

When I, like Zephyrus, doe press her cheke.

Then may no tempest rude thy form defyle,

And of thy snowy beauties make a wreck!

A PRAISE OF FAYRE GERALDINE.

BY LORD SURREY.

I SIGHE mournfullè for Geraldine,
For lovelie Geraldine I playne;
And oft I wish her harte was mine:
But vaine are sighes, and teares are vaine.

But she perchaunce mote cruel be,
And slighten of Cupid the bande,
Because she may not fynde a he
That meriteth her lilled hande.

Ah me! sith none but such may woove,
And turne to her with hope his eyes;
Far hence Fayre Geraldine must goe,
And seek a Lover in the skyes.

BALLADE OF LOVE.

THOU art the Loadsterre of my Love,
Which Love doth many tempests fynde;
But thou canst all the stormes remove,
And whisper calme unto my mynde:

Thy balmy breath can fille the sayle,
And bless me with a prosperous gale.

But no, for this I may not hope ;
On rocks thou doomest me to mourne :
My Vessel, without maste or rope,
All on the black rock piecemeal torne :
And there, I wis, without a sighe,
Thou lettest my poore Vessel lye.

But if thy smile would fix on me,
A safe porte then my Shippe may fynde ;
Then Phebus' beams break out I see,
And leave the tossing waves behinde.
With jocund heart then I do prove,
Thou art the Loadsterre of my Love.

BALLADE OF GRIEF.

I KNOW not joy, when far from thee ;
For thou art all the world to me :
Then come away.
Though thou art farre, yet Love's swift darte,
For ever flying, wounds my harte
From day to day.

I seeke to slepe away the hours ;
But thy image my calme devours,
And kepes me waking :
And when, alack ! I close myne eye,
I starte, and with keene anguish sighe,
“ Thou’rt me forsaking.”

Then come, fayre Mayde, and with thee bringe,
In thy twin cheeks, the blossom’d Springe,
And Sommer’s gold
In thy twin eyes ; that I may find
The Sommer’s beam within my mind,
Not Winter’s cold.

THE PETITION OF THE LOVER.

AH ! say not “No” unto my pray’r,
For I have loved thee full long ;
To these twin eyes thou art most fayre,
Surpassing praise of sweetest song.
Then say not “No” unto my pray’r,
But be so kynde as thou art fayre.

Why art thou with rare beauty blest ?
Only to bless mankynde, I wiss ;
Not for to robbe the harte of rest,
But fill it with a sea of blisse.

Then say not "No" unto my pray'r,
But be so kynde as thou art fayre.

The Sunne was made to warme the earthe,
And plenty make, and kepe off blite;
So should thy Beauty's Sunne give birthe
To our souls' harvests of delyte.
Then say not "No" unto my pray'r,
But be so kynde as thou art fayre.

ON AN INCONSTANT.

THOSE peerless lips are both forsworne;
Those lips that roses' blooms adorn,
Ah, too deceiving fayre!
I thought no guile upon thy tongue;
I thought that mouth could say no wrong,
Nor lay for hearts a snare.

But now I see thy vaine, vaine mind;
And now thy cruelty I find,
That taketh pride in woe:
In every sigh thy guile I hear,
And see my wrongs in every tear
Which Sorrow bids to flow.

Where'er I go, I hear thy name ;
And hear fierce Anger cry out "Shame !"

On beauty so renown'd.

Know, beauty was design'd for joy ;

Which thou dost cruelly employ

To give the world a wound.

THE LOVER'S PITTYE.

My Lute, who makedst sweetest sound,

Awake thee now, alack ! to playne ;

Sith my poore harte doth feel a wound,

And never may rejoice again.

Oh ! let thy sounds with my sighs flow,

For her who lies in deth below.

O Lute ! how jocund was thy voice

When she did make thy chords rejoice,

When roses blushed on her cheek !

But now that she in deth lies pale,

Thy voice must tell a doleful tale,

And every harte with sorrow breake.

My Lute, thou must no more be gladde ;

But tune to dying straines and sadde,

And think no more of jouissance.
Griefe openeth of myne eyes the springes ;
And oft my teares will wet thy stringes,
And make thee mourne our dread mischance.

Then list to me, my favourite Lute :
Be sadde, or lye for ever mute.

TO A FLY.

BY THE PRINCESS ELIZABETH, IN PRISON.

THOU little animal, I wiss,
Thou seemest me a child of bliss ;
And runnest, fleest here and there,
Withoute a pang, and eke a tear :
While, borne to thinke of scepters, I
Do envy thee, thou little Fly.

Fortune doth make small giftes to me ;
But, what is mine, I give to thee :
The bread, the wine, upon my boarde,
I yield to thee with much accorde.
Come when thou list, and to thy mynde
Thou something to thy taste shall fynde.

Though gladde thou friskest to and fro,
Thy life, poor worme, is shorte, I know ;

A little while thy legs outspread,
I see thee on the table ded :
And, while thou art at peace, I wail,
And think on thy lyfe's little tale.

But while thou canst my crumbs enjoy,
Thou here may hum without annoy ;
Runne here and there, and spread thy wing,
And with thy own companions sing.
Though man be cruel unto me,
My hand shall give delyte to thee.

ON THE FAYRE GERALDYNE.

GOE, Muse, to Hunsdon, and espye
What giveth to myne harte a sighe ;
And yet to every other harte
Bright floodes of joyance doeth emparte.

There may thou see a Sunne, that cloude
Didde never yet with darkness shroude ;
And, straunge, no mortals on that Sunne
Withouten hurte may looke uponne.

Now, Ladye Muse, should it be so,
Thou doest not this my Loadsterre knowe,

Goe unto Hunsdon, caste thyne eien
On all the world's Fayre Geraldyn.

THE BRENNED MOTH,

A BALLADE.

AN, silly Moth! what hast thou done?
To such mishap why didst thou runne?
Brent be thy legges, and eke thy wings;
And Fate doth pierce thee with his stings.

What folly could thy mynde perswade,
To leave thy fields of dew and shade;
Where Glow-worms light, with lanterns sheen,
The little elves that prounce the green?

There mightest thou, on pennons light,
Enjoy the silence of mute night;
And flicker hill and vale around,
Withoute a foe, withoute a wound.

Poor Fly!—But why thy folly blame?
We wiser mortals act the same:
On mad ambitious fires we gaze,
And, doating, perish in the blaze.

WYATT TO BRYAN,

FROM HIS PRISON.

THE Summer of my Hope is ded,
 Whyche made my daies so passing fayre :
 Now Hope no more may lift her hed,
 Sore chill'd by Wynter of Despayre.

But, Bryan, my dark prison-doore
 Doth boast of lyght when thou dost come ;
 Syth Frenshipp's Sun hath beames a store,
 To make a Palace of a Tombe.

Then come, and Frenshipp's beame yspred ;
 And I'll forget that Hope is ded.

WYATT TO POINS,

IN PRAISE OF LIBERTY.

To cawle in Courtes, is bondage harde ;
 For who ychooseth chaines, I wot ?
 Yet some, for pleasures of rewarde,
 Wil flatter, and blow colde and hot.

But Liberty will I emlore,
 Though Poverty knock at my doore.

What be our wants?—some thinges, not all.

Contentment lyeth not in heaps :

Who hath a littel field, though small,

It grete is if enough he reaps.

Then Liberty will I emlore,

Though Poverty knock at my doore.

SIR T. WYATT.

Retired to the Country, to Arlington, where he passed a Life of Tranquillity, he despised Harry the Eighth's Court.—Wyatt boasts of his Liberty.

FREE am I nowe ; I Courtes do follow not,

But myne own pleasure dayly I persue :

I aske aboute no Courtiers ; no, God wot,

Sith I to Courtes have bidden longe adieu :

For, when at Courtes, on hands and knees they crawl,

Like whipped Dogs, and be for aye in thrall.

When Morne doth glister, oft bayte I myne hook,

And forthe I go the river's bank besyde ;

And there I privilye do searche the brooke,

And trye if Fish unneath the surface glyde.

And often do I bringe them to the lande,

And then unhooke them with a happy hande.

She whome I love, doth sumtime straye,
 And sees me dragge the prisoner from the floude;
 And that it is most cruelle, she doth saye,
 To spille of little Fish the harmless bloode.
 "Eche little Fish," she telleth with a teare,
 "Which thou dost kille, perchaunce hath got his Dere."

And oft she pulleth a Fish from my hande,
 And putteth him agayne into the brooke;
 Sayinge, "Go, Fishe, thyne liberty commande;
 And learne t'avoide, poor foole, the hyden hooke."
 And then she smylinge doth a moral fynde;
 And lykeneth Fish betray'd, to Womankynde.

A BALLADE OF PRAYER,

BY SIR JAMES MELVILLE.

ADDRESSED TO QUEEN ELIZABETH, ON HIS PRESUMING TO LISTEN
 PRIVATELY TO HER MAJESTY WHILE SHE PLAYED ON THE VIR-GINALS: DELIVERED BY LORD HUNSDON.

OH! in your gracious goodnesse, deigne
 To pardon mee, most mighty Queene,
 Who dared (not to be forgiven)
 To heare on Erth the songes of Heaven.

I strove to flye from soche swete sounde,
But nail'd was I unto the grounde :
My feet, entraunced, could not move ;
And all my mynde was lost in love.

What punishment your gracious sense
Ordaineth for my rude offence,
Yet be it grate, and life destroye,
It may not equal my past joye.

If you would more than cruel be,
Deth must not be devised for me ;
But take my ears' quick sense away,
When you, grate Queene, shall singe and playe.

BALLADE,

BY VERE, EARL OF OXFORD.

WHERE is the Mayde that erst was myne,
Who did with love myne harte begile?
No more on me doeth beauty shine :
No more I proudly boaste her smile.

The roses of her cheek so bright,
Her lippe of berries' purple hue,
No more for me may blush delyte ;
To them may Fansie say, " Adieu !"

When I did first her lookes beholde,
Meseemes 'twas summer in her Eye :
Meseemes I mark'd two Sunnes of golde,
Upon her face's smiling skye.

Meseemes that on her roseate Cheeke
I spyed the season of the Springe ;
And when that she did courteous speke,
The feather'd Minstrels seem'd to singe.

But all is past and gone, I weene :
From her I meete with icy cold ;
I marke no more her Eye's bright sheen,
Nor marke her Sunnes of brightest golde.

Sadde is the chaunge sith she's unkynde :
Now cloudes all mirkie darke my daye ;
For Zephyrus blow Wynter wyndes,
And frost hath kill'd the gentle May.

BALLADE.

COULDST thou looke into myne Harte,
Thou wouldst see a Mansion drear ;
Some old haunted Tower aparte,
Where the Spectre bands appear :

Sighing, gliding, ghostly forms,
'Mid the ruin shook by storms.

Yet my Harte, whiche Love doth slighte,
Was a Palace passing fair ;
Which did hold thyne image bright,
Thee the Queen of Beauty rare ;
Which the laughing Pleasures fill'd,
And fair Fortune's sunne did gild.

When shall my poor Harte, alas,
Pleasure's Palace be againe ?
That, sweete Mayde, may come to pass,
When thou ceasest thy disdaine :
For thy smiles, like beams of day,
Banish Spectre forms away.

A BALLADE.

THE Maid who pants for Lover's sighs,
Doth lay for her own peace a snare ;
She rues the conquests of her eyes,
And mourns that she was ever fair :—

Then, Lasses, mind the proverb well,
“ Too oft the pitcher went to well.”

Where Beauty doth display its rose,
In tribes the busy Swains are found ;
And, where the richest Nectarine grows,
The hungry Flies will buz around :—

Then, Lasses, mind the proverb well,
“ Too oft the pitcher went to well.”

THE THREAT OF OBERON THE FAIRY.

MAIDENS fair, attend to me.
Constant to your Shepherds be :
If ye break your vows of love,
Ye my rage will sorely prove.

I know all your dreams by night ;
Therefore fear, O Maids, my spite :
All your secret thoughts I know ;
Fear then my sharp anger's blow.

And, O Men ! I pray, beware ;
Do not harm the Maidens fair :
Sigh not love, and then betray,
If ye wish my rage away.

By the Moon's pure beam I swear,
If I mark a Virgin's tear,
I will give the Shepherd dread,
And will tear him from his bed.

If I hear a Shepherd sigh,
Maids, in jeopardy ye lie :
Spoil'd will be the dimple sleek,
Breast of snow, and rosy cheek.

Love our Fairy train delights,
While we sport in moony nights ;
Eke our elfin King and Queene,
As they gambol on the greene.

Love was sent to soften wo,
Sent to bless the World below ;
Full of smile, with roses crown'd :
Why should Love then feel a wound?

A BALLADE OF WYNTER.

LOUD blowe the wyndes with blustering breath,
And snows fall cold upon the heath,
And hill and vale looke drear :
The torrents foam with headlong roar ;
And trees their chilly loads deplore,
And droppe the icy tear.

The little Birdes, with wishfull eye,
For almes unto my cottage flye,
Sithe they can boaste no hoarde :
Sharpe in myne house the pilgrims peep ;
But Robin will not distance keepe,
So percheth on my boarde.

Now on the cradle doth he hye ;
And kenneth down, with connyng eye,
Upon my Babe below :
And, finding comfort in my cote,
He tweedles forth a simple note,
And shakes his wings of snow.

Come in, ye little Minstrels swete,
And from your feathers shake the sleete,

And warme your freezing bloode :
No Cat shall touch a single plume ;
Come in, sweet choir ; nay, fill my room,
And take of grain a treat.

Then flicker gay about my beams,
And hoppe, and doe what pleasaunt seemes,
And be a joyfull throng,
Till Spring shall cloath the naked grove ;
Then go and build your nests, and love,
And thank me with a song.

TO HER HIGH MAJESTY.

ON HER VOUCHSAFING TO REWARD HER HUMBLEST OF SERV-ANTS, EDWARD FAIRFAX.

BRIGHT Sun of England, nay, a Sun
That hath so bright a cercle run,
And on far Realms doth spread a blaze!
The humblest Servant of your isle
Doth thank your beauty for the smile
That graceth me with golden rays.

Though homely be my Muse's speeche
And poore ; your praise can make it rich,

Such is the power of your high name.
What you, greate Queen, may deign to praise,
Although a Dwarf, you to a Giant can it raise,
Sith your voice is the voice of Fame.

WITH A GYPTE OF A GLOW-WORM TO THE FAYRE GERALDINE, IN THE COUNTRY.

FAYRE Geraldine, behold, I bring
This elfin Imp that gildeth night ;
So beauteous was it 'mid the shade,
So calm, so mild its lonely light,
The insects of the dew-dropp'd field
To its pure beame did homage yielde.

When first I didde this Worm espye,
Aloude I said, and with a sighe,
“ O little Imp of Night, I see Semblance of Geraldine in thee.”
Amid the shade as it doth shyne,
So fares it with Fayre Geraldine.

This Worm beneath the leaf doth hyde,
Desyring not to be espied ;

Natheless it yieldeth, all so brighte,
A jewel to emblazon night :
And thus on this dark Worlde do shyne
The wit and charmes of Geraldine.

BALLADE ON THE VIOLET.

SWEETE Infant of the Fielde, myne eye
Doth joye thy modest form to meet,
For thou goode news dost say ;
How Winter, with his horrid yell,
Hath bid at laste his rude farewell,
And borne his blasts away.

While Wynter his wilde rule did spread,
Thou couldst not show thy tender head,
But from his rage didst hide ;
And Golden Cup, and Primrose pale,
Did peeping tremble in their vale,
And eke the Daisie pied.

The surly wight your robes had torne,
And on his wings of tempest borne,
And scatter'd through the skies :

But now the gentle Zephyr's breath
Doth whisper, "There's no dread of death;"
And bids you fearless rise.

Sweet is thy lot, O little Flower!
Like Man thou dost not life devour,
Well pleased on *dew*s to dine,
Of Heaven's pure balm to make thy fare:
What pity 'tis, we cannot share
An innocence like thine!

BALLADE

TO A FISH OF THE BROOKE.

WHY flyest thou away, with fear?
Trust me, there's nought of danger near;
I have no wicked hooke,
All cover'd with a snaring bait,
Alas! to tempt thee to thy fate,
And dragge thee from the brooke.

O harmless Tenant of the Flood,
I do not wish to spill thy blood;
For Nature unto thee

Perchance hath given a tender wife,
And children dear, to charme thy life,
As she hath done for me.

Enjoy thy streame, O harmless Fish !
And when an Angler, for his dish,
Through gluttony's vile sin,
Attempts, a wretch, to pull thee out ;
God give thee strength, O gentle Trout,
To pull the raskall in !

TO THE LARK.

O LITTLE harbinger of day,
Who welcomest the blushing light !
With glee I list thy cheerful lay,
Sweet recompence for dreary night.

O'er fair Astræa's rosy bow'r,
Go, tuneful sprite, and wave thy wing :
Go, charm Astræa's morning hour ;
To her thy choicest ditties sing.

And, if thou please that peerless Queen,
Thrice-lucky were thy little voice ;
For, when Astræa gladde is seen,
Her smile doth all the World rejoice.

ANCIENT SIMPLICITY.

FOLK be too fond of mounting Fortune's wheel ;
And, though she humbleth thousands in the muck,
Ambition's flame their brenning bosoms feel :
Pardie ! they must crawl up, and try their luck.

But, when aloft, themselves they scarcely know,
Despitefull squinting on the World below :
So, when they tumble, none lament their thrall ;
But grin, and point their finger to their fall.

To show that I am now not uttering lies,
I'll tell a little tale in Esop guise :—

THE YOUNG CROWS AND THE YOUNG WRENS.

A Crow upon a lofty tree
Did build her sticky nest ;
And Younglings did she bring to light,
In number five at least.

One morning, on a summer's day,
Did peep eche youngling Crow,
And spied upon a brambling-bush
Some youngling Wrens below.

These simple Wrens in happy glee
Did spread their little wing ;
And, lightsome, hopp'd from bush to bush,
And merrily did sing.

" Poor humble creatures !" cried the Crows ;
" Eche is a beggar wight :
Look up to us, and see our state ;
Our house's lofty hight.

" We look into the beamy skies,
While you through hedges wade :
We gaze upon the morning sun,
While ye are lost in shade.

“ Poor imps, departe, nor here offend ;
Take off eche selie face :
This hill was only made for Crows ;
Then do not us disgrace.

“ If you do not this region quit,
We’ll dung upon you soon.”—
The smiling Wrens made answer none,
But trill’d their little tune.

Short time had pass’d, when suddenly
Grim Boreas ’gan howl ;
The thunder crack’d, the lightning flash’d,
And frightened Man and Fowl.

While thus the dredefull thunder crack’d,
And lightning broad did flash ;
The limb whereon the Crows were perch’d
Did give a sudden crash.

Down came the limb, and with it down
Did tumble eche young Crow :
Some broke their legs, and some their wings,
And doleful look’d below.

'Twas now the time for Wrens to jeer ;
So forth did fly the train,
And, twittering, saw with smiles the Crows
All sprawling on the plain.

Then taunting, an arch Wren began :
“ Sir Crows, of high renowne,
Ye came, by this your dirty trim,
All in a hurry down :—

“ And by the looke of all your limbs,
And feathers sous'd with rain,
It will be some small time before
Your graces mount again.

“ Proud fooles, how selie ye descend
From skies to dirty fens !
Thank Heaven, with hedges we're content,
And happy to be wrens.”

TO AUTHORS

THAT ENDITE ON THE PASSION OF LOVE.

YE who do songs of Love endite,
Knoweth not well of that ye write,
Sith ye nere with the passion strove :
Go moan, and hide in groves, and sighe,
Adore her name, and wish to dye ;
And then ye well may wryte of Love.

But ye may answer make, and cry,
“ Where is the object for our sigh ?
Who is the Mayde may make hearts pine ? ” —
Ah, did ye never marke a Mayde
That wandereth in Windsor shade ?
Then learne, it is Fayre Geraldine.

SURRY.

BALLADE.

WHEN Summer's bloome did paynte my cheeke,
I thought of Friendship's tye ;
Of Friendship I could onely speke,
Unweting so was I:—

But now I fynde this grievous truthe,
That Friendship is the Dream of youth.

Although I loved the fayrest Mayde,
My Ladye I would yield,
To give a Frend a hand of aid,
And be that Frend's bold shield.

Alas ! I mete with no return :
For Love I mete with Hate ;
Instead of Smyle, myne eyes do mourne
With early Tears and late.

Friendship's a Sunne, I whilom sayd,
That warmeth every harte ;—
But now, that hartes of Ice are made,
Whiche Winter's colds emparte.

Frendship, sayd I, a forme doth boast,
A Gyant's forme, I ween ;—
But nowe I see him a poore Ghost,
With pale and dreary mien.

Then let no Mynstrell, in his song,
Of Frendship take the parte ;
Syth 'tis a vertue of the tongue,
But never of the harte.

ODES.

TO CYNTHIA IN TOWN.

CYNTHIA, the Dryads are in tears,
Because thou visit'st not their groves ;
The Graces grieve, and Cupid swears,
And very sullen look the Loves.

The Naiads through the vales declare
No rill of theirs shall purl away ;
The Lark too scorns to mount in air,
And vows to keep his nest all day.

The Sun resolves to hide his head,
And blot his lustre from the skies ;
Yet that were little loss indeed,
While we possess'd that pair of Eyes.

Well then, to pique thee, from each Lay,
From all my lines, I'll blot thy name.—
“ Aye, do,” I hear thee smiling say ;
“ And blot what only gives them fame.”

O D E.

The Poet describeth the former and present State of his Wishes.

Tempora mutantur.

COURTIERS are just so many Goats, that leap
From rock to rock upon the cloud-capp'd steep,
That overhangs a sea that foams around ;
Slip but a foot, souse! down they are, and drown'd.
Yet how folks scramble, one and all,
To mount the ridge, and get a fall !

I own, I've listen'd to Ambition's tales ;
Sigh'd for Life's mountains, and disdain'd its vales :
My youngling ears most greedy drank her story.
With Kings and Queens, Lord ! how was I in love !
Tried to make wings (alas ! I vainly strove),
(Poor fly !) to buz within their orbs of glory.

Yes, vain were my endeavours all ;
And still am I ordain'd to crawl,
Although so lofty in my Rhyme.
Heavens ! how my fibres felt the rack,
When Pye obtain'd the Royal sack,
And Parsons smooth'd the Ode with chime!

Thus can't I to the Palace go, alack !
All the Court crawlers would be on my back ;
Biting and scratching, nibbling, swarming :
A circumstance, alas ! alarming.

There would be Liverpool, I do suppose,
And Cardigan, and Salisbury, and Rose.
Making a diabolic rout :
“ Off with him ! turn the fellow out ! ”

Cut off from Cesar and his Wife,
I pass of solitude a life ;
 To Cynthia's beauty tune the willing Lyre ;
And, while I gain her lovely smile
(The sweetest that adorns our isle),
 I feel for Courts no more a fierce desire :—

So little raptured with a royal mien,
I would not give one pin to kiss a queen.

ODE ON THE ANCIENTS.

“ ALL has been said ; the World has nought to yield ;
 Alas ! there's nothing new beneath the sun :
The Ancients with their hooks have reap'd the field ;
 All that can be imagined, has been done.

The Ancients for the Moderns were too stout :
Yes; the deep mine of knowledge is work'd out."—

So cries the World : but who are these that speak?
Men of no vous, most wonderfully weak.
If things are so, why what a fate is mine !
Lord help the Muse ! she never penn'd a line.

Reap the whole Field ! not half on't, I'll be sworn :
'They've only taken a few Sheaves of Corn.—
The Mine exhausted ! Poh ! I'll hear no more ;
'They've only gather'd a few Grains of ore.

Appear but Genius, Genius soon will find
New matter to improve and charm mankind ;
Teach on the wildest heath the rose to blow :
Genius, the Rod of Moses at the rock,
Shall, by a magical and happy stroke,
Bid the rich stream of wit and wisdom flow.

The Brains of men, in general, are a Pool
Wrapp'd in death-stillness, comfortably dull ;
Like motionless poor Lethe, void of spirit.
But now and then (like Milton, for example,
Or Shakspeare, each indeed a beauteous sample),
Into existence pops a wight of merit :—

An Ocean, lo, his brave Ideas rise,
That mounts, and with its thunders shakes the skies.

O D E

TO AN UNFORTUNATE PRINCESS.

SHALL Virtue feel the cruel blow,
Her tears to earth unheeded flow,
Her soul unheard complain?
Say, will no Muse proclaim the wrong?
Why sleeps the thunder of her Song,
While Pity mourns in vain?

With every beauty to inspire
Of Love the soft and chaste desire,
And bless the nuptial tie;
With every gentler charm of mind;
Can Fate, to peerless worth unkind,
Condemn thy heart to sigh?

Without a friend, in soothing strain,
To steal thy bosom from its pain,
I hear thy plaintive voice:

And hear the snakes of Envy hiss ;
While, happy at thy vanish'd bliss,
The imps of Hell rejoice.

Yet through the cloud that hides thy head,
By Calumny's foul venom spread,
I mark a golden ray :
Time on his wing (for Justice reigns),
To calm thy life's tempestuous scenes,
Shall waft the smiles of May.

Hark ! to suppress the swelling tear,
A voice prophetic hails thine ear :
“ Thy Babe shall rule adored ;
On Britain's throne, to crown her fame,
The shouts of Millions shall proclaim
Eliza's reign restored.”

ODE TO ST. CECILIA.

O GODDESS of the tuneful choir,
Upon my knees I must desire
You'll give your instrument a smart jobation :

Happy am I a Band to meet,
To give my ears a pretty treat,
And fill my heart with sweetest animation.

I like an Overture, I needs must own ;
Of Music 'tis a very noble dish :
But here's the devil ; while some with solemn groan
Bawl flesh, lo, others are exclaiming fish ;
Rending with sounds of Babel our poor ears,
Much like the noises of the Bulls and Bears*.

Proud on his nimbler neighbour to advance,
Like Elephants that fain would learn to dance,
The Double Bass attempts his awkward jigs,
Grunting and snuffling like a Sow and Pigs.

Ambitious, this most labouring Bass
Gives to the Violoncello chase,
Who on the Tenor presses like the Wind,
Who presses closely on the Second Fiddle,
Who presses sharply on First Tweedle-tweedle,
Who leaps the bridge, and leaves them all behind.

Alas ! are these the modes to melt the soul,
Sooth every sigh, and every care control ?

* At the Stock Exchange.

If this be Music, let me leave the riot,
And be the World of Quavers ever quiet !

PETER'S TRIUMPH.

TO THE MUSE.

MUSE, we have finish'd now our Odes,
And verily the Songs of Gods ;
But let me tell thee, Muse, (and much it pains,)
That those great traffickers in words,
Those high and mighty pompous Lords
The Booksellers, will barely give me grains.

“ Hogs' wash is good enough,” they cry :
Thus can I neither roast nor fry.

'Tis hard that my poor mental mill
Is never suffer'd to lie still ;
Such, such indeed the avarice of the clan :
Forced, every minute of the hour,
To grind forsooth for them the flour,
And feed myself, alas ! upon the bran.

Hard is their bridle : Lord ! with pain I shrink ;
Too hard upon my bleeding jaws they pull.
What shame that they, the lazy imps, should drink
Claret and Burgundy from my poor scull ;
And, with a saucy mortifying sneer,
Bid me be happy upon dead small-beer !

I boast one consolation, I allow ;
My name will never be forgotten :
When to Posterity I make my bow,
Those rogues are in oblivion rotten.

A
POETICAL EPISTLE
TO
BENJAMIN COUNT RUMFORD,
KNIGHT OF THE WHITE EAGLE, &c. &c.

MUSE, at the sound of " Rumford" raise thy voice,
And bid our Kitchen-furniture rejoice.
Though scant our store, a hempen String (alack!
The simple substitute for spit and jack),
A Knife and Fork, a Dish, a Spoon, and Platter,
Shall stir their stumps, and make a jovial clatter;
The Broom shall hop, as merry as a grig;
And, pleased, the dainty Dishclout dance a jig.

EPISTLE

TO

COUNT RUMFORD.

THE Bard whose Harp immortalized the Louse,
For which he ne'er received a single souse;
Praised Madame Schwellenberg in lofty style,
For which he never gain'd a single *smile;

* Though I have here accused this Lady of ingratitude; perhaps, if her last Will and Testament were to be seen, I might alter my opinion. Where is this Will, I wonder? Why does it not appear at Doctors' Commons? Is it ashamed to show its face? What has it done with the pearls and diamonds, presents from the poor persecuted family of Hastings? Is it with the Taylor in Pimlico, to whom her poor body was sent about an hour or two after the soul had forsaken its tenement? Should not this Will be publicly advertised? Am I certain that it doth not contain some handsome bequest, at least a tender memorial, to me, who (she very well knew) must lose much by her death? Is this an unreasonable conjecture? I know the Will has been read, and I know parts of it. O ye poor Relations of Madame Schwellenberg, now crawling in piteous plight in obscure holes in Germany, must ye forfeit the little pittance bequeathed, if ye dare approach Great Britain? Such was a cruel clause of the Will!—Had ye enough to purchase mourning, O ye poor disappointed Relations of Madame Schwellenberg? Perhaps ye might have been troublesome had ye come to England. If so, things are best as they are.

Gave to eternity the shaven group,
Yet never saw a ladle-full of soup ;
Praised thankless Lords besides, and Knight and Squire ;
Now to a Yankey tunes the willing Lyre :
Spite of th' ingratitude of Cooks and Kings,
Strikes to Count Rumford's tuneful name the strings ;
Who from his favourite little Rumford* came,
To build on smoke his fortune and his fame.

Muse, at the sound of " Rumford " raise thy voice,
And bid our Kitchen-furniture rejoice.—
Though scant our store, a hempen String (alack !
The simple substitute for spit and jack),
A Knife and Fork, a Dish, a Spoon, and Platter,
Shall stir their stumps, and make a jovial clatter ;
The Broom shall hop, as merry as a grig ;
And, pleased, the dainty Dishclout dance a jig ;
Expressing thus in gratitude their souls
To him whose wisdom saves us pecks of coals,
And means (for Pitt's damn'd taxes this require)
To teach us soon to roast without a fire.

* Once an obscure Village, in North America ; but fortunately illuminated by the nativity of the Count, who indeed drew his first breath there : and afterwards, in quality of a Pedagogue, immortalized it by his abecedarian powers ; teaching little Children to read, spell, and write, with the most consummate ability.

Friend to thy fame (and may it last thee long !),
Though George and Banks grow jealous of the Song ;
Howe'er its praise may wound some courtly folk,
That Song shall thunder to the Man of Smoke.

Knight of the Dishclout, wheresoe'er I walk,
I hear thee, Rumford, all the kitchen-talk :
Note of melodious cadence on the ear,
Loud echoes " Rumford " here, and " Rumford " there.
Lo, every parlour, drawing-room, I see,
Boasts of thy stoves, and talks of nought but thee.
Yet not alone my Lady and young Misses,
The Cooks themselves could smother thee with kisses :
Yes ; Mistress Cook would spoil a goose, or steak,
To twine her greasy arms around thy neck.
Through Newspaper, through Magazine, Review,
Happy mine eyes thy splendid track pursue ;
Thy sage Opinion in each Journal read,
A vein of Silver 'midst a load of Lead.

High o'er the wondering World Vanbutchell tow'rs,
And on the ruptured Mob his trusses pours.—
High-mounted Katerfelto and his Cat,
Proud of the voice of Fame, in glory sat.—
High o'er the World the mighty Merlin sits,
Though much of gall his jealous mouth emits :

Endeavouring, lo, thy name's bright beam to shade,
 The Wizard swears that thou hast stol'n his trade*;
 Learn'd from his matchless art to conjure up,
 From shades below, a shilling's-worth of soup;
 And mean'st on other tricks to put thy pattes;
 Plunder chair-yelping Curs, and squalling Cats,
 With all their love-songs of sweet execution,
 To please and lull the Royal Institution.—
 High o'er the World Sir Joseph soars sublime,
 The great and fertile subject of my Rhyme.—
 Yet higher thou shalt mount, whose angry toe
 Kick'd from thy shop the Hero of Soho;
 And, aiming too at Garnet's luckless crown,
 Didst, with thy leaden Journal, knock him down†:
 For who with sage opinion dares appear,
 While Rumford's mouth of Oracles is near?
 Behold the Elector bowing to his merit!
 Bavaria owns his beggar-hunting spirit;
 Who, when poor Munich trembled, almost lost,
 With godlike ardour pierced the Egyptian host,

* Indeed Mr. Merlin has seemingly just cause of complaint; but as the minds of those great men are surprisingly similar, why may not a coincidence of thought occasionally take place, and produce similar discoveries?

† Sir Joseph Banks is bonâ fide ousted; and poor Garnet, a most ingenious chymist, was attacked for a difference in opinion.

And seized (which history must ever note),
 And seized—a daring Gipsej by the throat ;
 And gave him (what such bravery can reward?),
 And gave him—to the Serjeant of the guard* :

* Here I must beg pardon of my Readers for violating History. The Count slightly says, that at the head of the Elector's troops he made but one Gipsej his prisoner, and that he only tapped him on the shoulder. Such is the Count's modesty. A Hero is the last man in the world to speak of his own exploits; but let me quote the Count's own words, who, like Cesar, can write as well as fight:—

“ New-year's Day,” says the Count in his History, “ having from time immemorial been considered in Bavaria as a day peculiarly set apart for giving alms, and the Beggars never failing to be all out on that occasion; I chose that moment, as being the most favourable to my operations. Early in the morning of the first of January, one thousand seven hundred and ninety, the Officers and Non-commissioned Officers of the three Regiments of Infantry in garrison were stationed in the different streets, where they were directed to wait for further orders.

“ Having in the mean time assembled at my lodgings the Field-officers and all the chief Magistrates of the town, I made them acquainted with my intention, to proceed that very morning to the execution of a plan I had formed, for taking up the Beggars; and asked their immediate assistance.

“ To show the Public that it was not my wish to carry this measure into execution by military force alone (which might have rendered the measure odious), but that I was disposed to show all becoming deference to the civil authority, I begged the Magistrates to accompany me, and the Field-officers of the garrison, in the execution of the first and most difficult part of the undertaking, that of arresting the Beggars. This they most readily consented to, and we immediately sallied out into the street; myself accompanied by the chief Magistrate of the town, and each of the Field-officers by an inferior Magistrate. We were

For which th' Elector deck'd the Man of Stove
 With true-blue ribbons, and the Bird of Jove.
 Great Man, whose power inventive daily rakes
 Balm from a bog, and dinners from a jakes*!

hardly got into the street, when we were accosted by a Beggar, who asked us for alms. I went up to him, and, laying my hand gently on his shoulder, told him, from henceforwards begging would not be permitted in Munich. I then delivered him over to the Orderly Serjeant; and then, turning to the Officers and Magistrates who accompanied me, I begged they would take notice that I had myself, with my own hands, arrested the first Beggar!" &c.—Vide the Count's Essays, vol. i. p. 41. third edition.

Such is the Count's elegant and nervous narrative of that glorious day which emancipated Munich from the tyranny of the Beggars! With the Hero of antiquity, the Count Rumford may not only say, Veni, vidi, vici, but moreover add, scripsi, to increase the catalogue of his wonders.

* His first and grand object being to complete the sum total of human happiness, by a prudent attention to economy, he shows how, from the $\left\{ \begin{array}{l} \text{recre-} \\ \text{excre-} \end{array} \right\}$ mentitious parts of human food and fuel, as well as from many hitherto shamefully neglected natural productions, to derive a wholesome, and pleasing, and nutritious diet. There is a filthy old proverb (that I cannot repeat), instructing people how to grow rich; and which proverb, though treated as ludicrous by our ancestors, will be soon pronounced a serious economical maxim. After many laborious days and sleepless nights, the Count has at last succeeded in the detection of that grand desideratum before and since the days of the great Martinus Scriblerus, viz. the extraction of sunbeams from cucumbers; so that any gentleman may store up heat and light for the Winter, in the same way ice is preserved for the Summer. This fortunate discovery (it will be observed) supersedes all his former methods of saving fuel; and consequently precludes all further researches in the consolidation of smoke, and the conversion of soot into sea-coal.

Great man, whose fertile genius could contrive
To soften rocks, and flay the flints alive ;
And make (though Envy unbelieving grins)
Pouches and handsome purses of their skins :
Nay more (but yet, methinks, a dangerous hint)
To perfect Jelly turn the hardest Flint* :—
For hence an inconvenience may arise ;
To this discovery rogues will turn their eyes :
The felons dread, for robbery, murder, rape,
Will eat their various dwellings, and escape ;

• With a machine which the Count invented on the Continent, he flays Flints, and, by an alkali sui generis, converts them into palatable Soups and Jellies : and he is now carrying on a process for preparing their skins to make purses for such as have money, and tobacco-pouches for such as have none.

The philosophical tinkers and bellows-menders, whose ideas he has generously adopted, make kettles, saucepans, frying-pans, salamanders, skillets, stewers, roasters, toasters, &c. &c. of the most astonishing and unheard-of powers ; some of these utensils rendering Shoe-leather as masticable as Beef-steaks, and the toughest Horse-hide as tender as the best Veal in Leadenhall-market. By a little higher charge of heat, bones, hair, horns, hoof, shells, and claws, are reduced to a jelly ; and chopped straw, bean-husks, potatoe-skins, &c. are turned into palatable spoon-meat. The extensive use and application of these inventions, especially in the present times of famine, must be obvious to the intelligent. Already the workmen are so far reconciled to this new species of food, that they begin to make themselves comfortable messes of their old aprons and leather breeches. In short, the Count is not without hopes of introducing the animal food of the ancient and modern Scythians, and the more cooling vegetable diet of King Nebuchadnezzar.

Taught by thine art of turning stones to jellies,
Fly with the walls of Newgate in their bellies.

Great man, whose tinkers form, from various metals,
Grillers and broilers, salamanders, kettles,
Steamers and bakers, frying-pans and stewers,
Skillets and saucepans, roasters, toasters, brewers ;
Some blest indeed with such stupendous pow'r,
Shall change old shoes to beef in half an hour ;
And turn, amidst the wonders of the shop,
The tinker's apron to a mutton chop.
Bones, oyster-shells, and hair, and hoofs, and claws,
Shall form too jellies for the nicest jaws :
Thus shall the cuckold who his honours scorns,
Bless his dear Wife, and fatten on his horns.

Great King of Fire, who know'st the powers of meat,
And know'st how necessary 'tis to eat ;
And yet, not only eat, but eat with pleasure,
Without one bit of bolting, quite at leisure ;
By which slow movement in the mastication,
Millions may soon be saved to this poor Nation !
What gratitude, what thanks, to thee are due,
Instructing a great Empire how to chew !
In Workhouses, where ignorance abounds,
And all the Poor, voracious, feed like Hounds,

Sharp Overseers shall at the table stand,
And give the word, with serjeant-like command ;
Thus will their crackling Jaws in concert chime,
And, like a Fidler's Elbow, move in time.
Oh! if I too might cater for the belly,
Old Fiddle-strings should make us Vermicelli ;
Cockchaffers, with a very trifling art,
Compose a Pie, at least a pretty Tart ;
Soap-suds to Syllabubs and Trifles change,
And Bullock's Lights and Livers to Blamange ;
And Sheep's-dung, without quantities of studying,
Glean'd from the fields, produce a fine Plum-pudding.
A wool-stuff'd Pin-cushion would make a Puff,
And Tripe start forth from Breeches of old Buff ;
And, with Sir Joseph's leave, with Fish might pass
His Fleas, his favourite Fleas, for Lobster-sauce*.—
But what an insolence in me to prate !
Pretend to him to open Wisdom's gate,
Who spurns Advice, like Weeds, where'er it springs,
Disdaining counsel, though it comes from kings†!

* The experimental dinners promised by the Count, are expected by the Members of the Royal Institution with great avidity. Grass-broth, flint-soup, fricasseed leather-breeches, stewed old shoes, &c. &c. will soon be forth-coming ; set on the table too by automatical waiters, to the vast surprise and instruction of all beholders.

† Here I must beg leave to quarrel with the Count. Although a man may, like the Count, possess extraordinary intellect, and although a man may be the

Yet say, why Physic from thy house exclude* ?
 On physic ponder, what a public good !
 Hygeia weeps, poor Nymph, to be neglected :
 Shame on thee ! let the fair-one be protected.
 Of physic didst thou never own the skill ?
 Say, did thy purity ne'er need a pill ?
 Go, go, harangue the Members, goad 'em, goad 'em,
 And make them send away for Doctor Brodum ;
 Or Doctor Meyrsbach, who with sapience sees
 A mighty Empire fall by toasted cheese :
 Or doughty Doctor Solomon invite,
 Who cuts the talons of Disease, the Kite,
 That hovering, threatening, spread abroad, prepare
 To lug us Goslings to the fields of air.—
 And why Divinity be banish'd, pray ?
 Souls are of some importance, let me say.
 In God's name, send a card to Rowland Hill,
 Who to a tittle knows his Maker's will :
 The film of darkness banish'd from his eyes,
 He kens the darkest secrets of the skies ;

best judge of himself, nevertheless it is indecorous to treat the opinions of others with contempt. The Count's constant assertion is, " I never was yet in the wrong : I know every thing." Granting this to be true, the declaration is nevertheless arrogant and supercilious.

* " All discussion relative to Religion and Medicine will be carefully avoided."
 —Journal of the Royal Institution of Great Britain.

Of Cherubim and Seraphim the Host,
As though they wrote the Parson every post.
Hill knows what Satan does, and means to do ;
Knows all the plottings of th' infernal crew ;
The tools, the tortures for a sinful soul ;
And what the fire to roast it, wood or coal.

Oh, while Mechanics hold with thee a sway,
And blacksmiths, tinkers, hammer it away ;
While such obtain thy smile (a lucky lot),
Let not ingenious Aris be forgot.
To shine a worthy Member, Aris sighs ;
Aloft his excellency lifts his eyes :
Pitt's bosom-friend, oh grant him then his pray'r,
Whose Gags and Handcuffs wondrous worth declare ;
Whose whips of thong, to radiant wire allied,
Tickle with neatest touch the human hide.

With rapture have I visited thy house,
And marvell'd at thy vast extent of vous.
Thanks to thy care, that, 'midst its ample round,
Soup, tea and toast, and coffee, may be found ;
And wine, and punch, and porter ; fresh'ning draught,
Mending the monstrous wear and tear of thought*.

* "To render the house of the Institution more pleasant and agreeable to such Proprietors and Subscribers as frequent it, an additional room has lately

Thus a new birth shall Rumford's glory tell,
And from its bowels spring a grand Hotel.

Yet, 'mid thine House's philosophic glooms,
Since Conversation has its private rooms,
Extend the thought, by Love delicious led ;
And give of Graham the celestial bed.
In would Subscriptions like a Torrent pour :
Nymphs of delight would leave each Cyprian bower ;
The Bond-street Loungers to thy call repair,
And form, like Smithfield, a perpetual fair.

Say, canst thou make (whose brains have not their fellows)

Fire blow itself without a pair of bellows ?
Soon shall we see a Haunch, with equal wit,
Turn round and roast itself without a spit ;

been set apart for their private and exclusive use : this has been called the Conversation Room, and is distinguished by an inscription over the door. As conversation in the Reading Rooms could not fail to interrupt those who read, the Managers are confident that all those who frequent the house will be so sensible of the reasonableness of the regulation, as to abstain from conversation in the Reading Rooms when any person engaged in reading is present.

“ To render the Conversation Room still more useful and agreeable, it will be furnished with a collection of good maps ; and, as soon as some necessary previous arrangements (which are now actually making) shall be finished, those who frequent this room will be furnished, at the most reasonable prices, from the Housekeeper's Room below, with soups of various kinds, tea, coffee, chocolate, and other refreshments.”—Vide the Count's Journal.

Fish without frying-pans come hot and hot,
 And Dumplings boil themselves without a pot.
 Nay more, Automata shall rise : I see
 A Pin pursue, and pierce the nimble Flea ;
 Now in the bedstead old, or in the rug,
Pluck from its lurking-hole the wounded Bug.
Untouch'd, the Handkerchief shall wrap the nose ;
Untouch'd, the Pen-knife cut the corn-clad toes ;
Untouch'd, the Comb the vermin tribe assail,
 And Scissars opening clip the finger-nail :
 The Soap unaided the rich suds shall spread,
 And Razors trimly shave the beard and head :
 Formal as Pitt, the Treasury-bench shall rise,
 And, bowing, ope the Budget for supplies ;
 The Church's Desk put forth its pious pray'rs,
 And Lincoln's Pulpit preach like Parson Nares*.—
 Great man, the culinary tactics studying,
Instructing Worlds to eat a Hasty-pudding† !

• A staunch stickling Parson for preferment, the salvation of souls, and the state. Newspapers, Pamphlets, Magazines, Reviews, Ballads, &c. proclaim the merits of our Lincoln's-inn Preacher. The Pulpit itself is a weekly witness of his various enthusiasm. He does not yet deem himself properly remunerated : is there nothing more for the poor gaping Priest ?

† “ The Hasty-pudding being spread out equally on a plate, while hot, an excavation is made in the middle of it, with a spoon : into which excavation a piece of butter, as large as a nutmeg, is put ; and upon it a spoonful of brown sugar, or, more commonly, molasses. The butter, being soon melted by the heat

To thee poor Poets shall their offerings bring,
 Who roast, like me, their victuals by a string ;
 All struggling with a laudable intention,
 Who best shall praise thee for thy vast invention.
 And since thy skill (believe me not in joke)
 Contriveth traps to catch our London smoke ;
 Soon, very soon, mayst thou proclaim aloud
 (Rare news for farmers), traps to catch a cloud.
 Quick on his prisoner Hob will lay his hands,
 And tap his watry belly for the lands ;
 And thus our Parsons will be saved the pain
 Of putting Heaven in mind to send down rain.

Oh why will Scandal thus let loose her tongue ;
 And call the voice of Knowledge, Folly's song ?
 Great are the beauties of association :
 What charming union, soup and conversation,

of the pudding, mixes with the sugar or molasses, and forms a sauce ; which, being confined in the excavation made for it, occupies the middle of the plate. The Pudding is then eaten with—a spoon ; each spoonful of it being dipt into the sauce, before it is carried to the mouth : care being had, in taking it up, to begin on the outside, or near the brim of the plate ; and to approach the centre by regular advances, in order not to demotish too soon the excavation which forms the reservoir for the sauce."

Such are the Count's culinary tactics in regard to the siege of a Hasty-pudding. Nobler generalship perhaps was never exhibited by Marlborough, Turenne, or even Buonaparte himself.

Assisting each the other with delight !
Thus Babes are pleased their alphabet to bite ;
And thus, without the harmless fraud discerning,
With gingerbread the urchins swallow learning.—
I know that Envy turns her head away,
And calls the Institution “ puppet play : ”
But, ah ! in censure people should be mild ;
Philosophy herself was once a child.
Yet still those rude sounds stab mine ear’s poor drum :
“ A bite, palaver, nonsense, fudge, a hum.”
In vain Wits call thee (blasting thy machines)
A walking bundle of old magazines.
Believe me, immortality is sure ;
Long as thy Chimneys, shall thy Praise endure :
Oblivion ne’er shall swallow Rumford’s name ;
Aloft ascending, lo, thy radiant Fame
With thy own curling clouds of Smoke shall rise,
And sun-like give them lustre on the skies !—
I know they mock thee (in their laughter loose),
Because thou sweep’st a chimney with a *goose.

* The Count certainly lays claim to the invention of sweeping chimneys with a goose, by forcing down the animal alive, with a string about its neck, from the top of the chimney ; when the poor creature, by flapping its wings, as it is pulled up and down, sends the soot about its business : but it is really an Irish discovery, used also to extinguish fires in chimneys, by which means the Goose becomes roasted at no expense. No bad hint this, for the Count’s economical system.

I know the World a jealous spirit fosters,
 And christens thee the weakest of impostors ;
 'Stead of a war-horse, one of Folly's hacks ;
 The prince, the king, the emperor, of the quacks.—
 Sir Joseph of thy Journals makes his sport ;
 Laughs at thy Dinners*, keeps thee from our Court,
 Or long, long since, hadst thou received commands
 To come and lounge at Levees, and kiss hands.
 Yes ; to eclipse thy blaze, behold him strain,
 And rummage the dark Coal-hole of his Brain :
 But not one knob is in it, do not doubt ;
 All, long ago (believe me), all burnt out.
 Too plain I see him (jealous of thy name),
 Try every jockey trick to pass thy fame :—
 In vain ; the Fates against the Knight combine :
 Strive as he list, the glorious race is thine.
 To snap more snakes Sir Joseph means, I know,
 And swallow alligators in Soho ;

* Take, gentle Reader, the Count's own words from his own Journal, on the subject of what he calls Experimental Dinners:—" In order that the Proprietors and Subscribers may be enabled to judge, from actual experiment, of the merit of any new method of cooking, or of any new dish, that may be proposed, a dining-room has been built, and will soon be ready for use, at the House of the Institution, in which the Managers will occasionally order experimental dinners ; to which the Proprietors and Subscribers will be invited, as far as the accommodation will admit : the expense of such dinners to be defrayed by those who partake of them."

More tadpoles down his cable gullet pour,
And frogs, and butterflies a mealy show'r :
From hieroglyphics a new name he seeks ;
And tastes, and pores on, Babylonian bricks :
Still, with his Squire*, the Knight in fancy sees
Fame in his blankets, lobsters lodged in fleas ;
And, swearing that in future nought shall foil 'em,
Has order'd honest Jonas to reboil 'em.

Unrivall'd Rumford, ere I close my Song,
Hear, hear an oracle from Peter's tongue :—
Great scholarship with wisdom link'd, is rare ;
Yet these unite in thee, I do declare.
For scholars seldom are the most discerning :
'Tis true, each Priscian swallows loads of learning ;
Yet a poor Moth (that paper-idolizer) ;
Devouring wit, but not a whit the wiser.

Oh since, from every corner of our isle,
Books court thy hand to gain thy gracious smile ;
Regard my offer, nor the trifle slight :
Receive a Poet's solitary mite ;

* Honest Jonas Dryander, the sine quo non of Sir Joseph.

A little incense to embalm thy shrine,
A Life exceedingly resembling thine;—
The History of that Hero with a hunch,
The laughable, th' immortal Mister Punch.

THE
ISLAND OF INNOCENCE;

A POETICAL
EPISTLE TO A FRIEND.

YES; on thy simple isle, in Fancy's eye,
Envyng I often look, and often sigh:
In fancy rove thy small domain by day;
And, pleased, with thee in nightly visions stray.

THE
ISLAND OF INNOCENCE.

To thee, my Friend*, amid that peaceful Isle
Where bounteous Nature blooms with sweetest smile ;
Where never Winter, on his northern blast,
Howls on the hill, and lays the valley waste,
O'er a pale Sun the cloud of horror throws,
And buries Nature in his vast of snows ;—
Ah, no ! where endless Summer, ever gay,
Opes a pure ether to the Orb of Day ;

* A Gentleman whom the Author of this Poem met by the merest accident, on a small Island situated near the Gulf of Mexico. His companions were his Wife, a most lovely woman, and four beautiful Children ; whose history would form an interesting romance. Persecuted by their Parents for a mutual love-attachment, they forsook their native country (America), to seek some distant asylum. On their voyage they were wrecked ; but fortunately escaped with their lives, and preserved their property. Finding the little Island on which they were thrown, to be in possession of a few inhabitants of the most perfect simplicity of manners, and the most lively friendship ; pleased also with the salubrity as well as the beauty and fertility of the spot ; they adopted the resolution of passing their days in this remote corner of the Globe ; convinced that the most perfect happiness resides oftener in simplicity than in splendour. Their opinion soon became realized : fond of the innocent Natives, and equally beloved again, the delightful little Republic flourished under their auspices, and restored the Golden Age.

That gilds the tree, and flower, and grassy blade,
And works his threads of gold in every glade :—
To thee, my Friend, where shrubs of incense rise,
And pour their grateful fragrance to the skies ;
Where rills, in wanton mazes, wind away,
Diffusing health and plenty as they play ;
Where the rich treasures of the pine reside,
And orange-branches bend with golden pride ;
Where, from the boughs of odour, mingled notes
Of rapture warble from a thousand throats ;
And, blest, from vale to vale the cooing Dove
Wings with his Mate, and teaches Man to love :—
To thee I yield the Muse's artless line,
And envy all the blessings that are thine.

Yes, on thy simple Isle, in Fancy's eye,
Envyng I often look, and often sigh ;
In fancy rove thy small domain by day,
And, pleased, with thee in nightly visions stray ;
Behold thee happy at thy wonted toil,
And mark the blossoms of a fruitful soil :
While at thy side thy Julia plants the ground,
With all her little progeny around ;
Who study shrubs and flowers with eager eyes,
And learn of simple Nature to be wise.

Pleased to explore the Insect world, they rove,
Tribes of the Flood, and Minstrels of the Grove ;
With all the varying species of the Field,
Whose forms and lives delight and wisdom yield ;
Display the page of Providence's plan,
That shows his wondrous works to wondering Man.

No wish is theirs (forbid it Heaven!) to hurt,
To wound, and murder, a poor wretch in sport ;
To lift the tube of death, with hostile eye,
And dash a fluttering victim from his sky ;
To bait with writhing worms the barbarous hook,
And drag the finny nation from their brook :
Justly forbid, the cruelty to know,
And gather pleasure from the pangs of woe.

Blest, on their boughs, the Squirrel tribes they see,
And call the hungry urchins from their tree ;
Who, fearless, hastening at the kind command,
Fly to their food, and court th' extended hand ;
Now scud in playful gambols o'er the plain,
And, fully feasted, seek their groves again.
And now they beckon to the feather'd throng :
Forth fly, in flocks, the little Bands of Song ;
They hop, and chirp, and flutter round each head,
Pleased to be call'd, and anxious to be fed.

At length, content, they flicker to their spray,
Adjust their plumes, and pour the thankful Lay.

Now, happy, to the stream they haste, to feed
With liberal hand the little finny breed :
Fearless of danger, lo, the sportive Fry
Mount to the water's brim with watchful eye,
And, leaping oft as urging hunger calls,
Meet the dropp'd crumb, and catch it ere it falls.—
Such are the blisses of thy Girls and Boys,
And such the blisses Innocence enjoys.

Oh, when will Britons list to Reason's voice,
And, changed, no more in cruelty rejoice ?
How nobler, thus t' address the harmless Hare !
“ Child of the Field, oh come beneath my care ;
Safe in thy lonely slumber pass the day,
Along the moonlight hills in safety stray.
No dog is mine, nor engine that destroys ;
Peace to thy loves, and all thy nightly joys :
When Heaven's kind bounty made those valleys mine,
Heaven made the freedom of those valleys thine.”—
How nobler, to the Winter's Bird* to say !
“ Poor stranger, welcome from thy stormy way :

Drop in my groves, enjoy the tepid springs,
And, lodged in peace, repose thy wearied wings :
The food and shelter of my valleys share ;
Like me, a child of Providence's care."—
How nobler, to the finny tribe to say !
“ Yours be the rills that 'midst my pastures stray.
Enjoy your sports, enjoy the sunny beam ;
Health form your food, and wholesome keep your stream :
Torn be the net, and broken be the hook,
'That wanton carry death into your brook.
The Power who gave to mortals every good,
Forgets not yours, his infants of the flood.”

Humanity, how few thy merits see !
How scarce the altars that are raised to thee !
Nymph of the tender heart, and melting eye,
Vain o'er the savage Million is the sigh.
Oh could thy gentle spirit more impart
Of softness, sweetness, to the human heart !
But lo, by cruel Nature led astray,
The ruder Passions rule with boisterous sway :
Drown'd is thy Voice ; a Zephyr's sigh, no more ;
The murmuring Rill, 'midst Ocean's mighty roar.

On plumes of down, my Friend, thy moments fly,
Peace in thy heart, and pleasure in thine eye :

Thy cot though humble, all the Virtues there
Forbid an entrance to a sigh or tear.

Yes; oft in Fancy's eye thy cot I view,
Enwrapp'd with vines, and flowers of vivid hue ;
The pebbled avenue, the murmuring spring,
Crowded with fearless Birds of various wing,
That sportive, fluttering, pour the happy Lay,
A mingled Minstrelsy the livelong day :
And oft, on Fancy's ear, thy Julia's lute ;
Whose melting sounds the soul of Pity suit,
Complaining die ; and oft I hear again
A loud, a happy, cheerful, grateful strain,
Join'd by a little Offspring's throats, that raise
The song of wonder in their Maker's praise.
Sweet is the humble prayer, that Heaven implores ;
Divine the voice, of mortal that adores.
In fancy too I see, beneath thy care,
The simple Natives at thy stories stare
Of streets and churches, palaces and tow'rs,
And busy million that through London pours ;
And animals that stately, stout, and strong,
Drag to a rout a golden house along ;
Alas ! with many a wondrous sight beside,
Begot by Luxury, and nursed by Pride.

Yet, fond of these our wonders, should they sigh,
And cast to Britain's scenes a wishful eye ;
Oh give the history of our horrid deeds !
Proclaim how Love laments, and Friendship bleeds ;
How Virtue pines, how Merit hides the head,
And Pity steals to tombs, to mourn the dead :
Paint all the horrors of domestic strife,
And give the gilded snares of polish'd life ;
Tell tales of Fortune, at whose tinsel shrine
Fools daily kneel, and for her favour pine ;
Who, when she yields, means only to beguile,
Fate in her hand, and ruin in her smile.

Oh paint our dungeons, where, with putrid breath,
The wretch, desponding, pants, and sighs for death !
Paint the poor Felon, doom'd, ah ! doom'd to die,
Wan the pale cheek, and horror-struck the eye ;
With languid limbs that droop to earth in pain,
Press'd, loaded, labouring with a clanking chain ;
While, on the stillness of the midnight air,
Sad moans the voice of Misery and Despair.
Paint all the horrors of the midnight shade ;
Theft's iron crow, and Murder's reeking blade.
Paint the poor Objects that we hourly meet,
The Wrecks of Beauty, crowding every street ;

Daughters of Innocence, ere Demon Art
Won on the weakness of too soft a heart ;
And doom'd to infamy the tender kiss,
Due to pure love alone and wedded bliss.
Paint Courts, whose sorceries, too seducing, bind
In chains, in shameful slavish chains, the mind ;
Courts, where unblushing Flattery finds the way,
And casts a cloud o'er Truth's eternal ray.
And quote the Sage who courts had serv'd and *known :—
“ O Crassus, let me fly, and live alone :
Though much I love thee, let our commerce end,
Nor from his solitude recall thy friend.
Thanks to the Gods, my servile hours are o'er ;
And, oh, let Memory mention courts no more !”

Behold the Courtier ; there the eye surveys
A Willow crawling to each form with ease :—
But mark the man in rigid virtue bred ;
An Oak, in majesty he lifts the head ;
Asserts his freedom, base control defies,
And towering hides his branches in the skies.
Friend of my heart, nor let thy sail unfold,
To court Peru with all her hills of gold ;

* A philosopher named Alexander, the friend of Crassus.

Nor court her sister Mexico, whose ore,
Possess'd by Demons, curses every shore :
The splendid Mischief usher'd to thy vale,
What but a plague that taints with death the gale?
Too soon the Imp would blast the sacred scene,
And damn of Innocence the cherub reign :
Fame, Justice, own th' omnipotence of gold ;
Nay, blushing Modesty herself is sold.
Alas ! one Virtue more illumines the mind,
Than all its envied Wealth illumines Ind.

Own'd be my folly : yes, seduced my eye,
I saw the golden mountains with a sigh ;
Saw with delight the fatal mischief shine,
And envied even the slave that dug the mine.—
How like the foolish Insect of the night,
That leaves his cell, to seize the taper's light !
Pleased, and unconscious of the treacherous rays,
He hugs his fate, and dies amid the blaze*.

From thine, how different is my lot !—Alas !
In calms of Sunshine while thy moments pass,
Mine, 'midst the murky Clouds that life deform,
Unequal rush, and mingle with the storm.

* My Readers will quickly perceive that this allusion is not new, though differently applied.

Fired with the love of Rhyme, and, let me say,
Of Virtue too, I pour'd the moral Lay.
Much like Saint Paul (who solemnly protests
He battled hard at Ephesus with beasts),
I've fought with lions, monkeys, bulls, and bears,
And got half Noah's ark about my ears ;
Nay worse (which all the Courts of Justice know),
Fought with the brutes of Paternoster-Row.

GREAT CRY AND LITTLE WOOL;

OR,

THE SQUADS IN AN UPROAR;

OR,

THE PROGRESS OF POLITICS;

OR,

EPISTLES, POETICAL AND PICTURESQUE,

WRITTEN

BY TOBY SCOUT, ESQUIRE,

A MEMBER OF THE OPPOSITION,

AND EDITED BY PETER PINDAR, ESQUIRE.

Qui vult decipi, decipiatur.

HAD Britain an atom of wit,
And wish'd her lost health to regain,
She would kick out the mountebank Pitt,
And consult her old doctor again.

AH! silly John Bull, or John Ass,
Deserving full many a drub;
Thy long ears can with pleasure let pass
Any lie, any tale of a tub.

Surrounded by Wolves, a gaunt pack,
With praise and fair promise they treat thee;
And so thick in thy headpiece, poor Jack,
Thou suspect'st not their plan is, to eat thee.

TO MR. PITT.

SIR,

THE numerous and too successful attempts of Ministers, and their Hirelings, towards the annihilation of Literary Genius, render it a hazardous undertaking for an Author to commit a liberal sentiment to paper. The mousing Owls of Power have so often hawked at the Eagle, that they have nearly killed it. Your old friend, and unwearied coadjutor, Aris, Governor of the Bastille, has, I am informed, been giving “dreadful note of preparation” with his hammers and files; putting his machinery into the nicest order, for the accommodation of the hands and legs of his free-speaking, free-writing, and free-thinking visitors: machinery which has contracted a most unpleasantly looking rust, for want of proper exercise, owing to the gentle spirit of Addington, rudely shouldered from his station by a rival who was dismissed the public service unaccompanied by a sigh, and who is, by some uncommon fatality, returned to it without one single solitary congratulation. Even his meanest parasite (and I call on

Mr. Canning for the truth of my assertion) is ashamed of an Iö Pæan! But “Quò tendit hoc opus?” you exclaim: “what is the purport of this address?”

It is, lofty Sir, humbly to implore, that, as you have contrived, by a most refined specimen of political jockeyship, to snatch the reins from the hands of your competitors, and vault into the seat of the old State-coach, you will not, in the fury of your career, drive over Mr. Scout and his Editor, from a mistaken conception that a smile at Man John, or Man Will, must be a sanguinary libel at Man John's or Man Will's master. You, Sir, have been an author: witness your various pamphlets on the beauty and necessity of a Constitutional Reform, printed in St. Martin's Lane; and which you endeavoured, by the most indefatigable industry, to suppress, as soon as you arrived at the summit of your modest ambition. As your present reign forebodes rather a transient existence, it is probable that you may, in your zeal for expiring Liberty, resume the goose-quill; and, forgetting the traps laid for poor thoughtless scribblers, may yourself become a melancholy and blushing prisoner. Nec lex est justior ulla, quàm necis artifices arte perire suâ.

P. P.

TO
NICHOLAS SCOUT, ESQUIRE.

EPISTLE I.

PREPARE thy two ears, Cousin Nic* :

Lo ! our senses are all of employ full ;
And our stomachs, of poverty sick,
Will speedily sing, “ Oh be joyful !”

Hope peeps from a cloud on our squad,
Whose beams have been long in deep mourning :
'Tis a lane, let me tell ye, my Lad,
Dev'lish long, that has never a turning.

But now for this nice bit of news :
Know, our worthy old Monarch is dying ;
If we mind but our P's and our Q's,
We shall quickly be roasting and frying.

* Nicholas Scout, Esquire, of the city of York ; a gentleman of fortune, and a first cousin of Toby Scout, Esquire. The Letters were written at the commencement of his Majesty's late unfortunate indisposition.

Yes, Fame will soon publish aloud,
Of good eating and drinking a story ;
As the Sun of Pall Mall, from his cloud,
Will soon be ascending in glory.

Cousin Nicholas, credit the Muse,
Who scorns to report a false tale ;
That the Minister shakes in his shoes :
Harpoon'd is our mighty State-whale.

How he flounders about, and makes fun,
Poor Mister Leviathan Addy !
Lo, his Grandeur, so lately a sun,
Is sinking (sad fall !) to a caddy.

Yes, poor Addy is deep in a bog ;
A nice pickle, you well may suppose :
Very like, between sawyers a log ;
His sharp-tooth'd good friends, and his foes.

Yes, the fellow will get a dry shave ;
His chops will be held pretty fast :
And, thank God, Cousin Nic, we shall have
The loaves and the fishes at last.

Believe every sentence I speak :

Sailing orders are issued ; and mind,
George's anchor is really apeak,
Sails all set, with an excellent wind.

The Doctors, good servants of Death,
Are call'd in, and prescribing their slop.—
When thou wishest to shorten thy breath,
Nic, send for pill, potion, and drop.

Yes, the Quacks are call'd suddenly in ;
Pepys, Heberden, Reynolds, and Millman.
Who would now for his life give a pin ?
Four ! enough, without fever, to kill man.

“ In a number of counsellors,” Nic,
“ There is wisdom,” so says the black cloth :
Yet a proverb as good we may pick,
And as old, “ The more cooks the worse broth.”

On the call for the Knights of the Potion,
Some look pleasant, and others full sad :
All London in short is in motion,
And much on th' alert is our squad.

The tradesmen, once proud of the *feather,
Now cast higher glory their eye on :
Soap, herrings, wigs, mouse-traps, and leather,
Are all looking out for a lion.

The Taylors cross-leg'd on their boards,
Needle-arm'd, hand extended, prepared
To stab the black cloth with their swords,
The instant the death is declared.

And likewise the Milliners all,
Arm'd with scissars and pins, on the gape ;
On the blacks with dire fury to fall,
And cut through deep columns of crape.

Such a Mob around Buckingham-house,
Like Shrimps all together they cling,
That there's scarce room enough for a mouse ;
So alarm'd for the life of the King.

From the mountain, and forest, and fen,
(What a tumult, and bellow, and roar !)
Rush the Beasts to peep into his den,
To spy if good Leo's no more.

T. S.

* The crest of the Prince's arms.

EPISTLE II.

THURLOW now is the Carleton-house Mentor :

You know him, Nic ; bony and big,
With a voice like the voice of a Stentor ;
His old phiz in a bushel of wig.

All the Pages, and Footmen, and Maids,
As his Wisdom march'd solemnly in,
(The impudent varlets and jades !)
Gather'd round him with wonder and grin.

Cousin Nic, thou hast hawk'd, I am sure,
And witness'd a large German Owl
Hopping forth with a visage demure,
To attract all the nations of Fowl :—

At once all the Birds of the air,
Grey, and yellow, green, brown, black, and blue,
Flock around him with chatter and stare :
“ Whence d'ye come ? who the devil are you ? ”

All our laws he will sagely expound,
Give the Parsons a twig by the ear ;
And, to add to the graces of sound,
He will teach his new Pupil to swear.

At some of his thoughts you would wonder ;

Rudely utter'd, we dare not deny :

He resembles a loud Clap of Thunder,

That frightens and brightens the sky.

Yet this in his praise I will say ;

That whether he's sober or mellow,

Though as blunt as a Bear in his way,

True Genius admires the old fellow.

So much for old Gravity, Nic.

Thou exclaimest, “ Oh, tempora mutantur !”

Or swearest I'm clapping a trick.—

Cousin Nic, I'll be cursed if I banter.

T. S.

EPISTLE III.

O FRIENDSHIP ! thy sighs I revere,
Sweet balm on the heart that has bled.
O Love, what a treasure thy Tear !
A rich Pearl on the tomb of the dead.—

How d'y'e relish this flight ? rather rare,
And sublime for the lead of these days.
And now let me talk of a Fair,
Sweet object of pity and praise.

To Blackheath when the messenger came,
And announced the small hopes of a cure,
He expected a smile from the Dame ;
With a purse for his news, to be sure.

When she put her white hand to her pocket,
He thought some rare gift would appear.
Ah, her handkerchief only ! She took it,
Sweet mourner, to hold a fond tear ;—

A tear to which Friendship gave birth ;
And Love, of the Passions the queen :
Pure pearl ! had it dropp'd to the earth,
In treasure how rich it had been !

When he said that the little and great,
That Kings, like their Subjects, must die ;
She look'd up with a visage so sweet,
Bade farewell with so tender a sigh !

Her fate is uncommonly cruel ;
Yet a lustre she casts on her race ;
By the Lord, Cousin Nic, she's a jewel,
And her heart is as fair as her face.

But Scandal has always her mud,
At Merit, poor Merit, to throw ;
Of ink has for ever a flood,
To blacken a bosom of snow.

Sweet Stranger ! from splendour withdrawn,
On wisdom and charity bent,
To Health, and the breeze of the lawn,
To the cottage of Peace and Content.

Cousin Nic, with the subject I'm fired ;
Yes, I've really drunk deep of the stream :
Yet a goose must be really inspired,
When the Virtues and Loves are the theme.

T. S.

EPISTLE IV.

I MET Mother Hun in the Park,
The dam of our great Master Canning;
Forth flying, as brisk as a Lark,
With her Daughters perspiring and fanning.

“ Lord bless me ! my dear Mister Scout,
I’m this moment come up in the hoy :
I’m so glad then, to find ye here out ;
Lord ! Lord ! I’m transparent with joy.

“ Let’s sit down upon one of the benches,
Tell one t’other what each of us hears :
But first, Sir, these Girls are my wenches ;
Jolly jades, Mister Scout, for their years.

“ I’ll sell no more *ointments, not me !
No, that would my consequence level.
Great prefarment I quickly shall see,¹
So my boxes may roll to the Devil.

* It is called Costello’s Collyrium, which has experienced a most uncommon sale, from the very fortunate circumstance of having opened the eyes of the Heaven-born Minister: who, to exhibit to the World a rich specimen of disinterested gratitude, saddled the Nation with pensions on Madame Hun; the Miss Huns, aliàs Cannings, aliàs Reddishes; a pension on her Husband, Mr.

“ You have heard, Mister Scout, I suppose,
How I got my nice little appointment :
Mister Pitt, Sir, whom every one knows,
I open’d his winkers with ointment.

“ So raw and so swell’d was each eye,
He could not peep out of a hole :
Sir, it is not a bit of a lie,
The Man was as blind as a Mole.

“ Sir, Administration is weak ;
Water-gruel, no more, Mister Scout :
We shall soon hear the Minister squeak ;
We shall hear him for mercy cry out.

“ You remember Lord North, the great ox,
How he ran in a frightened condition,
And bellowed to Portland and Fox,
And so form’d the fine famed Coalition.

“ This will happen again, if we please :
Yes, yes, and the thing shall be done ;
And Addington crawl on his knees,
And bellow to Pitt and my son.

Richard Hun ; a place in the West Indies for one Master Reddish, and military promotion in the East for the other ; and, to crown the whole, a pension for poor Uncle Tommy, the tinker of Somers Town. What a beautiful nest of Caterpillars, ordained, by the Heaven-born economical Minister, to devour the few remaining leaves of the old Oak !

EDITOR.

“ We shall get out the Statue at last ;
It shall be brought forward, it must :
Yes, yes, we'll make up for the past ;
I'll kick up a devil of a dust.

“ Mister Scout, we can now muster strong :
This day will I go to the Grocer's,
And give him a spice of my tongue,
And call them great fat-headed dozers.

“ I'll have Pitt in nice gingerbread too,
Finely gilt, with the anchor of Hope ;
And thus will expose him to view,
In the baker's and pastry-cook's shop.

“ There are numbers of methods, no doubt,
By which popularity's made ;
And I know them all, Master Scout :
I think I'm no fool in that trade.

“ I would take forth an Owl from his hole,
(Now I don't mean a sarcasm on Pitt,)
And I'd put the grave Bird on a pole,
And the Nation should kneel to tee-whit.

“ You have heard of his marriage, I guess ; .

Nice match ! oh, a very nice match !

Half a million of money, not less :

O Lord, 'twas a beautiful catch !

“ Yet how mortally proud they all be !

Three days, Sir, before the grand wedding,

Bundled off were my Daughters and mè ;

Pack'd off in the mail, bed and bedding :—

“ For we wern't of importance enough,

Our court to great people to pay ;

And so we were all order'd off,

For fear of disgracing the day.

“ But the pride of the Scotts was so hurt,

When they found we sold bobbin and inkle :

O Lord ! 'twas descending to dirt ;

It was coupling a Whale with a Winkle.

“ I dare swear, if I sat by her side,

Her elbow away she would twitch,

For fear of her elegant hide :

I might probably give her the itch.

“ Proud Ma’am need not toss up her nose,
Who perhaps owes her fortune to jobbing :
A shop is no sin, I suppose ;
And jobbing’s no better than bobbin.

“ I could whisper a word to a Scott ;
That among the great munchers of curry,
The lacks are not easily got,
Nor honestly made in a *hurry.

“ Slife ! what’s all her money to me,
That I’m to be clapp’d on the shelf ?
Thank Heaven, I’m as wholesome as she,
And a Christian as good as herself.

“ What signify riches and titles,
What signifies richness of blood,
Or what even the nicest of victuals,
If a body ben’t vartuous and good ?

“ Pray, had Adam and Eve an estate,
Poor souls, when they dropp’d from the Moon ?
No : they had not a knife nor a plate ;
Not a table, nor dish, nor a spoon.

* General Scott, the Father of Mrs. Canning, made an immense fortune in the East Indies, by his profession, and a lucky throw of the dice.

“ Does she think I ha’n’t larn’d to behave?

Does she think I can’t sit to a table?

That my parents good scholarship gave,

To eat hay with a Horse in a stable?

“ That my meat, like a Hound, I should tug;

That Hog-like my grinders would work?

Does she think I should cough in the mug,

And pick all my teeth with a fork?

“ Or snuffle or grunt in my broth,

Then whisk out a mouthful of wind;

Lick my plate, for to save the clean cloth,

And drink healths to the fellows behind?

“ Does she think I was born to be dumb?

Of my tongue that I have not the use?

Made to listen, and stare, and be mum,

And cannot say ‘Boh!’ to a goose?

“ She thinks I’m a heathen, no doubt;

Some outlandish beast, that I howl.

I waan’t born, no indeed, Mister Scout,

In a wood, to be scared by an owl.

“ Ups and downs we all see, Master Scout :

This World makes a terrible touse ;

Here and there, Sir, some in and some out ;

Now a man, and next minute a mouse.

“ Son Canning shall start up a lord ;

Great speaker, a wonderful thinker !

A staff for my Boy of the sword ;

Rank for Richard, and Tommy the tinker.

“ My Girls will so blaze on the town,

Their chariots and phaetons sporting ;

Billet-dowksing with Bucks, derry down !

Such a kettle of fish ! such a courting !

“ Lord St. Vincent must go, he shall go ;

His anchor's apeak, never doubt it :

For the man for his office, you know,

Is the man who knows nothing about it.

“ Lord ! what has he done worth admiring ?

No huge mighty matters, depend on't :

A little hard fighting, and firing,

And boarding, and so there's an end on't.

“ Well, Heavens bless ye ! Call soon on me, pray,
To settle th’ affairs of the Nation :

I now can afford to be gay ;

And we’ll have a nice jollification.”——

Thus ended this Nightingale’s song :

What a bore, Cousin Nic ! what a clack !

What a cock-and-bull tale ! what a Tongue !

Zounds, ’twould distance the Fly of a Jack.

EPISTLE V.

CORINNA talks loud in her airs :

“ I will have what I’ve fix’d my delight on :
A fig for some people ! who cares ?

Nothing less than the Duchess of Brighton !

“ Ye Dames all so pure and so chaste,
Who have blink’d me, I’ll handsomely swinge :
Of the cup of contempt ye shall taste,
Or I ne’er knew the sweets of revenge.

“ With envy your pride shall be kill’d ;
To my circles ye shall not be beckon’d :
With Princes my room shall be fill’d,
And my name shall be Ninon the Second.

“ I know who dared squint at my routs :
I know who ne’er ask’d me to theirs,
Who turn’d up their impudent snouts ;
For their honour, Lord ! fill’d with such fears !

“ I’ve a catalogue fair of nice Dames,
A pretty black list of each chit ;
And if Vengeance, dear Vengeance, have flames,
The torch shall be speedily lit.

“ Too long have I acted the Dove ;
I will soon play the part of the Viper :
I will rant like the Mistress of Jove ;
I shall dance, and the King pay the Piper.”—

The Lady was clever and pleasant ;
Much a favourite, of yore, with the men ;
Nice picking about her, a Pheasant :
Now, tasteless and tough, an old Hen.

Though the Loves are all fled, the young elves,
With the actions of youth she will bore us :
Time always stands still with ourselves ;
We think the World grows old before us.

Toad-eaters rush in like a tide,
To their interest most lovingly steady ;
And, to tickle the trout of her pride,
She's begraced and beduchess'd already.

Is she beautiful, so much the better ;
By this magic thy business is done :
One half of a word, or a letter,
Is enough ; 'tis the sine quâ non.

O Beauty, how form'd to beguile !

Thy charm will for ever endure :

Lo, the loftiest, seduced by thy smile,

Descend, like the Hawk, to the lure !—

Thy pride, I suppose, may be hurt,

But the World is a devilish queer stick :

Dost thou wish for the smiles of a Court ;

Make love to a petticoat, Nic.

EPISTLE VI.

COUSIN Nic, couldst thou see some Court faces!

Most rueful indeed, a yard long.

Gone, gone are the smiles and the graces ;

Most capital subjects for Song.

I've just met with some of the crew :

Bull-head Cardigan, dead in the dumps ;

Salisbury, looking confoundedly blue,

And his Countess as blue as poor Numps.

Maids of Honour all wandering about

Are seen, with a sorrowful air ;

With their lily-white Handkerchiefs out :

Sad Flags, cousin Nic, of despair.

Old Liver—, you know who I mean ;

Old Jenk—, of the closet old Rats ;

Will feel his bones cracking, I ween,

(Heaven grant it!) by one of our Cats.

Smart lads in the Council will shine,

Instead of the stupid and tubbish ;

Choice Spirits, instead of dull Swine ;

Bright Jewels, instead of old Rubbish.

The Bed-chamber Lords are in dudgeon ;
And, cropsick, the Grooms and the Pages,
As if struck on the head with a bludgeon,
Seem to say, " Farewell honour and wages ! "

The Cooks in a pitiful stew,
The Scullions half out of their wits :
" Adieu to the platters ! Adieu
To the dripping-pans, saucepans, and spits ! "

Lord Salisbury's poor Butler and Groom,
With other young Knights of the Mews,
And other young Knights of the Broom,
For their places all shake in their shoes.

As a whisper is current abroad,
When the Prince shall arrive at the Throne,
Farewell to the farce of an Ode ;
Thus " the Black's occupation is gone. "

Or, should this same Ode be in vogue,
Musicians will come from that class
Which know the sweet Lark from a Hog,
Braham's voice from the bray of an Ass*.

* Unfortunately for the credit of his Majesty's Band of Music, it is not composed of musicians, but of people of mean occupations, who receive the salaries, and hire, for a trifling sum, performers to fiddle for them. Lord Salisbury knows all about it.

Pitt is just like a Fox, for a Hen,
Slily squinting and creeping about.
Snuffing wildly the wind ; but what then,
If Dame Partlet refuse to come out ?

How cut down, from the Line to a Lugger !
The Grocers observe him at Dover,
And may send him a pound of brown sugar ;
But as to the Statue, 'tis over.

Ah Lucifer, Son of the Morning,
How fall'n ! ah, how lost all thy light !
No longer the Heavens adorning,
Poor planet, good night t'ye, good night.

And yet, though the fellow I hate,
I still must acknowledge his merit :
Though his quackeries and insolent state
I despise, let me honour his spirit.

Retired from political battle,
To his castle, to learn to be wary,
He astories the fields and the cattle
With tactics yclep'd military.

He has got all the technicals, pat ;
Studying Saxe and Vauban, night and day :
And already has kill'd one Ram Cat,
Three Magpies, two Owls, and a Jay.

Over hedges and ditches and quags,
Huge feats he is seen to perform :
He has torn a poor Dunghill to rags,
And taken a Bog-house by storm.

To Pitt are all weapons alike :
With his bayonet he stabb'd an old Sow ;
He pierced a large Calf with a pike,
And slew with a Broad-sword the Cow.

Many Rams has he tumbled about,
And crack'd of some Yearlings the scull ;
Put of Oxen a score to the rout,
And leap'd on the back of the Bull.

For his tutor he takes General Moore,
As great in a battle his skill is ;
And thus a fit Chiron, I'm sure,
For instructing his pupil Achilles.

Together for glory they run :

 If a Hedgehog they meet, he is dead ;

If a Squirrel, bounce, off goes a gun ;

 If a Mushroom, smack, off goes his head.

Is a Stump of a Tree in their way,

 With a fury heroic they rend it :

Is a Mole-hill ; in battle-array,

 In column, they march to defend it.

On counterscarps, curtains, and ravelins,

 Mines, sausages, bridges, and ditches,

Pikes, bayonets, ramrods, and javelins,

 Palisadoes, and guns and their breeches,—

They so talk ! such a history of wars !

 Even at meal-times, untired is the tongue ;

When, lo ! with the voice of a Mars,

 They sing of proud triumph the Song :—

INVITATION TO BUONAPARTE:

A DUET,

BY MR. PITT AND GENERAL MOORE.

BUONAPARTE, come over :
We'll meet thee at Dover ;
And the Generals our forces commanding
Will salute thy two ears
With three excellent cheers,
And a warm Cornish hug at thy landing.

Lewis, Jerome, and Joe,
Let us see too, and know,
With thy Uncles and Aunts, a brave band :
Bring likewise thy Cousins,
Of whom thou hast dozens ;
And bring the old fox, Talleyrand.

Thou'lt be frighten'd to see
How brisk we shall be,
To bestow every thing in our power :
Most excellent air ;
Nice lodgings to spare,
Even the best to be found in the Tower.

As French manners are thine,
And so very divine,
Thou never wilt fail of delight ;
For the monkeys by day
Will chatter away,
And the tigers howl music at night.

As thou oft didst protest
That a fight is a feast,
And as no man indeed can be thinner ;
Thou shalt have, not a pullet,
But a dainty hot bullet,
And a pike for thy teeth after dinner.

Come the Consul whenever he will,
(And he means it, when Neptune is calmer,)
Pitt will send him a damn'd bitter pill
From his fortress, the Castle of Walmer.

T. S.

EPISTLE VII.

LAST night I dropp'd in on a Club ;
The great Mister Squibb in the chair,
Who became a grand bear from a cub,
Important in look as Lord-may'r :—

Or a certain Law Lord of our days,
A great undeciding decider ;
Very rarely a subject of praise,
But oft of a wicked derider ;—

Who hems with much wisdom, and ha's,
And seldom concludes in a minute ;
And whose wig might as well in a cause
Be employed, as the head that is in it.

Thou hast witness'd, full many a time,
The magic that waits upon place ;
Where the note of the owl is sublime,
And sheer grease a fine sample of grace.

From the coal and the smoke of his shop,
To the bench let black Mulciber move ;
Lo ! his tools into consequence hop,
And his sledge is the sceptre of Jove.—

Squibb now with much gravity rose,
A most solemn and sanctified look :
“ Pray, inform us all, what you suppose
Is our Sovereign’s complaint, Mister Puke.”

Puke answer’d : “ Indeed, Mister Squibb,
Of opinions I’m not a free giver ;
But I think that a child with a bib
Must pronounce the disease in the liver.”

Now Gripe started up, in his pride,
Whom no death of a Patient affrights :
“ Mister Puke, you and I differ wide ;
’Tis no more in the liver than lights.”

Puke, nettled, now answer’d and said,
“ Though your wisdom was never suspected ;
If I know any thing of my trade,
Mister Gripe, ’tis the liver’s affected.”—

“ Sir, I don’t think you do,” answer’d Gripe,
With a smile, and a squint, and a leer.
Now Puke, in a rage at this wipe,
Thought of dealing a box on the ear ;—

But sagely suspecting return,
And possessing some love for his hide,
He was forced in his bowels to burn,
And submit, to Dame Prudence, Miss Pride.

How few boast the wisdom of Puke,
A present not every man's lot!
How easier to bear a rebuke,
Than a sword in the heart or a shot!

Honour likes to shoot, stab, and to slice,
When affronted ; wild, panting for blood:
Very strange, that a Lady so nice
Should prefer such indelicate food!

“ Well,” quoth Puke, “ thou shalt have thy own way,
Master Gripe; or to prate, or to kill :
Allow me the freedom to say,
Thou art vor et præterea nil.”—

“ Well,” quoth Gripe, “ what hast thou been a saying,
Master Puke, that redounds to thy glory?
Goose-gabbling, a jack-ass's braying :
To talk Latin, mere nugæ canoræ.”

To high words now the Disputants rose,
Indeed words not in flattery rich :
Gripe talk'd loudly of pulling a nose ;
Master Puke talk'd of kicking a breech.

“ Thy physic,” quoth Gripe, “ is all slop,
Not fit for a pig or a porter :
Could I catch thee but once in my shop,
I would pound thee to dust in my mortar.”—

“ With such fellows,” quoth Puke, in disdain,
“ I scorn, like a blackguard to wrestle ;
Yet, Gripe, had thy head any brain,
I would dash it all out with my pestle.”

The Company now interfer'd,
To set those hot matters to rights :
They drank friends, and no longer was heard
The dispute between Liver and Lights.—

And now, Cousin Nic, I beg leave
(As labour and I don't agree),
To my pen a small respite to give,
And indulge in a pinch of rappee.

Peace now being happily made,

Up rose on his legs Master Sly ;

And thus to the Chairman he said,

While “ Hear him ! hear ! hear ! ” was the cry :—

“ Sir, Administration is weak ;

Very feeble, exceedingly, Sir :

It has not a man that can speak,

Not a tongue on a topic to stir.

“ The Premier I grant very good,

Fit to join with his wife in debate ;

Prescribe a child’s physic and food :

But he should not prescribe for a state.

“ His judgment on mutton and beef,

I allow him without hesitation ;

And of tea too, it is my belief,

There is no sounder judge in the nation.

“ In a boarding-school too he might shine,

And make a most excellent teacher ;

Nay more, make a decent Divine,

And perhaps prove a popular preacher.

“ But we want, Sir, a man of deep thought,
Of political, sharp, penetrations ;
In the school of experience, Sir, taught ;
Well versed in the interests of Nations ;—

“ The man from intrigue who refrains ;
Scorns to creep, Spaniel-like, to disgrace ;
Who, firm in his virtue, disdains
To enrich an old cat for his place :—

“ The man who would die for the State,
Of freedom the glorious defender :
Not a fellow of infinite prate ;
Not a noisy and bullying pretender :—

“ Not the man who encourages spies,
For poor Liberty laying the snare ;
Affected no more by her cries,
Than a Poacher by squeaks of a Hare :—

“ Not a childish, vindictive, poor fool,
Against men who may smile at his name ;
Who fancies the praise of each tool,
Nothing less than the plaudit of Fame.

“ 'Tis the man who, sublime, for the State,
His neck to the axe would submit,
To bless it, to snatch it from fate ;
And that man is the great William Pitt:—

“ Great man, who even kings would resist,
And pawn for the Realm his last shirt ;
Too virtuous to make Civil List
The fount of corruption and dirt :—

“ Great man, so sublime in his station ;
The Pilot who weather'd the Storm !
Good man, who ne'er promised the Nation
A thing which he did not perform !

“ How nobly from office he went ;
Great man, not a doit in his fob !
Great man, with his conscience content,
Retiring as poor as poor Job !

“ He wish'd not to burthen the Nation ;
He wish'd not for mountains of pelf :
He wish'd for his Country's salvation ;
He never once thought of himself.

“ Other barks on the ocean of time
Shall be lost, into atoms shall split ;
While, towering in triumph sublime,
Through the foam moves the great William Pitt.

“ Of sweet Woman he courts not the smile,
Of Venus ne’er seen in the school ;
An animal rare in our isle :
Heaven grant that he mayn’t be a *mule !”

Having finish’d his splendid Oration,
Down solemnly sat Master Sly ;
When lo ! of a different persuasion,
Up rose, in much form, Dicky Dry :—

“ Mister Chairman, the very neat speech
Just deliver’d by good Mister Sly,
Demonstrates how well he can preach :
His assumptions, I beg to deny.

“ Sir, ’tis no very difficult matter
To be florid, and roundly assert ;
With irony, names to bespatter ;
And characters cover with dirt.

* I do not allude to the proverbial quality of that animal, but to his well-known inability of perpetuating his species.

“ I allow his Oration is neat ;
Full of point, Sir, I freely admit :
But, Sir, the distinction is great,
Very great, between wisdom and wit.

“ Mister Sly must be surely in sport,
So ill is the character suited :
Mister Sly may have found out his Port ;
Not the talents and virtues imputed.

“ Survey him in Westminster-hall ;
Poor Youth, not a brief in his bag !
There he look'd very small, very small :
Not a client to make his tongue wag.

“ Next behold him in league with a Duke,
Busy then as the Devil in a storm ;
Attempting poor gudgeons to hook
With a bait, a fine bait call'd reform !

“ Pretty doctrines they scatter'd around !
Pretty letters to Sharman they wrote !
Sir, I quickly should visit Lob's pound,
Should I dare even a passage to quote.

“ Master Aris and I, very soon,
Should be trying of handcuffs a pair ;
When his Honour would teach me a tune,
‘ Bread and water,’ a favourite old air.

“ Well, at length Master Billy got in.—
Arrived at the summit of power,
What’s reform?—Oh ! a damnable sin ;
A demon, from that very hour.

“ Now terrier, cur, spaniel, and hound,
(No matter, rain, sun-shine, or storm,)
Were to hunt ; and, whenever they found,
To strangle that vermin, Reform.

“ Now trace him in Administration :
Take a peep at his pretty vagaries ;
His rare engines for calming the Nation,
Messieurs Reeves and mild Governor Aris.

“ Of kindness so full, the sweet Saint ;
So ready some comfort to give us :
When we open’d our mouths with complaint,
His Jails open’d theirs to receive us.

“ Next at Newgate behold the great man,
Sad scene of sad irrecollection !

Where tongues with much liberty ran,
And dealt in most saucy reflection.

“ What a pity that memory should fail !
Great pity indeed, I repeat it,
That a yesterday's action or tale,
To-day one should cleanly forget it !

“ What a day of dire mortification !
What a day of proud triumph for foes !
How nimbly the gem reputation
Was going, that day, to the crows !

“ Mister Sly says his Hero was poor,
Which a deal to his glory redounds :
If the hunter was lean, we are sure
The lean Nimrod well fatten'd his hounds.

“ Mister Sly says his Hero, so pure,
Never courted the smiles of the Ladies.—
Sweet Joseph ! not Woman allure !
What a comical sort of a blade 'tis !

“ That Pitt from the Ladies should fly,
Is rather an odd sort of whim ;
But I never should wonder, not I,
If the Women all scamper’d from him.

“ From his credit I scorn to detract,
For candour I always revere ;
And if Fame ever mention’d one act,
’Twas in whispers no mortal could hear.

“ Civil List, Sir, ’s a dangerous affair :
On this head he had better been mum ;
Wisdom looks on that List with a stare.
But no more on that subject, Sir, hum !

“ ‘ Great man !’ said the great Mister Drake,
‘ Whose virtues and talents surprise :
Not of wretched mortality’s make ;
But sent us express from the skies.’—

“ If Pitt was sent down from on high,
The World in opinion must join,
And pronounce with one voice, that the Sky,
Like Houndsditch, pass’d counterfeit coin.”

T. S.

AN INSTRUCTIVE EPISTLE
TO
JOHN PERRING, ESQUIRE,

LORD MAYOR OF LONDON;

ON THE PROPOSAL OF AN ADDRESS OF THANKS TO THE RIGHT
HONOURABLE HENRY ADDINGTON, FOR HIS GREAT AND UPRIGHT CONDUCT WHEN PRIME MINISTER.

Justum et tenacem propositi Virum. HORACE.

“ SUBLIME, who sacred holds his word;
Loved by the Virtues, Wisdom, Wit;
By Freedom's friends caress'd, adored.”—
Muse, send this character to Pitt.

EPISTLE

TO THE

WORSHIPFUL THE LORD MAYOR.

BELIEVE the Bard, my good Lord May'r,
That we have been upon the stare,
For your Address for just administration ;
Which brought the Premier so much fame,
With peerless lustre crown'd his name,
And spread a smile of pleasure o'er the Nation.

Wild Expectation, on her toe,
Has been a month at least, I know,
Looking for this fair tribute of your thanks.
Perchance some Demon, secret, sly,
Has mark'd th' affair with jealous eye,
And, deep in dark intrigue, been playing pranks :—

Some Pittite, mad, vindictive, crost,
Because the statue has been lost,
Has tamper'd with some Aldermen, I fear ;

And, Men of Common-council greeting
In sad unguarded hour of eating,
Mix'd ministerial poison with their beer.

Poor iron-dust, through playful fate,
Attracted by the magnet State !
Or let us rather call them straws
Whirl'd from their dirt (their native sphere)
By sudden gusts, aloft, here, there,
Of babes the wonder and applause.—

I've seen that Demon's cloven foot :
In spite of mobbing, damning hoot,
The daring Imp has learn'd to stand his ground ;
Well steel'd his heart, and bronz'd his face,
He cocks his nose upon disgrace,
And hunts his game, a persevering Hound.

And now, Lord May'r, I shall suppose
That Addington's inveterate foes
Impede this honest scheme of thine ;
Then take this minikin of mine :—

ADDRESS

TO

THE RIGHT HONOURABLE HENRY ADDINGTON.

YOUR good, your mild administration
(An epoch in this happy Nation),
Our grateful thanks demands ;
And let us here express our grief,
That Fate, at times an artful thief,
Should tear you from our hands.

Though Demons may in league unite
To blur thy Star's illustrious light,
That brightens now the age ;
Lo ! History, with her golden pen,
To give thy name to future men,
Shall fill with thee her page.

Oh, may the men who seize thy place,
Their country's glory ne'er disgrace
By little, base, intriguing arts !
Instead of conquering, by their crimes,
Our sacred liberties and limbs,
Subdue, by noble deeds, our hearts !

SOMETHING like this, Lord May'r, I want ;
This is no parasitic cant :

Thou know'st of Addington the merit.

Let Calumny her venom spit,
And Envy hiss, and tools of Pitt
Employ their cruel coal-black spirit.

Without disguise, that Pitt I hate ;
Despise his mind, and parrot-prate ;
His minions, with disdain I see 'em :
And would the King (my wish devout)
Make all the motley pack turn out,
I'd seek Saint Paul's, and sing Te Deum.—

Dear Perring, we are Devonshire-born,
Where Plenty fills her golden horn :
And whether sober, Sir, or mellow,
Old Devon certainly contains
Now, as of yore, some splendid brains,
And many a brave and honest fellow.

Then let us not disgrace her name,
But give her star a brighter flame ;
Exalt, if possible, her credit ;
Yes, boldly act, and write, and think :
And mind ; my horn's last drop of ink,
To raise her glory, lo, I'll shed it.

Thy planet led thee to the East,
To fill with precious gems thy chest,
And eke with precious ointment :

Mine westward order'd me to roam ;
And, after years, come loaded home
With sterling—disappointment.

And yet, I'm not a broken spirit ;
The Public has observed my merit,
As well as India thine :

To which kind Public, low I bow,
Its candour and its taste allow ;
For gratitude is mine.

Now to the point. Exert thy might,
And separate the day from night ;
Discern good friends from foes :
For thou hast brethren dark and deep,
Amid thy flock some scabby sheep ;
Aye, many a one, God knows.

Yet should an Alderman demur,
Straight strip him of his gown and fur,
That gown of vivid scarlet ;
And should the Council dare refuse
To sign th' Address, stain'd be the blues
Of every gravy-gulping Varlet.

I fear, that Linen-draper's* jaw,
Which gives to Liverymen the law,
(Forsaking trade, in hour most evil,
Laxen, cotton, dimity, and muslin,)
The pates of Common-council puzzling,
Has lately play'd the very devil.

Of such oh may the savoury Haunch
Ne'er enter the unhallow'd paunch,
Great rival of a bag :

Before their mouths may Brawn advance,
And Turtles fat and Turbots dance,
And balk each well-worn snag !

Down their plump cheeks may custards stream,
Rich trifle, syllabubs, ice-cream :

And may they writhe and grin,
And spread their tantalized poor chops,
To catch the luscious sugar'd drops ;
And not one drop get in !

Nay more : may Giants of Guildhall,
Whom mortals Gog and Magog call,

* Mister Waithman, a great City Orator, a Son of Liberty and Opposition, and élève of John Wilkes, of volcano immortality ; who, from his great and cheap shop in Bridge-street, Blackfriars, facing the noble monument called Obelisk, raised and dedicated to his glorious Patron, draws patriotic inspiration for his motions and speeches.

Leap down on every head,
When next they meet on Lord Mayor's Day,
Their vows to Gluttony to pay;
And crush each sconce of lead.

Oh strain each nerve, my good Lord May'r!
Merit like Addington's is rare :
To leave him, what a pity !
The thunder of my Muse's Lays
Shall shake Parnassus with his praise,
And thou shalt shake the City.

THE
HORRORS OF BRIBERY;

A
PENITENTIAL EPISTLE,

FROM
PHILIP HAMLIN, TINMAN, TO THE RIGHT HONOURABLE
HENRY ADDINGTON, PRIME MINISTER.

TO WHICH IS ADDED
A POSTSCRIPT;

CONTAINING
Sensible Animadversions on Judge Grose's solemn and serious Address to the unfortunate Tinnan.

—Omnia Romæ
Cum pretio. JUVENAL.

POOR Hamlin, hammering in his tin-shop, thought
That Ministers, like Saucepans, might be bought;
That Courtiers, like a Fish-kettle or Platter,
Were made of very malleable matter.

A PENITENTIAL EPISTLE.

FROM those hard walls, amidst whose awful round,
The ear with horror feels the clanking chain ;
Where sighs from hollow vaults unpitied sound,
And tears of bitterest anguish stream in vain :—

Where faint, and fasten'd to th' unfeeling floor,
The wretch desponding mourns amid his gloom ;
Expecting Death's dread hand t'unbolt his door,
And lead him half-alive into the tomb ;—

From those hard walls poor Hamlin pour'd his sighs,
Much marvelling how he came to such a place ;
And, lifting his two melancholy eyes,
Address'd the Author of his sad disgrace :—

“ An't please your Worship, hear me, Sir, I pray ;
Hear me a bit. Lord ! Lord ! I thort no harm ;
No more, please God, than of my dying day :
I ne'er once thort of making zich a starm.

“ I thort that voakes were bribed in Lenden too,
Az well az in the country ; zo thort I :
I caan’t but zay I look’d confounded blue,
To hear the Terney-general’s grievious cry.

“ Lord ! half the Corporations, zo I’ve heerd,
Look pon a Bribe no more than Bites o’ Vleas ;
And zwallow Oaths, Lord ! not one crume afeard,
Az glibly az they clunk their Bread and Cheese.

“ I never thort that twas a sin or shame ;
Vor, az vor squeamishness, I never vound :
I caan’t zay that I thort myself to blame,
That voakes wud quarl way two good thousand pound.

“ I know, the last election, Plymouth Votes,
Aye many, many, look’d confounded grum :
They thort of zomething vor to buy mun coats ;
Fath ! happy to have got but half the sum.

“ Gert voakes have slipp’d a purse into my hand,
Guineas ; zometimes twas eight, and zometimes ten :
And zo I thort, with maney at command,
To give a dowzure to gert voak agen.

“ And simply thus I thort that I might do,
Lord! never dreaming of a jail, d’ye zee;
But thort that, az my bettors did zo too,
It never could be wickedness in me.

“ Zomebody ’ll have the place, I do suppose;
A Plymouth man, I make no sort of doubt:
A vote too, but that God Almighty knows;
I really think that things wull zo turn out.

“ Then why not me?—A tinker, very true;
But there’s Squire Canning’s Brother hath a place:
He was a crock and kittle-mender too,
But had good friends to hoist him from disgrace.

“ I own, I wanted Wisdom for my guide;
Indeed twas foolish, out so plain to plump it:
And then methought, so great indeed my pride,
Twas handsomer to buy a thing than mump it.

“ Lord, Sir! I kept a reputable shop;
Lived well, as any body may suppose.
But, so disgraced, what have I now to hope?
My goods will stink in evry body’s nose.

“ ‘ A Newgate Bird liv’th there,’ the voakes will cry ;
Spit pon my goods as they pass by my door.
‘ A jailbird!’ will they hoot as they go by,
And never buy a spoon or save-all more.

“ Nort else had I to offer, Sir, indeed :
Had I a vote, ’t had beed another case ;
Or, had the town of Plimmoth beed my own,
Shure, Sir, you shud a’ had it vor the place.

“ Zoon as old Andrew Hill had slipp’d his breath,
My neighbour Tap, the landlord, comed to me :
Says he, ‘ Leave tinkering, there’s a charming death ;
Hamlin, an angel of a death,’ quoth he.

“ ‘ Zounds, what a noghead and a fool,’ says Tap,
‘ To mend old crocks, and candlesticks, and kittles ;
Thy hammer always going, rap, rap, rap ;
And all to git, forseth, a bit o’ vittels !

“ ‘ Thy road is now as plain to wealth, my lad,
Plain az from Frankfort Gate to Plimmoth Dock ;
Then mind thy P’s and Q’s, and daan’t be mad,
And think no more of kittles or a crock.’

“ Quoth I, ‘ How, neighbour Tap?’ Zo then Tap zed,
‘ Thee now mayst git a birth all warm and snug.’
And then he tould me, Andrew Hill was dead :
Zo he and I together drink’d a mug.

“ ‘ Lord! Hamlin,’ quoth a, ‘ what a beast thee art;
When thou mayst be a Gentleman complete,
To stand here hammering in a stinking shart,
Moiling as black’s the Dowl with mucks and sweat!’

“ Zo, Sir, twas not my fault, your Honour zees ;
Twas landlord Tap, you vind, that made me do’t :
The fellow mused me with a hundred lees,
And I was fool enough to hearken to’t.

“ ‘ Hamlin,’ quoth Tap, and wink’d, ‘ I know gert voak;
They be no better than their neighbours, mun :
At Curts, Lord! Lord! mun, Honesty’s a joke ;
Froth, lekemy fresh-draad Beer: Lord! downrert fun.

“ ‘ Offer the Minister at once the bait,
Thou’lt find a gudgeon; zee if I’m not right :
Now daan’t take squeamish scruples in thy pate ;
Snap is the word at Court, I know he’ll bite.’

“ And zo zays I again to landlord Tap,
‘ Art sartain that he’s hungry, Tap, and poor?’—
‘ Try, sniggle for’n,’ quoth he; ‘ I know he’ll snap.’—
Snap with the devil to’t, it is, I’m shore.

“ ‘ There’s Pitt,’ quoth Tap, ‘ as poor az a charch-mouze,
Without a dish or plate upon his shelf;
Trying to git again into the Howze,
And make a little zomething for his zelf.’

“ Zo did I trust to Tap: and, leek a fool,
Believed the Minister was leek a vish;
Thort leek a poor weak boy that goeth to school,
And leek a blockhead thort to bread my dish.

“ ‘ I know mun all,’ quoth Tap, ‘ I know mun well;
Iss, Hamlin, iss, I know mun well enew:
I’ve had mun at my howze, both gert and smaal;
With all their grandeur, ’tis a dam queer crew.’—

“ ‘ And is it zo?’ zaid I. ‘ It is,’ zaid he;
‘ I tell thee, Hamlin, no man know’th mun better.’—
‘ Then, Tap,’ zaid I in answer to’n, ‘ dost zee,
I’ll do’t: I’ll zend the Chancellor a letter.’

“ And zo I zet me down at once, and wrote
The Letter that did give zo much offence;
I guess that you can zay it all by rote :
Which show’d, I must confess, my want of sense.

“ God know’t^h my heart, I never thort of harm ;
Your conscience, Lord ! I didn’t mean to shock it :
Two thousand pound, I thort, wud keep ye warm ;
Nor thort it was a crime to fill your pocket.

“ Tis cruel hard for to be put to jail,
Vor doing what gert voakes do evry day :
I thort I might come down upon the nail,
And tern a penny in an honest way.

“ I do ashure ye, Sir, that I’m a vote ;
Had many a guinea slipt into my hand :
And thort at any time that I might do’t ;
And thort it was the way of all the land.

“ The gert voakes shooked our hands, as blest as Grigs,
And with King George’s image made mun burn.—
Az gert voak buy us leek a lot of Pigs,
Why not we buy the gert voak in return ?

“ Tap bid me write, and gauge the sarvants all;
 And bid me try your Worship’s maid and man:
 But, leek a Blockhead, I forgot it all;
 And wrote to measter, stead of Joan and Jan.

“ I must zay this for Tap; he bid me squint,
 And zee how things were managed in your houze:
 If covetous leek zome voakes in the law*;
 Not only starved theirselves, but evry mouze.

“ I’ve heerd, Sir, a fine Lady†, zome time dead,
 Did keep a shop vor Titles, and got rich;
 And sold mun just as bakers sell their Bread,
 Or as a porkman sellth a Ham or Flitch:—

“ Up jump’d Sir Jan, Sir James, Sir George, Sir Will,
 Up with his star and garters rose my lord:
 This was the case, I hear, and may be still;
 And places too she sold, to make a hoard.

“ Now there’s Lord Rolle, that I remember well
 When simple Mister Rolle, not one crumb more;
 What made’n a great lord? Lord! I can tell:
 Twas Pitt, and Devonshire interest, to be shore.

* The late Lord Kenyon, of miserable memory; and a present great Law Lord.

† Madame Schwellenberg.

“ Lord bless us ! I remember that as how
He was a simple Squire, upon my soul ;
And meend too that his wife, my lady now,
Call’d ’n nort else but Janny, Janny Rolle.

“ Now by God’s marcy, and your kindness, Sir,
If ever from this Hell* I should escape ;
From home I shall be so ashamed to stir,
There’ll be such talk, and laugh, and grin, and gape !

“ I never now shall have my pretty rambles ;
Afeard of evry Butcher, evry Drab :
Ne’er go for beef and mutton to the shambles,
Nor to the fish-stalls for a plaice or crab.

“ I ne’er must put my nose upon the Hoe† ;
The people’s jeers wud give me zuch a shock :
And slily by Mill-Prison I must go,
To sell my pots and dripping-pans in Dock.

* It is asserted, and from very respectable authority, that this pathetic Elegy was sent to the Minister before the sentence took place, and produced a most fortunate peripætia in this Newgate Drama.

† A most delightful Walk for the Plymouthians, now totally neglected on account of its come-at-ibility beauty.

“ The World’s too bad, I speak it to their shame ;
When a Man vall’th, the meanest rogue will bang un :
Zo with a Dog too ; give un a bad name,
And evry body hath a rope to hang un.

“ Voakes will point at me as I go along ;
The very Boys will hold me by the tail,
And crack their jokes, and zing a jeering song,
And whoop, ‘ Here’s Mister Hamlin come from jail !’

“ I thought of high preferment, I declare ;
But that, I fear, will never come to pass :
That I should be one day our Plymouth mare ;
But, Lord ! my lot’s to be a Plymouth ass.

“ Instead of marching proudly through our town,
Amidst the town-voakes all with wondering faces ;
Deck’d all in scarlet, Lord ! a fine fur gown,
Just leek a King, behind the silver maces ;—

“ Lord ! Lord ! to be confin’d in theese dark place,
And have a rope ; for zo it may befall :
Ah me ! it is a very different case
Between a room in Newgate, and Guildhall.

“ Shore, Sir, I’ve drink’d your health a hundred times,
And never dream’d that you could be uncivil;
Have wish’d some vokes the gallows for their crimes,
And wish’d the warhoop fellows to the devil.

“ Indeed, Sir, you’re a favourite with us,
Thort mild and human ; yes, indeed you are :
But Pitt, and all his dirty gang, we cuss ;
Though Dock and Plimmoth git so much by war.

“ We hate the Grenville faction, hate mun all :
A pack of hungry Hounds, just like starvation ;
That snarl, and quarl, and grin, and bark, and bawl,
Wanting to burst their guts upon the Nation.

“ I love his Majesty, deny’t who can ;
True to his government, and evry thing.
Whene’er he dyeth, Heaven bless the gentleman !
I daan’t think we shall git a better King.

“ Now, Sir, be please to let a body know,
And let me zee the end of all my cares ;
That, if I’m to be hang’d, Sir, I may go,
And make my peace with God, and zay my pray’rs.”

Such are the Tinman's tuneful Sighs,
That from his gloomy mansion rise,
Something like Song from dying Swans of old :
Then, Addington, thy rigour quit,
Nor boast the iron heart of Pitt ;
But show that thine was form'd in Mercy's mould.

Yes, let the Culprit be forgiven ;
No actual rape took place, thank Heaven !
He wish'd to buy thine Honour's pure embraces.
I own, with awkwardness he strove ;
A country bumkin in his love,
A simple Cymon 'midst the polish'd Graces.

Then smile, and put the Bumkin out of pain,
And send him whistling to his shop again*.

* " And whistled as he went, for want of thought." Cymon and Iphigenia.

POSTSCRIPT.

BEFORE the Penitential Epistle could come from the Press, the awful sentence was pronounced upon my simple Countryman; who has, I find, been agreeably disappointed, in not being ordered for execution. This case of an attempt at political simony having been most impartially and fairly weighed in the scales of political justice, it has been determined that Three Months' further habitation in a jail, and the payment of One Hundred Pounds, will be the precise quantum of punishment due to the enormity of the offence.

The learned Judge (Grose), with the usual professional solemnity, in an eloquent and impressive address to the poor trembling Tinman, informed him, among other important matters, that, for a First Minister to receive a Bribe with a view of securing a preference in the appointment to any office where merit alone should be consulted, would be a high misdemeanor and a breach of trust. "It must therefore," continued the learned Judge, "be considered as no small misdemeanor, for any individual to attempt to overturn this corner-stone of the Constitution.

“Men in all times,” continued the learned Judge, “have held such attempts in abhorrence; and more convincing proofs cannot be given, than the few instances on record, of persons being accused of similar offences. It was a practice,” continued the learned Judge, “which, if countenanced, would lead to mischief incalculable; as in every office, civil and military, men of ability must give place to the idle, the ignorant, and the corrupt.”

With every deference to the learned Judge, I must beg the indulgence of a trifling comment on this part of his Lordship’s solemn address to the Tinman. That a Prime Minister should be superior to a Bribe, in order that Merit alone should receive the meed of her labours, may readily be admitted; but had the learned Judge observed the transactions of the World, and more particularly the political World, he would have discovered that few, very few, have founded their pretensions to high honours and lucrative appointments on the basis of such an unfashionable and solitary claim as merit. The pedestals on which the most conspicuous figures of this Kingdom are elevated, are composed of a stained and rotten stone, instead of the unsullied, solid, nay, immortal marble. Was it merit that pleaded for the “heaven-born Minister *?” God mend the poor angels he left behind, if formed of similar materials! Was it merit that created him Chancellor of the Exchequer? Was it merit that introduced his Brother, of sleeping and yawning memory, to the first situation in the naval department? Was it the merit of his most disinterested Associates, that procured themselves such a handsome provision, on their various resignations? Had there been a single blush in the skin of a Pitt, it must have appeared on that occasion. Was it merit that raised the humble Bel-lows-blower of the late huge Organ of Saint Stephen’s Chapel (videlicet Master Canning); placed him on the back of that lean tame jack-ass the Nation, with Mother Hun, and her daughters from the country theatrical barns; Brother Tom the Tinker, from Pentonville; and Brother Bob, a common Soldier, from Botany Bay? Such is the respectable and motley group, worthy the pencil of some modern Hogarth. Such was the heaven-born Minister’s laudable remuneration of virtuous labours, and such his boasted political economy! Was it the modest voice of merit that pleaded for Lord Grenville, and his poor Wife? But I am tired of putting questions that raise a smile at the instant they are proposed.

* So sublimely denominated by one Mister Drake, in a parliamentary oration.

The assertion of the learned Judge, that “men in all times have held Bribes in abhorrence,” wants confirmation; and that the “few accusations” of the commission of the crime “on record” are “convincing proofs” of such abhorrence, is certainly fallacious. Thus do I deny both premises and conclusion. That Bribery is not held in universal abhorrence, I appeal to every man that can see and hear, as well as to thousands that taste and feel; and I assert, that the paucity of accusations for Bribery which appear on record is more owing to the love and acceptance of the Bribe, than the abhorrence. Such is my humble sentiment of the present state of political corruption, so diametrically opposite to those of the Judge, who, I am inclined to think, argues from particulars to universals; and, from the purity of his own heart, infers the virtue of the Million: which strongly induces me to believe that the learned Judge is, in politics, more of a simple Parson Adams * than an artful and unprincipled Machiavel.

* A character drawn by Fielding, in that excellent novel Joseph Andrews.

So universal is this terrible vice, that even the sacred region of Parnassus is not exempt from its taint. Mister Francis Rivington, lately a great Commander in the Bridewell Volunteers, and a great Bookseller to boot; and Mister Charles Rivington, great among the saints of Methodism, and eke great in partnership with his Brother Francis; also the Reverend Mister Nares, great in evangelical Children, called Sermons, poor still-born brats; moreover, the Reverend Mister Beloe, great in literary Children, long since dead, named Translations, Poems, &c. (the aforesaid two reverend Gentlemen being now the two great spinning jennies of the Rivington manufacture of monthly *criticism); these, I say, sit on the apex of Parnassus, and dispose of places to literary Ladies and Gentlemen who sigh for a niche in the temple of Immortality. As criticism is considered by the aforesaid gentlemen in the light of a trade, like bookselling and preaching, they naturally endeavour to make the most of it. So much for hypocrisy.

• The two Parsons who labour in the critical vineyard called the British Critic, and are the principal workmen. They sit at the right hand of the Rivingtons at every critical dinner; and are looked up to with reverence by the inferior literary scalpers that are invited to the Rivington table, to exhibit their scalps and receive the wages of their execution. To be somewhat serious; I would advise these two reviewing parsons, who pretend to piety and morals, not to damn a little amatory line in one Author, and recommend in a strain of panegyric a work that would have defied the prurient powers of the famous Lord Rochester to surpass. A pair of Divines, preaching piety in their pulpits, and recommending (even by quotation) the lewdest songs that ever were sung at the orgies of the Cyprian Goddess! The Bible and bawdry issuing from the same shop! For shame, Parsons! the altars of Christ and Venus should never be attended by the same high-priests.

To conclude my commentary.—Let me inform the learned Judge, that, by extending his scale of information, he will find that Public Virtue, so far from being in its bloom, is in a most lamentable decline: and that, if the minutest wheels of the political machine are not smeared with the oil of corruption, the whole will be at a stand-still; or, to use the more energetic language of Doctor Johnson, of sesquipedalia verba memory, it would resemble the pyrotechnic wheel, which, for want of more of the sulphureo-nitrato-carbonic particles of explosive animation, experiences annihilated effulgence; and, submitting to the vis inertiae, becomes destitute of the rotatory circumgyration.

TRISTIA;
OR,
THE SORROWS OF PETER:
ELEGIES

TO
THE KING,
LORDS GRENVILLE, PETTY, ERSKINE,
THE BISHOP OF LONDON,
MESSRS. FOX, SHERIDAN, &c. &c.

*Ploravere suis non respondere favorem
Speratum meritis.*—HORACE.

IN cold neglect is Genius heard to sigh;
And Virtue lifts in vain the languid eye.

PROLOGUE.

A SAGE, whose name I don't at present know
 (And 'tis no mighty matter, I confess),
Says, if he wish'd to curse his bitterest foe,
 How would he do it?—curse him with success.

“Curse me,” cries every one who reads my Book,
 “ If I don't wish that formidable evil :
On me let Fortune ever smiling look,
 I'll run the risk of going to the Devil.”

I fear I'm one of those ; and wish to meet
 Dame Fortune always smiling, in my pow'r :
Adversity one can't with pleasure greet ;
 Too much a cross Old Maid, so very sour.

T' enjoy Life's comforts be my lucky lot ;
 Some let me have, dear Life, however small :
“ A mouse,” the proverb tells us, “ in the pot,
 Is always better than no meat at all.”

Few are the treasures that Parnassus yields :

Its hills and dales, of very little price,
Abounding more in rocks than golden fields ;
And less in sheep and cows, than rats and mice.

The streams of Helicon are deem'd divine,

Yet quench not thirst of Bards like British ale :
Envy must own, its founts are vastly fine ;
Yet Poets oft prefer the tubs of Thrale.

Poets are ever treading upon Stars,

Sublimely walking arm in arm with Gods :
Neglecting thus all sublunary cares ;
Good solid Beef for Shadows, Songs, and Odes.

Mild is the mien of Merit ; ah, how meek !

All diffidence, she looks with downcast eye.
A blush, a crimson blush, o'erspreads her cheek ;
And fear of censure gives her soul a sigh.

From tumult far she loves to wander, far ;

A simple, pensive, silent, thoughtful Maid ;
All lonely shining, like the Evening Star
That sparkles on the solitary shade.

She pants not for the splendour of a name ;
To praise, to Flattery, wishing to be deaf :
Trembling, she steals herself away from Fame ;
A blushing Strawberry hid beneath a leaf.

Sweet though her song, she hopes not to be heard :
In groves, the melting softness shuns the light ;
In secret warbling, like the tuneful Bird
That, shaded, charms the listening ear of Night.

How timidly she tapp'd at Grandeur's door,
Afraid to wound the ear with slightest pain !
Where Gruff the Porter bade her, with a roar,
Go to the Devil with her canting strain.

There, Folly rushes with his dirty boots,
Tattoos, and nearly thunders down the dwelling,
Loaded from Drummond's, Mordecai's, or Coutts' :
Hark ! like his Hounds, tempestuous, howling, yelling.

Lo, Gruff (his hand, for ever on the watch,
With many a piece of silver has been crown'd),
Proud a round oath, or friendly damn, to catch,
“ Hopes that his honour's well,” and bows to ground.—

“ Where dwells this blushful Beauty of our isle?”

Exclaims the World: “ this Merit let us see.”—
That World (an unbelieving Jew) will smile,
When I inform him that she dwells with me.

Yes, let me own I nursed the infant Hope;

Expecting presents from the Lord's Anointed.

“ Bless'd is the man who nought expects,” says Pope;

“ For, lo, that man shall not be disappointed.”

THE SORROWS OF PETER.

ELEGY TO THE KING.

The Poet informs his Majesty of a Rumour of great things having been done for him at Court ; and of his awkward Situation in Consequence of that Rumour, arising from the teazing Visits of Friends and Creditors: and supplicates his Majesty's gracious Attention to the Subject, and to relieve his Anxiety.

O KING ! the wondrous changes in the State
Engage these curious eyes of mine, to see
If Madame Fortune means to change my fate ;
That is, if Ministers have thought of me.

Soon as the Post arrives, I seize the Papers ;
As much for place my appetite is whetted :
In vain ! And then I fall into the vapours,
And think it hard my name is not gazetted.

Friends have pour'd in : “ Ah ! Peter, my old boy !
The old jade Fortune has been kind at last.
Joy, joy, Pindaricus ; we give thee joy :
Well, well, the Loaves and Fishes come at last.”

In vain I tell them that 'tis no such thing,

And represent it as an idle rumour.—

“ Poh ! Peter, thou art joking : our good King
Forgives a jest, and loves a bit of humour. ”—

“ Sirs, what d’ye mean ? I’ve nought, upon my soul. ”—

“ What ! not a hint ? no message ? ha ! no letter ?

Soon we shall hear thy coach’s thunder roll :

Credat Judæus, Peter ; we know better. ”

The mad Ex-courtiers cry, “ Thou old Black Sheep,

Thy rhyming sins will never be forgiven :

In peace in this World ne’er expect to sleep ;

Nay more, expect not to make peace with Heaven. ”

Bonfires have also blazed ; lit up by people

Whose patience, almost lost, for years has tarried :

The Bells too, nearly cracking the old steeple,

Pealing as though the Poet were just married.

The Marrow-bones and Cleavers have been here,

To pay a compliment upon my pension.

“ Ah, Butchers ! ” I have whisper’d in their ear,

“ Fudge ! downright fudge ! mere humbug ; sheer invention. ”

The Cook too, with his petit souper bills,
For some dear Lais, fond of pretty picking ;
Who, fair as Hebe, just like Hebe fills,
So fond of oyster-sauce and a broil'd chicken !

The Pot-boy soon, and Taylor too, I fear,
Will pay their court : the Barber too, the prig,
I make no doubt, will presently appear,
Inquiring how I liked my last new wig.

And, ah ! the Cobler too has sought my room,
To compliment the Poet and his Muse ;
Quite dissipated all his former gloom,
With smiles presenting “ a small bill for shoes.”

The little Robins, seldom seen before,
Seem twittering gratulation to the Poet :
Wagtails and Sparrows too surround my door,
Chirp pleasure, and the Cocks in concert crow it.

Even from its hole, beside my straw-stuff'd bed,
A poor starved Mouse who hears these sounds of Babel,
Pokes forth, with seeming joy, his little head,
To spy if any thing is on the table.

“ Poor Mouse!” I sigh : “ thy face must still be lean,
Like mine; since nothing has been done for me,
How canst thou, though thy appetite be keen,
Expect that something should be done for thee?”

Thus has this diabolical report

Plunged your poor Poet in a sea of trouble :
Thus have the fancied honours of the Court
Deceived, and got me in a horrid hobble.

Dread Sir, your Bard’s ambition soars not high,
To take Pitt’s place, or join the Privy-council ;
But yet a warbling Goldfinch, such as I,
Might peck some hemp-seed, taste a little groundsel.

Yes, Sire, this mortifies and makes me sad :

Pleased should I be to meet your high commands ;
Beyond a doubt, I should be vastly glad
To join the Royal circles, and kiss hands.

Then, Sir, permit the Bard t’ approach the Throne,
To ask if this intelligence be true :
The World proclaims it with the firmest tone ;
Yet none can tell his fortune, Sir, like you.

ELEGY TO THE SAME.

The Poet remarks the Change of Sentiments in favour of three principal Patriots, Fox, Sheridan, and Burdett, &c.—The Poet, being one of the Sheep in the List of the proscribed, wishes his Fleece to be whitened by the Sunshine of a Court-smile; but apprehends that fortunate Epocha to be at some Distance.—He hints to his Majesty, that he has no Disinclination to accept of something handsome; relates a mortifying Circumstance in the Life of poor Maynard, a French Poet; and mentions the Want of Hospitality in some of the Gentlemen of the Palace.

OH look at Sheridan, Burdett, and Fox;

Such terrors once, such bugbears to the Crown:

Lo, nothing now in either Patriot shocks!

The Palace marks their forms without a frown.

Pages, and Maids of Honour, at their names,

No longer pale and trembling keep aloof:

Demons no more, their mouths emit no flames;

No tails they wear, nor carry horns and hoof.

“Heavens! Mister Fox is quite a charming man;

So placid, and so generous in his nature:

And then again for Mister Sheridan;

So lively, clever, Lord! so great a creature:—

“ So sensible indeed, so full of wit,
So pleasant, so good-humour'd, sober, mellow ;
Lord ! without meat a fortnight one could sit,
To hear him talk ; he's such a pleasant fellow :—

“ Full of his fun, and always something new ;
O heavens ! a Nightingale, to Pitt the croaker :
One easy, as we say, as an old Shoe ;
The other, stiff and formal as a Poker.

“ Then there's Sir Francis, how polite a man !
So worthy, and his character so fair is.
Pays all his debts, uncommon ! a black swan !
Oons ! down with Cold Bath Fields, and down with Aris !

“ So handsome, and so neat as a new pin,
So like a gentleman in every feature !
Lord ! what a shame Mainwaring should come in ;
A shabby, nasty, black and ugly creature !

“ There, Pitt has kick'd the bucket ; what a rout !
He made the people many an empty dish :
Our Party were unwilling to cry out ;
But no one, to be sure, cries ‘ Stinking Fish.’

“He’s dead ; and Heaven go with him, where he goes :

Poor bees, he robb’d our hives of all the honey.

Hard are his taxes, God Almighty knows :

Like so much Dung, he shovell’d off our Money.”—

Yes, Fox and Sheridan, and poor Burdett,

Sore frighten’d all the Pages, Maids, and Dames ;

Put all the Cooks and Scullions in a sweat :

Wolves in their forms, and poison in their names.

Poor Sheep, by Pitt call’d black, throughout our Isle ;

Poor Lambs, that wander’d bleating to and fro ;

Now, in the sunshine of the Royal smile,

Behold, their Fleeces are as white as Snow !

Oh, would my wool but turn a little white !

I too am black, and doom’d to bleat and hunger.

“No,” cries my ruling Star ; “thou still must bite

The barren rock, and wait a little longer.”

My Liege, there are some very pretty places

That I could fill ; at least, that would fill me :

One whisper to their Lordships, or their Graces,

Would do ; I think we should not disagree.

“ Who first an oyster eat, was a bold dog ;”

So said King Charles, whom hunger seldom vext.
But he (say I) who ventured on a hog,
Must think of dining on the Devil next.

Ah ! sharp is hunger ; for, to feast on air
Must make the stomach look confounded blue.

I grant, those things are formidable fare :
What will not Teeth, t’ oblige the Stomach, do ?

A Poet of great poverty and fame,
Maynard, address’d old Richelieu on a day :
“ My Lord, I’m sunk in years, and blind and lame ;
Ere long, the debt of nature doom’d to pay :—

“ Soon as I gain the Elysian fields, the King,
Our late good Monarch, whom we all must love,
Will say, ‘ Monsieur Maynard, what news d’ye bring ?
What are my Subjects doing, pray, above ?’

“ Then will I mention the great things I see ;
Report your deeds, that dazzle every eye :
Now should he ask, Sir, what you did for me,
What to the King, my Lord, must I reply ?”—

“ Reply?” cried Richelieu to him; “ answer, nought.”

Oh, what an answer to so great a Poet!

Thus to disgrace the Cardinal was brought,

And History’s blushing page will ever show it.

Dread Sir, your Palace-gate I often pass,

Kneel at your door at times, and scent your meat;

But neither Cook nor Page comes out, alas,

And kindly crieth, “ Peter, rise and eat.”

ELEGY TO THE SAME.

He moralises on Virtue and Money; mentions the Neglect of celebrated Authors; and triumphs in the Idea of the Honours he should receive from Napoleon, could he be conveyed to Paris.—Gives a noble Speech of the Emperor on the Occasion.—The Poet concludes with dropping another hint to his Majesty about merit and places, which last he very probably will discover to be purely Utopian.

“ WHAT’S Virtue, without fortune to support it?”

Says Horace: “ viler than the vilest weed.”

What Genius? grant sublime, yet who will court it?

The World inquires not, who can write or read?

But he who gives a splendid ball or rout,

Like Thelluson, a breakfast or a dinner;

Him, him, the World endeavours to find out;

Makes wits of fools, and sanctifies a sinner.

The gentle Ovid, whom the Graces love,
Charm'd with his plaintive Lyre the hills of Thrace :
No tears could melt, no supplication move ;
The Exile pined, and perish'd in disgrace.

Yet all the World, one universal cry,
Condemns the rancour of the Emperor's soul ;
That frown'd, unmoved by Pity's melting sigh,
The abject slave of Passion's proud control.

Old Homer, that sublime immortal name,
Poor Bard ! sung Ballads through the streets of Greece,
To save himself from famine (what a shame !),
And sold them for one halfpenny apiece.

Our Milton too, with equal spirit fired,
No Patron found, his talents to requite ;
And pining, from a barbarous World retired,
Sung darkling, like the tuneful Bird of Night.

The plaintive Otway perish'd through hard need,
While rhyming Dulness batten'd at her ease ;
And Dryden, on ambrosia form'd to feed,
Just like a Rat, has dined on bread and cheese.

Much did King Charles our Butler's works admire,
Read them and quoted them from morn to night ;
Yet saw the Bard in penury expire,
Whose wit had yielded him so much delight.

And you, my Liege, if Fame the truth report,
In reading verses oft employ your leisure ;
And often, from the tumults of a Court,
Read certain odes too, with uncommon pleasure.

Eternal scandal to the barbarous age,
In piteous penury Saavedra pin'd ;
In piteous penury lay poor Lesage :
Oh, what a stinging satire on mankind !

Yet let one action of the day shine forth,
(And candour loves to dwell upon my tongue :)
Thurlow could see a Cowper's modest worth,
And crown with fair reward his moral Song.

Dame Fortune never asks me what I wish :
Though bold my flights, that raise the eyes of Kings,
They ne'er exclaim, "Thou wondrous Flying Fish,
Amidst our seas of Claret wet thy wings."

Oh would the Angel to my room repair,
Who raised good Habakkuk, and lift my crown,
(No matter by the wig or by the hair,)
And then in Paris gently set me down;—

Soon at my lodgings would arrive a card,
From him whose deeds a World with wonder fill :
“ The Emperor’s compliments, requests the Bard
Would eat his mutton with him en famille.”

Then, as the bottle jovially we push,
The Gallic Alexander roars with spirit,
“ Great Monsieur Peter, I shall beat the bush
For some nice place to crown your matchless merit.”

Then will he say to Monsieur Talleyrand,
“ I honour Genius, and of Bard the name ;
So take this charming Poet by the hand,
And cover yon ungrateful Isle with shame.”

Behold me then on Fortune’s wheel, in short,
High fix’d, a seeming Hero of Romance ;
Kiss’d by the Ladies of Napoleon’s Court,
And visited by all the Wits of France !—

Such is the picture Fancy loves to paint,
A scene perhaps that sober Wisdom scorns.
Sick is my soul, with disappointment faint :
“Curst cows,” reports the proverb, “have short horns.”

Tell not in Gath nor Askelon such things,
And furnish Scandal's tongue with defamation :
No; let her never cry, “The best of Kings
Neglected the best Poet of his Nation.”

Pleased, on his tombstone couldst thou read these words?
“Here lies the Bard of humour, wit, and whim ;
Who though he sweetly smiled on Earth's great Lords,
They ne'er bestowed a single smile on him.”

ELEGY TO LORD GRENVILLE.

The Poet accuses the Delusions of Hope, who had promised him a Number of good things; sings with much pathos of the Treasury, and a stranger called Money; and concludes with a handsome Compliment to Lord Grenville, hoping for the Honour of his Lordship's Acquaintance.

HOPE whisper'd, that my market would be made,
If one day Pitt should go upon his travels.

Lo! Pitt is off; yet Fortune lags, a jade.

This, please your Lordship, the poor Poet gravels.

Hope whisper'd me that Calumny's black breath
Would cease, and that the howling imp would die.
Yet in the winds I hear the fiend of death:
This steals a sorrow from your Poet's eye.

Hope flatter'd: but her pleasure is, to cheat;
She loves to chouse the feeble-sighted Mole;
Her mansion forms the Idiot's last retreat;
Her glittering beams, the moonshine of the soul.

O Grenville, who hast felt the furious storm,
And bellowing thunders, of the gloomy main;
Traced too with boldness Danger's giant form!
In port, at anchor, thou art snug again.

While now amid thy fleet, with towering pride,
Safe moor'd, secure from rocks, and winds, and fog;
Admit my little cutter alongside,
And ask its Master to a glass of grog.

The Treasury's golden door to many a man
Opes wide; ah! shut on me, the bright abode:
These shoes have tramp'd from Beersheba to Dan,
Nor found a small brass farthing on the road.

A Guinea's lovely face I never see;
Though strong my passion, wishing to be billing:
Even little Sixpence prudish is to me;
And coyer too her elder sister, Shilling.

With thee the beggar is no longer poor,
The blackest sinner white-wash'd soon and sainted:
Regeneration then within thy door,
Oh what a pity we are not acquainted!

ELEGY TO LORD HENRY PETTY.

The Poet addresses Lord Henry Petty on those important Objects called Meat and Drink; disclaims the Vanities of Ambition, his highest being to sing in a snug corner and eat.

O PETTY, of whose talents, virtues, Fame
Is with her trumpet pleased to talk a deal !
Oh listen, if thou lovest a Poet's name,
To what concerns a Poet much, a meal.

To me has Nature bountifully given
A handsome stomach, and discerning palate ;
Forgetting to complete my earthly Heaven,
And put a little something in my wallet.

I wish not to be Minister, not I ;
I put not up my prayers for Petty's place :
Nor Fox, nor Sheridan, produce a sigh ;
To Ireland goes unenvied Bedford's Grace.

Too often Fortune, on her cloud-capp'd tow'r,
Shall place a gentleman; and then, uncivil,
Shall bid the thunder roar, and torrents pour,
And wash and blow his honours to the Devil.

Survey gude Melville and his gude friend Trotter,
Who drove the World before them in high glee :
Amphibious Melville; yes, a kind of otter,
That lived on flesh and fish by land and sea.

Be somewhat mine; but, far from bustling men,
In stilness be the gentle Poet blest!
In secret solitude a humble Wren,
To hop and peck, and twitter near my nest.

Form'd with economy, in Wisdom's school,
What Government may give I will not squander;
And imitate the Prodigal, the fool,
Eat grains in hog-sties, and a vagrant wander.

The gay Hilario lived in style, in state;
A palace for his mansion, dined with Dukes;
Enjoy'd his carpets, sofas, pictures, plate,
Dogs, horses, music, mistresses, and cooks.

Pale Envy mark'd with wishful eye the scene:
How long? ah! soon did Fortune turn her back;
Revoked her smiles, and show'd an alter'd mien,
Refusing farthings where she gave a lack.

Behold him meagre, wan, in mean attire,
Doom'd ever in a prison's cell to pine;
Now cooking, at a little hungry fire,
A pound of tainted mutton on a twine !

Much should I like to see a Joint of Meat,
Instead of one poor solitary Chop ;
Afford my friends, at times, a little treat ;
The Fidler call, and give their heels a hop.

My mansion too I would enlarge, I own ;
Increase my tables, knives and forks, and pottery :
Now this, my Lord, could easily be done,
Would Fortune ask me to attend her lottery.

One word from Petty makes the Goddess kind,
Which thus a pretty little place secures :
My Lord, though to my merits always blind,
Her eyes were open'd to discover yours.

ELEGY TO LORD SIDMOUTH.

The Poet exhibits a Sort of Claim on Lord Sidmouth's Attentions, founded on the various and dangerous Battles he fought in Support of his Administration.—He freely acknowledges his Smile on his Lordship's prudery, that resisted with so much Violence the Bribe of the silly unthinking Manufacturer.—He gives a pathetic History of the Tinman's declining Health, his Swan-like Soliloquy before his Death, his Epitaph; and makes up all Matters with Lord Sidmouth by a small Sarcasm on his own Muse, and a handsome Compliment to the noble Lord.

O SIDMOUTH, aliàs Addington, on high

I mark thee basking in the Royal smile;

Where Honours, thick as Hops, and pensions lie,

That spread a lustre o'er our happy isle.

So high in favour, and so near the Throne,

Say, canst thou not, by ways and means, contrive

To gratify a harmless humming drone

With some small honey from the Court's huge hive?

Oft have I dwelt with pleasure on thy name,

And fought thy battles in the wars of wit;

And oft, the tuneful Stentor of thy fame,

I took thy part against the Janus Pitt.

Now charged with Ode, the Muse, with much renown,
Has fired from Newspapers a deadly gun;
Knock'd many an imp of Opposition down,
Now with a red-hot satire, now a pun.

Such are the services, perform'd with spirit;
Then ponder on the labours of the Muse:
Think of a something to reward her merit;
The Dame would thank thee for a pair of shoes.

Hark, hark! I hear the voice of hundreds cry,
“Thy Muse has covered him with ridicule.”
This allegation let me not deny;
But Sidmouth should have smiled upon the fool.—

Muse, on the Tinman let us drop a tear,
And breathe a gentle sigh upon his fate;
Who took to heart his destiny severe,
And never after made a spoon or plate:—

Ne'er solder'd stewpan, saucepan, or a kettle;
Made not extinguisher, nor pair of snuffers;
In short, ne'er meddled with one bit of metal:
So much a wounded delicacy suffers.

Lone in his parlour, just behind his shop,
Poor man! in solitude he sat and sigh'd ;
Tears from his eyes, like Peas, were seen to drop,
When thus, in sorrow sunk, the Tinman cried :—

“ Farewell my dripping-pans! tin jacks, farewell !
Skimmers and syringes, and toasting-forks,
Tin pint and shaving-pot, and scallop-shell !
Farewell my shop, with all its shining works !

“ Farewell my hopes, that whisper'd a fur gown,
That to the windows brings all Plymouth faces :
No Mayor, in glory to parade the town ;
Before my Aldermen, behind my maces.

“ Since Newgate held me, I am lost, forlorn ;
My strength decays, in speech I daily falter :
Hourly I wish I never had been born,
For every thing around me smells of halter.”

Thus mourn'd the Man of Tin, and spoke no more :
I saw him carried to the churchyard's gloom ;
I sought his grave at evening's stilly hour,
And sympathising thus inscribed his tomb :—

“ Here lies a Tinman, who, to wisdom-lost,
Tried hard to bribe a Minister of State ;
Who knew not, when a man obtains a post,
That all the virtues on his Worship wait.

“ Poor Man ! he knew not that the great are good,
Inflexible, in honour vastly nice ;
That virtue ever mingles with high blood ;
That lofty Lords, like Coblers, have their price.”—

Yes, Sidmouth ; though thy talents I admired,
And loved thy virtues, thou couldst not escape :
By laughing-subjects is the Muse inspired ;
And mine’s a little, saucy, grinning Ape.

And where is all the mighty harm, I wonder ?
What is it all, when all is said and done ?
The Bard, to kill a Midge-fly, pours a Thunder ;
And spares no blemish, though ’tis in the Sun.

ELEGY TO LORD ERSKINE.

The Poet addresses a just Eulogium to the Lord Chancellor.—He thinks that he has taken now and then a poetical Liberty with a certain Peer of the Realm; also with the modest and disinterested Mister George Rose—recites a Speech of the exalted Earl of Liverpool; and complains of the false Opinions of the World concerning him.

O ERSKINE ! on whose head, whose blameless head,
The Muse of Eloquence has placed her Crown;
Where Malice has her venom vainly shed,
Aud Envy, the foul fiend, has fix'd her frown !

Such is thine Honour's fairness, a pure Snow;
And such thy talents, as must charm a Nation:
Blest change ! the Cygnet, for the croaking Crow;
Long-wish'd amends for one late elevation.

Though far from Courts, a Culprit in disgrace,
In dreary solitude my merits shine;
Though near a Throne I dare not show my face,
I'm glad to see the Monarch smile on thine.

I think I've call'd Lord Cardigan a fool;
And, were I King, that Lord should be displaced:
Heavens ! can the liver of a Saint be cool,
When such on Fortune's pinnacle are placed?

I own, I never could respect George Rose :

Wishing him captain's clerk or purser still,
Not roll in treasure ; which, God only knows,
Is Ocean roaring from a creeping Rill.

“ Hoot ! ” cries old Liverpool, “ ye rhyming rogue,
Ye munna laugh at people of high station ;
Ye that have neither stocking, shoe, nor brogue :
Yer lugs should suffer for your defamation.

“ Ye thenk, becaze yer head has some wee brain,
And thenk, becaze that ye can speel yer letters,
That ye may shower your Squebs as theck as Rain,
And take down'd leeberities wee all yer betters.”

Rave on : no trophies I to Dulness raise ;
Too proud, though poor, to call foul weather fair,
Proclaim a dirty Cloud the solar Blaze,
And Substance yield to Castles in the Air.

Full oft I laugh (to burst with rage is vain),
To see what false ideas mortals form ;
A cloud of Darkness drear they paint my Brain,
With thunder, lightning stuff'd, and floods and storm.

Ah! more like Luna, from her eastern bow'r,
 That issues forth in radiant robe array'd,
 Steals sadness from the solitary hour,
 And gilds the horrors of the midnight shade :—

Or sweet Arcadian Nymph, whose smiles adorn
 Some region that in Savages delights ;
 Or Lark, the little Syren of the morn,
 'Midst Magpies, Owls, and Jays, and screaming Kites.

ELEGY.

The Poet sympathizes with the disgraced State of Knighthood at Windsor; and gives the Conversation that took place in St. George's Chapel at Midnight, between a Pair of noble Spectres.

YET not alone is Poetry despised;
 The noble Knighthood also feels disgraces :
 At scornful Windsor, is the Order prized?
 The Knights, poor fellows, blush to show their faces.

Where is the spirit of our ancient sires?
 Tares flourish, where should grow the golden Wheat.
 Instead of Glory, groveling Gain inspires.
 How rarely merit and preferment meet!

Where are the noble military Knights,
In Windsor's sacred stalls that ought to shine ;
Men, for their country that have bled in fights,
And, glorious, cast a lustre on their line ?

Alas ! the men who now the honours gain,
Provoke from sober Justice e'en a laugh ;
Lo ! by these heroes, sheep alone are slain,
Geese, turkeys, rabbits, or a hog, or calf.

There was a time, when Honour was in fashion ;
There was a time, when Glory was ador'd ;
When Merit was the idol of a nation ;
When Valour edged the fury of the sword.

Knights who ne'er kill'd a foe, except a flea ;
Whom garter, mantle, waving plumes, adorn ;
Poor knights of Windsor with disdain survey,
Look down upon them with the squint of scorn.

'Twas at the midnight hour, when walk the dead,
Saint George met Edward in the sacred fane ;
When thus the Saint bespoke the King : " Ah, Ned !
Alas ! poor Honour now is in her wane."—

“ Dear George, ’tis very true,” replied the King;

“ Poor Honour is just come upon the parish :
Merit may tramp the streets, and ballads sing ;
My new-made knights can boast of nothing warrish.

“ Shall Stitch, the cross-legg’d rascal, to this fane
Hop from his Board and Hell, to be a knight ;
Th’ immortal glory of the Order stain ?
What ! to the lordly Lion mount a Mite ?

“ Shall Harry Haunch, Dick Duck, and Toby Pigtail,
Be knights, because his Lordship cannot pay ’em ?
Sam Sledge, Bob Boots, Ben Broadcloth, and Will Wagtail,
Because his debts are such he can’t defray ’em ?

“ Oh must Tom Turbot, Tart, and Matthew Mustard,
Enjoy the lofty honours of the Stall ;
And on that cream-faced animal, Kit Custard,
The glories of an Installation fall ?

“ On market-days, alas ! how dread the sound
From butcher-knights, a most disgraceful cry :
‘ Beef, mutton, four-pence farthing, Ma’am, a pound ;
Nice pork, Ma’am ; veal, Ma’am ; pray, Ma’am,
what d’ye buy ?’

“ Ere long, the brazen barrow-drab, Bet Bundle,
 Shall come and bully, with her bill, my Lord :
 Bet ceases, in a trice, her wheel to trundle,
 To kneel beneath the splendours of the sword.”—

Now crowed the Cock ; the eye of orient Day
 Peep'd on the noble Ghosts, each other greeting :
 “ Bye, Ned ; I'll give,” Saint George was heard to say,
 “ The history of my Knights at our next meeting.”

ELEGY TO J. DONITHORNE, ESQ.

The Poet, in a Series of happy and illustrative Comparisons, bewails the Cruelty of his Fate.

HEAVENS, what a World we live in ! oh, how sad !
 To this, thy long experience will agree :
 Half-fill'd with fools ; be-devil'd, drunk, or mad.
 How blest, dear Donithorne, were all like thee !

Patient as men upon the river's side,
 Who for a dinner throw the worm or fly,
 So patient I Preferment's fish have eyed ;
 But cannot hook one, or to boil or fry.

Patient as Hunters in an eastern wind,
 (Ungracious wind, for running hares unfit,)
I seek Preferment's Hare, but cannot find :
 In perfect stillness sleeps the rusty spit.

The Smiles of Kings who court the trump of fame,
 No little partialities should know :
On merit, wheresoe'er it springs, the same ;
 Like heaven's kind Showers, on every plant that flow :

Or like the Sun's bright orb that beams on all,
 Disdaining winds and elemental strife ;
Bids on the lane's poor Pool its kisses fall,
 And bids it, like the Ocean, teem with life.

Patient as blushing Virgins of sixteen,
 Whose ears have heard a Lover's piteous prayer ;
If those same Lovers are not constant seen,
 Or, faithless, mean to fly to other Fair :—

Patient as Widows in their mournful weeds,
 When no kind second husband comes to sigh ;
Or Heir, that cannot to th' estate succeed,
 Because his father chooses not to die :—

Patient as Cats before the mouse's hole,
 Winking and nursed with sanguine hope the while,
 To nab the little animal, poor soul :—
 These eyes have sharply moused for Fortune's smile.

ELEGY.

The Poet complains of the unequal Distributions of Fortune; of the Countenance given by the Great to a vile Catgut-scraper and Canvas-dauber, in Preference to the sublime Bard; and concludes with a beautiful Apostrophe to his Divinity, Independence.

WHILE others sink in seas of rosy wine,
 Where rosy Pitt resign'd his boozing breath;
 No drowning oceans of the grape are mine :
 I can't afford to put myself to death.

While others, stuffing, choked on dainty fare,
 Like London Aldermen undaunted die;
 To Heaven with turtle in their mouths repair :
 I can't afford to choke myself, not I.

I cannot make a Larder of my Throat,
 Nor of my Stomach form a purple Well :
 Good Claret by the sight alone I note ;
 And judge of Venison, only by the smell.

Now on a bench I ponder in the Park,
Near some frail Nymph as hungry, beauteous sinner ;
And now alone, voracious as a Shark,
Dream of a feast, or count the trees for dinner.

Behold ! the Catgut-scraper, with his croud,
Commands at will the house of hospitality ;
Sits by the Peer, not Lucifer more proud,
And *hobs or nob*s it with the Man of Quality.

And now, behold, a bellowing Calf knocks in :
He thunders, and no Porter dares oppose ;
Jokes with his Lordship, fills himself to chin,
Where the poor Poet dares not show his nose.

Behold the Canvas-dauber ! he can draw
My Lady's cat's-face, or her Pug, or Parrot ;
Shall range at large the mansion, and give law :
But where's the modest Poet ? in his garret.

Such is the Bard's sad fate of modern days ;
To gain Life's comforts by his art, unable ;
A man despised :—the long-ear'd Beast that brays,
Finds in his manger a superior table.

O Independence, to thy name I kneel ;
Yes, with idolatry I bend the knee :
If aught of pride, aspiring pride, I feel,
Sweet Nymph of Freedom, 'tis to live with thee.

Then sorrow never would my heart invade :—
So let us in some rural mansion dwell ;
Content will join us there, the simple maid,
And to a little Heaven convert our Cell.

Content gives freshness to the fields of air,
With every sweet the breath of Zephyr fills ;
Can make our common viands dainty fare,
And yield a flavour to the fountain's rills.

Thus will we pass in silent ease the day ;
Each hour shall carry sunshine on its wings :
Nor envy Salisbury's glory at the Play,
Five hours a stake behind the chair of Kings.

ELEGY.

He bewails the World's Want of Candour and Discernment, in hearkening to one of the Rivington Reviewers, and paltry Paragraph-spinners, to his (the Poet's) Disadvantage.

Too poor am I, alas! to pay for praise;
I cannot visit a Reviewer's shop:
And well I know how much a dinner sways,
A pot of porter and a mutton chop.

To gaunt Reviewers, Paragraph-inditers,
Each trembling door is ever open found.
Who dares affront such formidable writers;
Snakes, whose sharp fangs inflict a mortal wound?

Puff call'd on Daub one morning: "My dear fellow,
How much improved in colouring and grace!
So chaste the contour, and the tints so mellow;
Not thou, but Titian, finish'd up that face.

"To thee are Raphael, Titian, feeble souls:
Daub, o'er the Town its merits shall be spread."—
"Dear Puff, Wife waits with coffee and hot rolls."—
Puff, like a Bull-dog, breakfasts on the head.

Just before dinner, Puff pops in agen :

“ Daub, I must see the progress of thy art ;
Oh, like thy glowing Pencil were my Pen !
Sblood ! all alive : the figure makes one start.

“ Exhibit, Daub ; success is sure, don't doubt it :
The charming piece will ravish all beholders,
Spring from the canvas, murder all about it.”—
Thus dineth Puff upon the neck and shoulders.

“ Daub, what a gem ! the finish I must see ;
With not one flaw, with lustre so replete.”—
Thus Puff upon the body drinks his tea,
And makes a supper on the hands and feet.

Yet not alone on Daub he plays his art :
The Players too must contribute, beg, and bow ;
Or woe to Romeo's, woe to Juliet's part !
He like a Lubber dies, and she a Sow.

The Singers too must humble, must come down,
Or, lo ! the pen destroys them at a stroke :
“ Bad, shocking stuff ; an insult on the Town :
Crack'd, out of tune, the voice ; the Raven's croak.”

Poor Tweedledum must also taxes pay,
Must bend to Puff, or woe to Tweedledum!
“The fellow has no bow, no tone: he play!
Zounds! to the dancing dogs unfit to strum.”

But Puff possesses still a wider sphere:
For Puff, the advertising Taylor stitches;
A scrap of Latin wins the public ear,
And gives to Puff a handsome coat and breeches.

The Man of Pork who wishes for a name,
Approaches with a joint, or dainty chop:
His Hogs at once a laurel gain from Fame,
And lo! all London crowds to Griskin's shop.

Has Block the Barber got a son and heir,
Puff pens a paragraph as quick as thought:
“Quite well the lady and the Child appear.”—
Puff joins the christening, and gets shaved for nought.

Is Crispin married, Fame must tell the Town;
Puff hails th' event, informs the World the news:
Behold perfection the fair Lady crown!
Puff gets his bridecake, and a pair of shoes.

Is Mistress Tripe, the Butcher's lady, dead,
Out flames a paragraph of pretty penship:
"Resign'd and pious tears in plenty shed,
By all that had the honour of her friendship:—

"She left three children to lament her fate,
And worthy Mister Tripe to join their grief."—
Rich laud! in gratitude to Puff, the plate
Receives a handsome tribute of roast beef.

Yet more than this can Puff, ah happy Puff!
In fate how much superior to the Bard!—
Besides, this fellow calls my Poems stuff;
Though form'd by labour hard, ah! very hard.

Shield sets my Song, and Incledon may sing;
But if the pen of Puff shall chance to damn it,
Alas, how little will the Ballad bring!
Too soon the grocer's spice and sugar cram it.

ELEGY TO MR. FOX.

The Poet addresses Mr. Fox and Poverty in a tender and pathetic Strain, and accuses the late Minister of a most infamous Duplicity.

O Fox ! thy talents Envy's self must own.

I saw not all thine actions with a smile ;

In days of yore, my face confess'd a frown :

Some acts indeed disturb'd the Muse's bile.

The hours of youth are light ; those hours are past.

But truce ! a sweet forgiveness shall be mine :

A Summer Sun is sometimes overcast ;

Well pleased, I see thee now with lustre shine.

If right I guess ; if Fame reporteth true,

Who very often deals in downright *fib*s ;

Fortune has made thee look a little blue,

And of some pounds of fat has robb'd thy ribs.

Thou then wilt pity a poor Brother-bard ;

As courtiers call'd me, " an old rhyming sinner ;"

Who playing, with such want of skill, my card,

I cannot get a herring for my dinner.

Amid the scramble for the loaves and fishes,
 Ye Gods! I fear me, I am come too late:
 Such legs and noble sirloins in the dishes,
 'Tis hard that I should find an empty plate.

Like Belisarius have I fought and bled,
 Attack'd the tyrant Pitt with all my art:
 What my reward? a bludgeon on the head,
 Whips on my back, and daggers through my heart.

Pitt's hungry Bloodhounds constant watch'd my walk;
 When, like the Babe, sweet innocence was I:
 In Coffee-houses listen'd to my talk;
 And forged, to blast my fame, the treason'd lie.

What gave that Pitt, that patriot Pitt, his pow'r,
 For which old Chatham taught his heart to hanker?
 Ask Richmond, Cartwright, who in evil hour
 Join'd their dark counsels at the Crown and Anchor.

To fire and sword the flaming patriot flew,
 To cut down all the plants of Opposition;
 Plants from his own infernal seed that grew,
 Nursed in the hot-house of his own sedition.

Rewards and statues now the Rogue required,
To give to immortality his name :
With damn'd combustibles the house he fired,
Then sought our thanks for putting out the flame.

Ah, Charles ! amid the toil for loaves and fishes,
I see no change of colour in my fate :
Though full my heart of thee, and warm its wishes,
Not one my stomach fills, or warms my plate.

Go, (for I'm pleased to see Old Nic as soon,)
Go, Poverty, and never see me more ;
Who takest knife and fork, and dish and spoon,
And turn'st the sad inhabitant to door.

Thy hag-like form, and melancholy tones,
Sharp nose, and pale cold cheek, and beamless eye,
And shrivell'd skin that scarcely veils thy bones,
Spread terror o'er my soul, and wake the sigh.

'Tis said, that thou some years ago wast seen
With Rose and Jenkinson, on Scotia's plain ;
Then leave, oh ! leave me, with thy haggard mien,
And visit Rose and Jenkinson again.

ELEGY.

The Poet confesses his utter Dislike of Pitt's Administration; describes his own uncommon Intrepidity; and relates an apposite Story of a Brother-Bard, and a rhyming King of Sicily.

TO THE REV. MR. BISHOP OF CATHAGOGA.

FOND of the marvellous are mortals all,
 And love sublimely of themselves to talk :—
 From Paul's church-yard, upon the dome of Paul
I ne'er could see a Fly, nor hear him walk.

Yet some have wondrous ears, and wondrous eyes :—
 Drake, ere he came, beheld his idol Pitt ;
 Beheld his angel form amid the skies,
 And heard his wisdom, eloquence, and wit.

Too oft Credulity entraps the soul :
 She lies in wait for idiotism and youth ;
 Listeneth to tales baptized rigmarol,
 And makes them pass for oracles of truth.

What thousands thought, with marvelling Master Drake,
 That Billy Pitt descended from the skies !
I own, I stood not staring like a stake :
 Pitt blazed no meteor on the Poet's eyes.

Yes, I detested Pitt and all his measures,
And wrote Willippics on Administration;
For treating just like Dirt the public Treasures,
And forcing to the workhouse a great Nation.

Pitt swore he'd hang me; order'd out his thieves,
To seize the gentle Poet by the throat:
But, lo! the Poet laugh'd at Mister Reeves;
Still with Willippics swell'd his daily note.

"Thy measures are all vile," I boldly said;—
Then vowed he horrid penalty and pain:
"Thy measures are all bad, all bad, all bad,"
Fearless of punishment, I roar'd again.—

A certain King of Sicily made Verses;
Sends for the Poet Laureat, Mister Bayes:
Bayes enters; and the rhyming King rehearses,
Expecting from his Poet peals of praise.

Deeming them Gems from the Parnassian mines,
"Well, how d'ye like my Verses, Mister Bayes?"—
"Bad lines," quoth Bayes, "most execrable lines:
I never heard such stuff in all my days."

Black look'd the Tyrant, but pursued his Rhymes :

“ Well, now what think ye?”—“ Worse, my Liege,
and worse :

Don't publish them, O King ! and damn the times.”—

Then Bayes's taste the King began to curse.

The disappointed Monarch, in a rage,

Loud by his crown and by his sceptre swore,

If thus he judged, he'd put him in a cage,

Or chain him all his life-time to the oar.

The King read on ; but, ah ! in vain he read :

The same untuneful lines, the same dull sallies.

“ Speak now, Bayes.”—The poor Poet shook his head :

“ Worse still, and worse : oons ! send me to the galleys.”

ELEGY TO MR. SHERIDAN.

He compliments Mr. Sheridan—confesses that he has been a Literary Reviewer, but of the most consummate candour.—He complains of the Illiberality of Mankind; condemns literary Impostures; and wonders at the Want of Discrimination in the World, which so often mistakes a trifling Capacity, with a little schoolboy Learning, for Genius.

O SHERIDAN! amidst thy walks of wit,
Success has crown'd thee, every Muse has smil'd;
While Peter, thanks to Dulness and to Pitt,
Finds Pindus a most melancholy wild.

Oft am I term'd a niggard of applause,
And that I do not justice to the times.
Alas! the World complains without a cause:
Display the Virtue, and I'll find the Rhymes.

I own I've squeezed some miserable souls,
And made them of their folly somewhat sick:
Show'd to a grinning World their phiz; like Moles,
'Midst fields they ravaged, in a cloven stick.

I own, with candour too that I review'd;
Unstain'd like Rivington's black tribes, my tongue:
Merit with tomahawks I ne'er pursued;
Spared hooting owls, and kill'd the birds of song.

I spared not puppies, though they bore a star ;

I spared not blockheads, though they wore lawn
sleeves :

On vile impostors rush'd my angry war ;

Rogues in saints' masks, and literary thieves.

A Hound, mute Hound, in cold contempt they call me,

That never to fair Merit gave my tongue :

With every weapon of offence they maul me,

Poor Orpheus 'midst the Bacchanalian throng !

Much have I suffer'd, and my Lady Muse ;

Bullets, like Hailstones, pelting at our head :

From Mud Forts fired, call'd Rivington's Reviews,

Ah me ! incessant showers of brass and lead :—

Where, clothed, well fed, warm quarters, handsome pay,

Enough to put old Satan in a sweat,

Four Parsons, hired (like Swiss) to wound and slay,

Are peeping, aiming, from the parapet.

Muse, tell their names, at whom Religion stares ;

Like Scavengers, that labour in the kennel :

Maurice and Beloe, all-devouring Nares,

And supple, fawning, crawling Parson Rennel.

O Genius, thou fair Flower of rich perfume,
What stinking Weeds have stolen thy sacred name ;
Displayed their tawdry Colours for thy Bloom,
Till blushing Folly's self has cried out " Shame !"

Possess'd of memory, Nature's gift to fools,
Thus Coxcombs read and learn the thoughts of others ;
And, swell'd with Lexicons and Grammar-rules,
Scare with Greek-thunder their old Aunts and Mothers.

Of such I could a manufactory make ;
With such sad things the groaning World encumber :
From town and country any orders take ;
And send, at shortest notice, any number.

Grosses of Rennels I could quickly send,
Of Cobler Giffords, and such cobbling fellows ;
Of Fuselies, numbers, numbers without end ;
Thousands of Nares, and Maurices, and Beloes.—

O Sheridan ! once more to thee I turn ;
Say, is there nothing that my taste would hit ?
In vain, I fear me, for the gift I mourn ;
Lo ! every Wit would kill a Brother-wit.

Thus, when two Clouds of Fire sublimely meet,
 Immediately are heard most serious matters ;
 The gloomy foes in sounds of Thunder greet,
 And, rushing, tear each other into tatters.

ELEGY.

He complains of the abusive Language of the Courts, and of the Hostility of Lord Puzzle the Lawyer towards him—gives a Portrait of old Puzzle, ad vivum.

By Courts I'm call'd a devilish saucy fellow :
 The Monkeys chatter, and the Tigers growl ;
 The Calves of Quality, offended, bellow ;
 The Hounds of Calumny with fury howl.

Lord Puzzle wish'd, alas ! with horrid jaws,
 The pretty lamb of Poetry to kill :
 For what enormity of crime ? because
 I sought the Muse's mount, to taste its rill.

Most lustily indeed old Puzzle swore,
 I roam'd a Demon, and would eat the State ;
 And that my bleatings were the Lion's roar ;
 That Ellenborough's club should give me fate.

Perchance the Muse has smiled on poor old Puzzle;
For poor old Puzzle is conceited, proud :
'Tis hard indeed the Muse's mouth to muzzle,
While others at old Puzzle laugh so loud.

I dare not Puzzle praise in Verse or Prose :
Puzzle, the darkening Ink-fish of the law,
His mud of doubts around, unsparing, throws,
And of a Fly's Foot makes a Tiger's Paw.

Yet this deciding, undeciding man,
Contrived that Fame should stuff him in her trumpet;
But Fame, what pity! since the World began,
Has oft been found a fawning, lying strumpet.

Heaven keep me from old Puzzle and his court,
Full of wig wisdom in his solemn hour ;
Full of deep doubts, and even of Clerks the sport ;
Uncertain whether two and two make four.

To mention him with Bacon or with Hyde,
Would make poor History sick, we won't say vomit.
Heavens, what a tarnish on her page of pride !
A feeble winking Rushlight, and a Comet.

ELEGY TO NARCISSA.

He confesses the Folly of his Youth in pursuing Fortune, who never could be induced to notice him.—Her Daughter however, Miss-Fortune, was of easy Access; or rather too importunate, addressing him even at the Hazard of his Life.—The Poet recollects past Times and Narcissa, with a sigh, and, even in the Autumn of his Days, would dare whisper soft Things in her Ear, would Dame Fortune, with a few kind Looks, prove favourable to his Wishes.

WHEN youth was mine, I envied Fortune's store;
With envy gazed upon her splendid dome;
Knock'd, with assurance, at the Lady's door,
And, though I saw her, "Nobody at home!"

My thoughts by day, by night my happy dreams;
To Afric's roasting climates did I roam;
I sought her mansion near the golden streams,
And knock'd (poor Peter!): "Nobody at home!"

Still went I on, where great Columbus found her,
'Midst thunder, tempests, and the ocean's foam;
Saw on her isle a thousand Slaves surround her:
Again I knock'd, but "Nobody at home!"

“ Ungrateful Dame !” I cried : “ not see the Bard,
The Philomel of Britain’s polish’d isle ?
Not see the Poet who has toil’d so hard,
To gain admission for a single smile ?”

Grieved to the soul, to London I return’d,
And set me down in Duke Street, Portland Place ;
In sackcloth and in ashes there I mourn’d,
And cursed my star that kept me from her Grace.

Yet, though the mother I could never greet,
Her daughter wish’d to see me and my books ;
Miss-Fortune : oft I saw her in the street
With Bow-street Runners, men of horrid looks.

The Damsel swore she loved me and my wit :
’Twas difficult to keep the Girl in check ;
For, lo ! near Newgate, in the reign of Pitt,
Rudely she strove to hug me round the neck.

Like Captain Potiphar’s bold Wife of yore,
Who seized the gentle Joseph, she provoked me ;
And, had I not displayed a Giant’s pow’r,
I verily believe the jade had choked me.

Yet for myself I wish'd not wealth alone ;
For thee, Narcissa, was the wish in part :
I thought thy beauties once would be my own,
And sigh'd to give thee more than my poor heart.

With thee I hoped to live in rural ease,
Far from the tumults of the World withdrawn ;
Where Health would meet us with her fragrant breeze,
Lead to the hills, and join us on the lawn :—

Now prune the vine, and now the various tree ;
With pleasure view the blossoms of perfume ;
Now in the blushing Fruit (and cull'd for thee),
Behold the tempting Rivals of thy bloom :—

With thee to tread the dews at early day,
And meet young Morning on the orient hill ;
Pleased, as the brooks in murmurs wind away,
To learn some moral lesson from the rill.

With thee I hoped, in Summer's golden hour,
To wander, arm in arm, the glade along ;
To touch the Lyre of Love amid the bow'r,
And thou the blushing subject of the Song.

When Winter ravaged in his stormy rage,
With thee I hoped t' enjoy the cheerful fire ;
With thee converse, or read th' instructive page,
Or mingle with thy sweeter voice the Lyre.

Now for the tuneful Tenants of the Grove,
That sue for pity, strew with grain the ground ;
Poor beggars, the sweet objects of thy love,
That flocking chirp their gratitude around.

With thee I wish'd to raise the tender flower,
And in thy presence dig the grateful soil ;
With thee the nursing rill, Narcissa, pour,
And deck at last thy bosom with my toil.

And when, at midnight, through the vast of shade,
The tempest whelm'd the World with wild alarms ;
Then to my bosom press a timid Maid,
And lose its thunder in Narcissa's arms.

Such were my wishes : yet thou still art fair ;
And I, though lost some blushes of my cheek
By Time's rude hand, would Fortune grant my pray'r,
With Love's sweet whispers would thy cottage seek.

But grant that beauty were no longer thine,
 Narcissa's converse would the hours beguile;
 Even in old age would happiness be mine:
 Time leaves a treasure, if he leaves thy smile.

ELEGY TO THE BISHOP OF LONDON.

The Poet supplicates his Brother-poet, the good Bishop of London, and one of the great Guardians of the British Museum, to dislodge the Parsons that are got into that Dwelling; thinking it more in Character for a pious Divine to attend rather to the Souls of his Parishioners, than to lousy Birds, Quadrupeds, and musty Manuscripts: and supplicates for himself the Post of a Curator.

O PORTEUS! hear a Poet's humble pray'r;
 For, Porteus, thou hast been a Poet too
Of yore: like me, of golden trappings bare;
 Like me, with scarce a stocking or a shoe.

No friends have I, alas! on Fortune's wheel;
 No Patron kind, to help me at a pinch:
 But happier thou! when wanting a good meal,
 Sweet smiled upon thee Lady Charlotte Finch.

Sweet were the smiles indeed of Lady Charlotte ;
For, lo ! 'twas she, as all the World believes,
So good, so chaste (abhorrent of the harlot),
Who heard thy prayer, and gave thee thy Lawn
Sleeves.

Say, Porteus, (for thou ought'st to love a Poet,)
Why can't I get to Montague's great House ?
As well as can thy Parsons, I can show it,
And keep from nits the Elephant or Mouse.

Three Parsons now are keeping Cock and Hen
From preying worms, the Weasel and the Rat ;
The tribe of Ostrich, and the tribe of Wren ;
The tribe of Goose and Cuckoo, tribe of Gnat.

Moths in old Books, and Parchments too, they scout.—
Though great the toil, and hundreds worth a year,
This arm, I trust, can put them to the rout ;
With equal fire attack their front and rear.

An't please your Lordship, well I know the art
Of snatching from perdition Fish and Fowl ;
Can bid mortality from Snakes depart ;
Preserve a Crocodile, and stuff an Owl.

As brave as Maurice, brave as Parson Nares,
 These hands the leathern forts of Moth can storm ;
 And, sharp as sportsmen Foxes chase and Hares,
 Through all his various windings hunt the Worm.

Then pray now send each Parson to his parish,
 Where Sin the cradle of each infant rocks ;
 And, since with nitty tribes so wondrous warrish,
 Oh bid them slay the maggots of their flocks !

ELEGY.

The Poet is addressed by the Goddess Wisdom, who reads his Fortune, very severe and very disheartening ; but nevertheless administers good Counsel.

Who is that Form which cometh clothed in light,
 With step of speechless grace, and front sublime ;
 Whose eye can pierce Futurity's deep night,
 And view the shadowy scenes of distant Time ?

Immortal Wisdom ! Hear her voice divine :
 “ O Peter ! I respect thy tuneful rage :
 I quote thee oft ; and many a golden line
Instructs, illumines, and adorns, my page.

“ Know too, my Pupils all thy Odes rehearse,
And dwell with constant rapture on thy name ;
Yet will foul Slander’s venom seek thy Verse,
Pale Envy’s fang too fasten on thy Fame.

“ But, lo ! the Cedar, on the hills that tow’rs,
Must face the Storm, and meet the Lightning’s stroke ;
The Drone will buz around the fairest Flow’rs ;
The Caterpillar crawls on every Oak.

“ The royal Eagle, in his airy sweep,
By Rooks and Crows is pester’d beyond measure ;
And, lo ! the mighty Monarch of the Deep
Too often feels the Sword-fish and the Thresher.

“ Sweet are the melodies that leave thy Lyre ;
Rich in invention, fancy, fire, and spirit :
Yet know, though Taste and Genius may admire,
Nor Place nor Pension will reward their merit.

“ High on Parnassus thou canst claim a seat,
A sure election ; yet, O Man of Sorrow !
If, mortal-like, thy mind be fix’d on meat,
Go, keep a vote-shop in a Cornish borough.”

ELEGY TO CYNTHIA.

He marvels at the unfair Representations of the World in regard to his Muse;
and candidly avows a stronger Penchant for Praise and the tender Passion, than for Satire.

WHAT are my dire offences, what my crimes,
That I can never, never be forgiven?
It seems as if all Hell were in my Rhymes;
Shut on my nose each avenue to Heaven.

No rude, no savage Satirist am I,
Arm'd with a Sledge to knock poor Folly down:
A gently biting Blister I apply,
And with a gliding Razor shave her crown.

I rush not on the World with scorpion whips;
Beneath their fury none are heard to screech:
Touch'd by my toe alone, a Culprit skips;
Shoe-leather application to his breech.

Yet hark: they all are crying, "Murther! murther!"
A Turk, a Saracen, is come among us:
No massacre was ever carried further;
His weapons scalp and flay, and stab and prong us."

How dreaded ; though, of courtesy the pink,
Mercy and I walk arm in arm together !—
Such are the horrors at a drop of ink !
Such are the clamours at a goose's feather !

Smiles at Court follies are a venial thing :
That I have laugh'd, at times, is very true ;
Laugh'd at the lordly Minions of a King,
Lord Owl, Lord Vulture, and the Lord knows who.

But, ah ! how happier, happier far, the hours,
Of Love and Cynthia that indulge the dream !
Then, then her song the Muse with rapture pours,
When Beauty and the Virtues are the theme.

But, Cynthia, dear variety invites ;
In quest of this, the Muse at times will stray :
And, though thy converse and thy bloom delights,
Perpetual roses must not strew her way.

ELEGY TO THE BEE.

He most pathetically addresses the Bee, on the Ingratitude of the World towards him ; and prophesies of himself a Fate equally cruel.

SWEET Labourer ! midst the Summer's golden hour,
Full oft I trace thy little busy flight :
With pleasure see thee perch from flow'r to flow'r ;
On violets, woodbines, roses, lilies, light.

Yet what to thee is Summer's golden smile ?
And what to thee the flower-enamell'd plain ?
Will gratitude reward thy daily toil ?
No, no ; thou workest for reward in vain.

Not long the hive of treasure will be thine ;
Rapacity will force thy little door :
Those treasures with thy life must thou resign,
A breathless victim on the fragrant store.

O base return, to lose thy precious breath !—
And I, ye Gods, as basely shall be served :
Thou for thy treasure wilt be smoked to death ;
And I, the honey'd Poet, shall be starved.

ELEGY TO SCOTLAND.

He drops a Tear for the supposed Death of Simplicity ; but, recollecting himself, finds her alive and in good Health at the Seat of the Duke of Roxburgh.

DEAD is Simplicity, long dead ; ah me !

Of yore, hard work'd Earl Thomas and his Spouse :
Earl Thomas sweating in the field ; while she
Help'd Nan the Dairy-maid, and milk'd her cows.

No sparkling jewels held my Lady's neck fast ;
No silks embraced her bosom and her crupper :
Beer and salt herrings form'd her simple breakfast ;
Her dinner beef, and bread and cheese her supper.

Coaches were scarcely known ; or, if they had one,
'Twas for conveniency toward the weather :
Not gilt and varnish'd ; no, a very sad one ;
A poor alliance between wood and leather.

Then was the Minstrel's Harp with rapture heard ;
The song of ancient days gave huge delight :
With pleasure too did wag the Minstrel's beard,
For Plenty courted him to drink and bite.

The Poet now no longer is carest :

Sweet Bird, he hops and flutters to and fro
With ragged plumage, and without a nest ;
Half-starved he sings in Paternoster Row.

Of yore, our Gentry held not honour cheap :

A man would hang the head, that left a jail ;
How like a Pointer that has choked a sheep,
And steals off with a squint, and drops his tail !

The earth, with terror clothed, the Bailiff trod ;

Like Jove th' important fellow walk'd the land :
His awful Voice, the Thunder of the God ;
Jove's Sceptre, the dread Tipstaff in his hand.

No more he frightens ; now the Man of Debt

With philosophic calmness walks the town :
No more, a scarecrow, Newgate starts a sweat ;
Despised his ruffian grasp, and mock'd his frown.

Yet let the Muse be candid : Fame reports,

That sweet Simplicity in Scotia reigns ;
That many a Man of Birth the Minstrel courts,
With bacon feeds, and stuffs with peas and beans.

Thrice-happy Scotia, blest by Ossian's birth,
And graced by her who every heart allures * !
Invite me to that pleasant spot of earth,
And happy let me touch the Lyre at Fleurs.

I heed not Johnson's sarcasms of rude Thunder ;
Who trod a greeting soil, yet scorn'd to thank it.
Where was the Genius of the Land, I wonder,
It did not toss the Cynic in a blanket ?

ELEGY.

He continues to wish that he had been so happy as to have been a Vote in a Cornish Borough ; and, with Tears in his Eyes, enumerates the Pleasures and Honours he has thus lost.

URGANDA, if a favourite Cat lies in,
Invites her friends to caudle and rich cake :
But when my Muse is brought to bed, no din,
No how-d'ye visits, my cool Neighbours make.

Or, is the Monkey sick, he takes his bed ;
Old Slop is sent for, to prescribe for Pug.—
Complains the Muse on what shall rest her head,
What soul will send a pillow or a rug ?

Oh! had I been a vote, a borough vote,
Then Fortune would have squeezed me by the hand :
Then would my back have worn a different coat ;
Shirts, stockings, shoes, had been at my command.

Then with his lofty Lordship I had din'd ;
With other Votes, a numerous band, at table :
Had drunk his health, received his smiles so kind,
'Midst clattering knives and forks, and sounds of Babel.

Then had I mark'd the wonders of his face,
Gaped at his speech, and swallowed every word :
Then had I got the promise of a place ;
For promises are frequent with a Lord.

Then had I touch'd his Lordship's hand or cuff ;
And measured him all over, inch by inch ;
Mark'd how his Lordship gracefully took snuff,
And possibly been honour'd with a pinch.

Then had I heard of Boys the joyous yells ;
To praise the Lord, the Cannon's loud endeavour,
And sounds of Marrow-bones, and jingling Bells,
Mix'd with sublime huzzas, " My Lord for ever !"

Then with his Lordship I had march'd the town,
With Mayor and Aldermen, a pompous band ;
To enter the votes' houses up and down,
And seen him shake Tom Stirrup by the hand :—

And now Ben Block the barber, now Sam Sledge,
Now Stitch the taylor, now the mason Shovel ;
Old Scrape the scavenger, the woodman Wedge ;
In short, each happy wight that own'd a hovel.

Then had I seen the Lord and Grannies greet,
Seen the old Dames their mouths for kisses wipe ;
Heard the loud smacks of busses, all so sweet ;
And seen his Lordship smoke their stumps of pipe.

Then had I seen his Lordship, at his chaise
Take leave, with Mayor and Aldermen, in sorrow ;
Hoped weather would be fine, and good the ways,
And that he soon again would bless the Borough.—

No matter who the bidders, all's the same :
The man that hard for Cloacina labours,
With gold is welcome to the good old Dame* ;
Ship-brokers, or Ship-breakers, or Ship-swabbers.

* An old electioneering lady, known in Cornwall by the name of the Dame of the West ; the fair subject of many a pleasant song.

ELEGY TO MR. ROWLANDSON.

The Poet wishes for the Pencil of Rowlandson, to make an Exhibition of the Rivingtons' Reviewing Parsons.

AH, Rowlandson ! in vain are all my toils ;
The Muse's ordeal the vile Priests despise :
In vain she roasts them, carbonades, and broils ;
The spit and gridiron the dark band defies.

Oh, did I boast thy pencil's happy power,
Parnassus should the black Impostors show ;
High on a pillory should the Culprits tower,
And make very faces to the Mob below.

There, while their ears sore writhe beneath the nail,
And each poor piteous Priest for mercy begs,
With tune Apollo should those ears regale,
And all the Muses send them rotten eggs.

While sad, below, Hypocrisy should mourn,
The British Critic dropping from her hand,
Its leaden leaves by Taste and Genius torn,
Old Aristarchus should survey the band.

Smiles on his cheek, and pleasure in his eye,
 To see the imprison'd heads with horror stare,
 "Lo!" pointing with contempt, the Sage will cry,
 "The foes of Learning who have stolen my chair."

ELEGY TO A FRIEND.

The Poet describes his small Library, and the cheap Manner of obtaining the Lucubrations of it: the ingenious Authors of whom, he speaks of with all the Reverence due to their Merits; and expresses a Hope of enlarging his Collection by the Assistance of Hucksters, Grocers, Pork-sellers, &c., well known Encouragers of modern Literature.

SMALL is the Poet's library, God knows ;
 Small is the praise, the candid Bard can utter :
 Leaves of light wisdom ; but in scraps it flows,
 Instructing, and in fond embrace with butter.

Subscribing to a Chandler's Shop for cheese,
 I gain the labours of celestial thought :
 Sermons of Nares my eye with wonder sees,
 And reads his British Critic all for nought.

But now, in higher walk t' employ his time,
 Behold, our Aristarchus, Parson Nares,
 Steals every day an hour from Prose and Rhyme,
 To wait on Snakes, stuff'd Monkeys, Owls, and Hares.

Far from his Parish, and the toil of praying,
Far from the drudgery of soul-salvation,
To save old Egypt's mummies fast decaying ;
The precious stink and treasure of the Nation.

To save the Bird's Nest, Butterfly, and Bat,
The tribe of Squirrel, and the tribe of Mouse,
The race of Weasel, and the race of Rat,
Whose glories grace of Montague the House :—

Where Maurice too and Beloe, grave Divines,
Fled from soul-slavery (what an easy fate !),
Make new antiquities, and new old lines,
And pension'd show the Toy-shop of the State.—

Yes, Sir, my Library is rather small :
In comes Mathias, hugging many a slop ;
And Parson Rennel from the huckster's stall,
And kissing sugar from the Grocer's shop.

And, lo ! the labours too of Mister Knight,
Leaves fond of fish, and oft with mustard taken ;
Leaves that in candles also take delight,
A chop of mutton, and a slice of bacon.

Soon too I'm promised Mister Fuseli's work,
His Shakspeare, Milton, by the man of pickles,
Discourses ;—also, by the man of pork,
The labours of the wonderful John Nichols.

And now, embracing sugar christen'd brown,
Leaves from the works of Cobler Gifford's Muse ;
Stepp'd from her stall at Ashburton, to town,
Where oft she whistled to old boots and shoes.

Ere long, the huckster promises me more ;
Lives of the brother Rivingtons, great men :
Great traders in the literary lore ;
Encouragers of paper, ink, and pen.

In Paul's Church-yard, the Bible and the Key,
This wondrous Pair is always to be seen ;
Somewhat the worse for wear, a little grey ;
One like a saint, and one with Cesar's mien.

Fat are the Hounds of Rivingtons' known pack,
Fat on the venison of the nation's park ;
Much like the Devil's Hell-hounds too, and black ;
And hunt, like them, their victims in the dark.

ELEGY.

The Poet remarks the different Treatment of Bards of the present, and that of past Ages; and complains of not meeting as much Encouragement for his Verses as Organ-grinders, Exhibitors of Bears, Camels, Dancing Dogs, and Punch.

IN days of yore, the golden days of Rhyme,
The mighty Monarch to his Minstrel bow'd;
But what is now the character sublime?
A blind old Ballad-singer and his croud.

Kings too were Poets: David to his Lyre
Sung sweetest elegy; and David's Son
Sung to the Harp with all his Father's fire,
And all the Virgins of Judea won.

And thou, Isaiah, too didst deal in Song;
Born, let me say, a gentleman, and bred:
In satire, let me tell thee, rather strong;
That broke the Babylonian Monarch's head.

Had I said half as bad of George the Third,
As thou of Babylon's imperious King,
My fate had been far different, take my word;
My just reward, the pillory or the string.

The organ-grinding Girl, whose discords kill,
Is beckon'd by our Dames of highest Quality :
And grist she gaineth to her screaming mill ;
And, curtseying, thanks them for their hospitality.

To me no Lover of the Muses cries,
“ Out with thy wallet, let us hear thy Odes ;
Then George's image shall delight thine eyes :
Behold, a sixpence for the Song of Gods.”

No Nymph of Quality on Peter calls ;
No Lesbia, fond of sparrows and the dove ;
And bid me make them melting Madrigals ;
And say, “ Sweet Peter, sing us songs of love.”

The Man who carries Punch about the streets,
His scolding Wife, the Baker, and the Devil ;
With fair rewards from all spectators meets,
And to his poverty each purse is civil.

The Man who leads his Camel up and down,
Where sports a grinning Monkey on his hump ;
Dines princely, such the favour of the Town ;
And never mourns, like me, in doleful dump

The Men who lead about a Dancing Bear,
 Or Dancing Dogs, good living never lack;
 While I, who lead the Muses, (fate severe !)
 Can neither treat my belly nor my back.

The Clowns of thirty pounds a year (no more),
 Laugh at the Sons of Song, and scornful pass us :
 “ One little rood of dirty land,” they roar,
 “ Is worth a thousand acres of Parnassus.”

ELEGY TO MR. RICHARD GOUGH.

The Poet addresses Mister Richard Gough, the Enfield Antiquarian, on the Subject of the Arrival of a Couple of invaluable Curiosities from Egypt, but of whose Nature our British Antiquarians seem totally ignorant. He predicts a future Batch of Invaluables for our National Museum ; and concludes with a Wish that Mister Gough would contrive to keep the three Parsons awake, who are the grand Curators of the Contents of our British Ark.

O RICHARD GOUGH ! amid thy Enfield dwelling,
 Now o'er a Mummy's precious leg or loin
 Devoutly tasting and devoutly smelling,
 Now licking an old Dish, and now a Coin ;—

O Richard ! amidst Locks and rusty Nails,
Now blinking o'er old Farthings blue and green,
And trumpery that every month regales
The readers of the Gemman's Magazine ;—

Why keepest thou from London far away,
While various wonders of the Nile approach ?
Oh come and view a treasure then ; and say,
What greets our eyes, a scorpion or cock-roach.

And haste to view another wonder, Gough ;
With rapture are the Virtuosi giddy :
Famed Alexander's Coffin ; or a Trough
For Egypt's Pigs, or Cleopatra's Biddy.

To meet each marvel antiquarian, haste ;
Proclaim its quality, that none may doubt it :
With rich sagacity of smell and taste,
To London come, and tell us all about it.

Sir Joseph and his virtuoso friends
Stun, with their loud rejoicings, our Museum :
Archbishop, Bishop, to the wonder bends ;
And means, 'tis said, to order a Te Deum.

Old Nilus writes us, he will search his flood,
And send us his drown'd rarities with pleasure ;
Probe every hole, and shovel up his mud,
To load our happy isle with tons of treasure.

I see, I see, arrive from Egypt's lands,
Gods of old times, and Godlings, green and blue ;
Ribbs of its ancient kings, and legs and hands ;
To ravish all the lovers of virtú.

Precious through time, I view a Vermin vile
That crawl'd on Pharaoh's back, the very Louse ;
And eke the little Croaker of the Nile,
The very Frog that hopp'd about his house :—

Fingers of Lady Potiphar of note,
Which fix'd on Joseph, to her charms to bind him ;
And, lo ! an actual Rag of that torn coat
Which, struggling, modest Joseph left behind him.

Come too, and shake the Parsons from their snore :
Or snakes, and toads, and weasels, steal from sight ;
The moths and butterflies will wing to door ;
And owls, and bats, and eagles, take their flight *.

* During the profound and mid-day sleep of the three divine Curators of the British Museum, many of the most valuable articles in the same dormitory,

ELEGY.

He mourns at the Discovery of Gold, as a Demon of Destruction; expresses modest Wishes, and pays a small but just Tribute of Applause to our amiable Princesses.

BLEST were the days when Gold was yet unknown :
The man who drew it from the secret Earth,
Forced from its bosom an eternal groan,
And, luckless, gave a fatal Demon birth.

The burning soil of Afric I have trod,
And seen the shining mischief in the sands :
Then sighing said, “ Behold the World’s vain God ;
Our Baal, that rank idolatry commands !”

And golden Mexico these eyes have seen,
And from the splendid wonder turn’d aside ;
Where Vanity extends her boundless reign,
And loads the shrines of Luxury and Pride.

taking advantage of this comfortable nap, contrived lately to make their escape ; so that, if a proper person be not appointed with a flapper, to keep their eyes open, the three Levites will soon be the only remaining curiosities of Montague House.

I sigh not for a waggon-load of Gold;
 For wild Ambition never fired my wishes:
 Some modest little place I hope to hold,
 And taste a morsel of the loaves and fishes.

Who court the glittering gems of Fortune's mines,
 Court frequent ruin: thus, upon the thorn,
 The Spider spins by night his silken lines,
 That catch, and break beneath the drops of morn.

I hate not Courts, and all that Courts contain;
 A thousand beauties may to Courts belong:
 Lo! George's Daughters have inspired my strain,
 Sweet subjects also of some future Song.

I mark not Grandeur with an envious eye;
 But when those Nymphs of merit I behold,
 I own I see their virtues with a sigh,
 And envy them their goodness, not their gold.

A bleating Lamb, for verdant hill and vale,
 Alas! I wish to leave my barren rock:
 A cooing Dove, that tells his plaintive tale,
 To build a nest amid the great State-oak.

Or even a Spider, on the cloud-capp'd tree

I wish to weave, for wandering flies, my net :

Nay, a poor Pismire (smaller can I be?),

Run on its ribs, and pick my daily meat.

I never wish'd to pull a Monarch down,

Nor close in hard fraternal hugs, not I :

Th' equality I sought was, near the Crown,

To hob or nob in sack with Mister Pye.

ELEGY TO A FRIEND.

The Poet mentions a Part of the Furniture of his Room—grieves that he was never married—supplicates the Vengeance of Venus on the mercenary Beauty—compliments his own Merit, and makes no Doubt of an exalted Situation in the Temple of Fame.

ALAS ! I boast not Fortune's glittering heap ;

Few are the decorations of my room :

Hung with some tapestry indeed, but cheap ;

The gratis labours of the Spider's loom.

Too poor, I never could afford a Wife ;

Ye Gods ! of all misfortunes, most distressing :

My stars refused that comfort of man's life,

Deeming the prize perhaps too great a blessing.

For many a Phyllis did I pen the song,
 Knelt to her beauty with most saint-like eyes :
 In vain my verse, in vain my wooing tongue ;
 The venal Fair-one wanted more than sighs.

Must beauty be an article of trade ?
 Like Cherries, must the balmy Lips be sold ?
 The soft and swelling Bosom of the Maid,
 Just like a Rabbit's Skin, be given for gold ?

Forbid it Venus ! From the venal Fair
 Snatch every charm, to Hay convert her Locks ;
Pug up her nose, and pug-like make her stare ;
 And pit her pimpled visage with small-pox.

Red make her eyes, and turn her teeth to jet ;
 For balm, oh ! taint her breath with rotten eggs ;
 Corkscrew her shape, and elephant her feet ;
 Raise a high hump, and give two tankard legs.

And, if she seek for public praise by song
 And novel writing, sink her to the dirt :
 Oh ! be for ever out of tune her tongue,
 And may the Novel even disgrace Dame Flirt.

Such be the punishment of Nymphs who sell
 (What love, and love alone, should bless) their charms :
Then billets doux, and sighing Swains, farewell;
 The eye's fond dotage, and the soul's alarms.

Merit and I, sad exiles, hand in hand,
 Just like the Children in the Wood, poor worms,
Unnoticed crawl a most ungrateful land,
 Save by sharp Hunger and the howling Storms.

Yet will some comfort to our souls remain :
 When Time shall tear our frames, each beam and rafter,
Though here, for this World's good, we sing in vain,
 Our Songs with glory will be crown'd hereafter.

Why with the milder virtues was I born,
 'Midst a rude world where Vice is in her bloom ?
Why with a heart by tempests to be torn,
 Lined with the tender Cygnet's softest plume ?

Amid those scenes of villainy and art,
 Where havoc, murder, depredation, dwell;
Instead of such a softly-feather'd Heart,
 A rugged Grinding-stone had done as well.

While Pope and Churchill, with envenom'd rage,
 Attack the vice and folly of our isle,
 No war envenomed with the World I wage;
 Sweet Pity sighs, or yields perhaps a smile.

The man who brings into the World a mind,
 With milk of human kindness beyond measure,
 Will in himself, with small reflection, find,
 He brought to this our World a *world of treasure.

ELEGY TO THE BAT.

The Poet addresses the Bat with much acrimony; discovers a strong Similarity of Feature in Bat's Face, and the Faces of Rivingtons' Critics.—He however acquits Bat, but condemns their pampered literary Mohawks.

DAY's golden Orb has sunk beneath the skies,
 And Silence steals upon the world of shade:
 The little playful humming host of Flies,
 With gambols wild, the fields of air invade.

Vile Imp of darkness! from thy dirty hole,
 I see thee start in wickedness away;
 Fierce as a mighty Lord of the Control,
 With harmless insects making horrid fray.

* "That brought into our world a world of woe."

MILTON.

In thine I mark the phiz of Parson Nares
 (The cynic features of ill-nature fill it);
Who, when young Genius his light wing prepares,
 Leaps from the shop of Rivington to kill it.

In thine too I behold the phiz of Beloe
 (Poor rhyming Priest), and eke the phiz of Rennel,
Sad wights; and eke that limping cobbling fellow:
 Labourers in Defamation's filthy kennel.

For where is one of Rivington's Reviews,
 Like Eastern Winds, that doth not cast a blight;
That does not try to murder every Muse,
 And cloud her merits with oblivious night?

Yet, little Imp of horror, I forgive
 Thy depredation on the insect host:
Thou crackest all their tiny bones, to live;
 And Bats must eat, though lives of Flies be lost.

But, lo! the Cobbler and the pamper'd Priest,
 For luxury their scrawling pens employ:
Abuse supplies them with a monthly feast;
 The palate prompts their poison to destroy.

In vain for praise is Candour heard to pray;
 Beg on fair Merit smiles of commendation:
 Tush! havoc is the order of the day;
 Critics, like Demons, thrive upon damnation.

ELEGY.

The Poet condemns the present general Taste, and foretels the Return of the Ages of Barbarism.

THE World seems tired (the idiot) with good things:
 Adieu, adieu, to all that is sublime!
 Disgusted Taste for flight prepares her wings;
 And curses Music, Playing, Paint, and Rhyme.

Barbaric ages shall again return;
 The Goth and Vandal now are on the way:
 Even now I hear the voice of Wisdom mourn,
 As darkness blots the beams of orient day.

Oh say, were Phebus and each Muse asleep,
 When Master Betty murder'd Shakspeare's page;
 Or when Miss Mudie, by her lofty leap,
 Shook off her leading-strings, to lead the age?

Where was the Muse of Poetry, to suffer
Pig-boys to quit their troughs, to print bombast ;
And tempt poor Windham too to be their puffer,
Who gravely tells us Thomson is surpast?

And where wast thou, O Goddess of the Brush,
On whom the voice of Taste in thunder calls ;
That to th' Academy thou didst not rush,
And dash the daubs of Dulness from the walls?

Or where wast thou, O Goddess of the Fiddle,
To suffer Air to join with Goosy Gander,
Cock Robin, Horner, and High-diddle-diddle ;
And turn a tuneful prostituted pander?

O Muse of Eloquence ! how canst thou bear
Poor Canning's voice, that humbly apes thine art?
Vast is the difference, to the judging ear :
Heaven's awful Thunder, to a Brewer's Cart.

And, Nymph of Sculpture too, the Bard demands
How thou with patience, with uncursing breath,
Couldst see Saint Paul by hard unhallowed hands
Stoned, stoned, (poor Saint !) a second time, to death?

In vain I preach, in vain in scorn I smile,
 In vain my pen the giant Vice assails ;
 Herculean labour, to reclaim an Isle
 Where Rapture doats on Mother Hubbard's Tales !

ELEGY.

THE SPEECH OF PRUDENCE.

" Too much of freedom in thy Stanza dwells ;
 A free-thinker and free-speaker thy Muse,"
 Prim Prudence cries ; who keeps a shop, and sells,
 With one sweet smile, to Christians and to Jews.

" Truth is a dangerous acquaintance, mind ;
 Struck by her voice, the World is in alarm," Continues Prudence : " go and Flattery find :
Thine idol-goddess does a deal of harm.

" In days of yore, when first thy Song began,
 How suppliant thou didst beg one laurel sprig !
 So full of meek humility the man ;
 ' One little leaf to stick about his wig !'

“ But soon as Fame a civil word bestow’d,
Puss show’d her tail ; of daring what display !
Out rush’d thy Pegasus upon the road,
Heels up, and kick’d down all that cross’d his way.

“ How tinged with blushes was thy Muse’s morn !
Tones in the minor key, so sweet, so under ;
The Linnet’s melting warble from the thorn :—
Soon changed to fury, tempest, flame, and thunder.

“ Thy wanton Hawk each fearful Bird pursued.
How couldst thou laugh at Bishops and Reviewers ?
Thus, in their anger, wast thou barbecued ;
Their stake thy body pierced, thine eyes their skewers.

“ With lawless fury didst thou drive thy car
O’er hill and dale, indeed without a fear :
Vainly thou deem’dst thyself a Man of War ;
Reviewers deem thee a poor Privateer.

“ Ah, Peter ! thou hast made the Court thy foe ;
Thy persecution then can be no riddle :
It hates to caper to thy tune, I know ;
And wish’d a thousand times to break thy fiddle.

“ Most dangerous is th’ attempt at reformation :

Why to the People wilt thou tell their sins ?

Even let the boobies work their own salvation ;

Why push into their consciences thy pins ?

“ The Bard who begs his alms from door to door,

Must never dare expose the fool or cheat.

The Rhymers should remember he is poor :

Parnassus dealeth more in air than meat.

“ Dread is the Satirist, a name of fear ;

Beast of a thousand heads, a horrid creature :

The World’s afraid to see him, or come near ;

Noli me tangere in every feature.

“ How couldst thou dream of mocking Courts of Kings ?

Of laughing at the Favourites of a Throne ?

Cutting of Quality the stars and strings ;

And tying, Dog-like, to their tails a bone ?

“ By Reason’s curb thy mouth has never bled :

Go, wear it, bear it ; use will make thee able :

And, if a truth must get into thy head,

Know, knaves and blockheads keep the nicest table.

“ Woe to the foolish man, and fit for nought,
Who cannot shut his eyes against the light !
Woe to the man that dares to speak his thought ;
And woe to him who swears not, black is white ! ” —

I own that I have suffer'd for opinion ;
A liberty of thought was ever mine :
My soul abhorr'd Hypocrisy's dominion,
And scorn'd to yield for pelf a golden line.

Well then, since Poets, though divine, must munch,
Dame Prudence, songs of praise shall store my wallet.

Here, Waiter ; bring me a beef-steak and punch :
Conscience, go make thy humble bow to Palate.

Stars, garters, ribbons, reds and greens and blues,
Enjoy your splendour, be with flattery fed :
Even Brudenell's self shall smile upon the Muse,
And find to Gold and Silver changed his Lead.

Breakfasts and dinners, routs and masquerades ;
Lo ! crown'd with garlands, ye shall pass along :
Apollo's self, with all th' Aonian Maids,
Shall join the jovial crew with Harp and Song : —

And, weeping Ladies, should a Lap-dog die,
His memory shall not want the tuneful shell;
And should a breathless Monkey want a sigh,
The Bard has praises and a sigh to sell.

TO BELLA.

AN! tell me not that I am old,
And bid me quit the billing Dove :
Though many years have o'er me roll'd,
My heart is still alive to love.
Then tell me not that I am old.

When Beauty's blush delights no more,
And Beauty's smile and sparkling eye ;
When these no longer I adore,
Then, Pity, yield the Bard a sigh.
I will not quarrel to be told,
" Son of Apollo, thou art old."

ON THE DEATH

OF

A CELEBRATED MUSICIAN.

ADIEU to the song of the grove !
Our Philomel warbles no more.
The loss of his carols of love,
The Shepherds will ever deplore.

And sweet to the Nymphs of the vale
Were his Lays, what delight on the ear !
Whenever he melted the gale,
How the Virgins would hasten to hear !

Where is Echo, so fond of his voice,
So pleased on each accent to dwell ?
Poor Echo no more will rejoice,
But silently sleep in her cell.

Though doom'd from the World to depart,
From remembrance he cannot remove
While tenderness reigns in the heart ;
For his Song was the language of Love.

Though, sever'd by Death from our plains,
Thou charmest no longer the sphere,
Sweet Warbler, thy spirit remains ;
For thy carols will live in our ear.

LINES TO LORD NELSON;

WITH HIS LORDSHIP'S NIGHT-CAP, THAT CAUGHT FIRE ON THE POET'S HEAD, AT A CANDLE, AS HE WAS READING IN BED AT MERTON.

TAKE your Night-cap again, my good Lord, I desire,
For I wish not to keep it a minute :
What belongs to a Nelson, where'er there's a fire,
Is sure to be instantly in it.

TO CHLOE.

AH ! tell me not that I grow old,
That Love but ill becomes my tongue :
Chloe, by me thou ne'er wert told,
Sweet Damsel, that thou wert too young.

SONG.

THE smile of the Maid I adore,
I have sought, but have sought it in vain :
Hope, lull me with flattery no more ;
Fate dooms me to sigh and complain.

When she meets me, the radiance of morn
 Breaks forth and enlivens my eye :
 When she leaves me, I wander forlorn,
 And Night's shadows descend on my sigh.

O Venus, how cruel thine art,
 That bids us such beauty behold !
 In thee how unkind, to impart
 To such beauty a heart that is cold !

Why fill'd is her eye with thy fire ?
 Why given was the voice of thy Dove,
 The bosom and lip of desire,
 That will frown on the kisses of Love ?

VERSES

FOUND IN A BOWER AT MERTON, ON LORD NELSON'S TAKING THE COMMAND OF THE BRITISH FLEET OFF CADIZ.

FROM Merton's pleasing shades, again
 To give new wonders to the main,
 The Hero seeks the Gaul.
 But ah, what loss ! In Fancy's eye
 I see him bleed ; and hear the sigh
 That mourns, ah ! mourns his fall.

Yet will his Genius haunt the grove :
And Britons, who their country love,
 Shall here with ardour glow ;
Drink inspiration from his name ;
And, emulous to join his fame,
 Shall pant to meet the Foe.

And Beauty too will wander here,
To give to Merton's stream a tear,
 And pensive mark her bow'rs :
For what though Glory charm'd his heart ?
The softer Graces claim'd a part,
 And sooth'd his peaceful hours.

TO HELEN IN TOWN.

SWEET Helen, the dews of the morn
 Our steps to the valley invite ;
The Linnet, the Thrush, on the thorn,
 Are preparing to yield thee delight.

Oh haste from the Town and its noise !
 Health is ready to yield thee her treasure :
Then from tumult repair to our joys,
 To the region of silence and pleasure.

From our cots we will wander away,
And find out the haunt of the Dove,
Where he coos to his Mate on the spray;
And study sweet lessons of love.

And then we will stray to the bow'r,
Where I'll gaze on thy beautiful features;
Thy kisses of fragrance devour,
And coo like those innocent creatures.

Ah! I fear me, I ask her in vain;
The Town will detain the dear Maid:
The Tongues of the Beaus in her train,
Are rivals to Stilness and Shade.

Yet what folly to think one so fair
Would bless with her smile a poor Swain,
Be sooth'd and be won by his pray'r,
Who can rivet a world in her chain!

'THE INCONSTANT.

THE sigh of her heart was sincere,
When blushing she whisper'd her love;
A sound how divine in my ear!
For her voice was the voice of the Dove.

Ah! who could from Phyllida fly?

Yet I sought other Nymphs of the vale,
Forgot both her blush and her sigh,
Nay, forgot that I told her my tale.

In sorrow, I wish'd to return,

And the tale of my passions renew.
“ False Shepherd,” she answer'd with scorn,
“ False Shepherd, for ever adieu !

“ For thee, no more tears will I shed ;
To Truth and sweet Friendship I go :
The Bird by a wound that has bled,
Is happy to fly from his foe.”

ELEGY ON JESSICA.

To her grave will I follow the Fair,
Nor blush her pale corse to sustain ;
Whose graces, alas ! were her snare,
Which Prudery beheld with disdain.

Her Youth was the Blossom of May,
Her Voice was the Nightingale's tune,
Her Cheek the pure crimson of Day,
And her Mind the mild beams of the Moon.

So fair and unguarded a form
Drew the lightnings of danger around :
A victim she fell to the storm,
And blush'd a sweet wreck on the ground.

By the splendour of riches and power,
Sweet Innocence oft is undone :
Unguarded too, many a flower
Has sunk by the rays of the Sun.

I saw thee when beauty was thine,
Too rich for the Poet's poor arms ;
When Envy confess'd it divine,
And Wonder would gaze on its charms.

I have seen thee when Lovers around,
In hope of thy favour, would stand ;
And in sorrow depart, when they found
Not a smile, nor a kiss from thy hand :—

And saw, when no more it inspired,
No longer our hearts to beguile ;
From thy bosom when Rapture retired,
And the Loves had withdrawn from thy smile.

And when conquest, alas ! was no more,
I heard thee in poverty moan ;
Asking alms, but in vain, at the door
Of the mansion that once was thy own.

Unwept shall poor Jessica lie,
And neglected be scorn'd on the bier ?
Though hard Virtue refuse her a sigh,
Yet Pity shall give her a tear.

SONG TO A COQUET.

DEAR Phyllis, thou know'st not thy charms ;
That thy Cheek boasts the bloom of the Rose ;
That thine Eye by its lustre alarms ;
That thy Bosom surpasses the Snows.

Thou know'st thou hast wit at thy will ;
Yet from wit, often prudence departs :
Thus furnish'd with weapons to kill,
Thou daily art murdering poor hearts.

Not safely a Swain can pass by ;
Thou art ready his steps to beguile :
Some lure is thrown out from thine eye,
Some lure from a song or a smile.

Oh learn from the Minstrel of Night
A lesson to govern the Maid !
Though he fills every ear with delight,
He sings amid silence and shade.

LAURA.

A PASTORAL SONG.

O MY Heart ! thou so lately wert blest ;
Those days I shall ever adore
When Pleasure alone was thy guest ;
But to meet thee, ah ! meet thee no more.

How dull were the grove and the bower,
If the Maid of thy love was not nigh !
She gave bloom, she gave life, to each flower ;
But with Laura, dear Laura, they die.

Lo ! the Linnets, enlivening the shade,
No longer give joy to my ear ;
But their carols how sweet when the Maid,
The pride of the valley, was near !

To the gloom, near yon fount, let me go,
Indulging of Fancy the dream :
I will listen to murmurs of woe,
And hear my sad tale in the stream.

A LYRIC EPISTLE TO MYSELF.

SIR, you possess a deal of spirit,
A deal indeed of sterling merit ;
Your head was cast in Nature's niciest mould :
Whatever meets your touch or view,
Is poetry at once, Peru ;
You turn, like Midas, every thing to gold.

A Block of Marble, it is said,
Holds a fine Statue, or fine Head ;
A very sage remark, beyond a doubt :
The only difficulty lies
In bringing to our wondering eyes
This very curious Head or Statue out.

Of Fiddles too, we may declare,
Each holds a fascinating air :
But say, what cunning hand can touch this Fiddle
To bring out this enchanting sound ?
You, Sir, are fortunately found
In the good graces of Miss Tweedle Tweedle.

Your tuneful art at once creates :
Description on your pencil waits,
Whene'er you paint the storm or give the sigh,
The thunders of the roaring deep,
The infant's smiling harmless sleep,
The wolf's red glare, or pearl on Pity's eye.

Again : a Canvas, Sir, or Board,
Holds Pictures by the heart ador'd ;
And, Sir, such ingenuity is yours,
You work out very fine old Heads,
And Hills sublime, and flowery Meads,
To last as long as Picture's self endures.

Heavens, what a Proteus ! Now you rise,
A daring Eagle, to the skies,
Surveying Princes on their Thrones below,
Small as Tomtits upon a twig,
Or simple Robins on a sprig ;
Not half th' importance of a Rook or Crow :—

In short, scarce bigger than a Mite ;
So very little in the sight
Of this sublimely soaring sun-clad Fowl,
As in Charles Fox's eye George Rose
(And that is small enough, God knows),
Or Eldon under Thurlow's piercing scowl.

And now a Turtle making love,
Saying soft things to Mistress Dove,
Billing with quivering wings, and coo, and song ;
Now busy building a neat nest ;
Discussing now, supremely blest,
The future education of their young.

So happily the heart to move,
You touch the tender Lyre of Love ;
Exciting now the tear, and now the smile ;
I should not wonder, Sir, (between us,
Under the rose,) if Madame Venus
Presented you the freedom of her isle.

Some make you sour and supercilious,
And splenetic and atrabilious ;
That is to say, an Ocean of hot Bile :
Now, Sir, I know you are not bilious ;
To coin a word, Sir, rather chyleous,
A silky milky Fount of purest Chyle.

Some paint you a Mad Bull, wild roaring,
Tossing folks on your horns, and goring.—
This picture verily provokes my laugh :
You ar'n't that formidable creature,
Of milder elements your nature ;
Your character resembles more the calf.

The Ladies too, so frighten'd, fear ye ;
They feel not courage to come near ye ;
And yet you treat them with much love and ease :
I know your manners are so bland,
The sweetest Ladies of the land
May take whatever liberties they please.

Then, Sir, your reverence for the Sex !
You ne'er abuse them, never vex ;
But so much love, so Ovid-like, is given :
So much, Sir, for your soul I fear,
If charming Woman were not there,
You would not, if 'twere offer'd, go to Heaven.

You paint so sweetly Love's alarms,
The neat Historian of their charms ;
Touch with such rich luxuriance form and air ;
In gratitude the Sex should join,
And give you gold for every line ;
Nay, make you Poet Laureat to the Fair.

Ulysses like, the World around,
What mines of treasure you have found !
Though not the mines that purchase in the stocks.
So polish'd, you return'd from travel ;
Like a rough Stone, or lump of Gravel,
That for the ocean leaves its barren rocks.

When sickness sinks their spirits low,
And damps their animated glow,
Stops the poor labouring heart and fluttering breath;
The lightnings of your page illume
The eye's wan melancholy gloom,
And ope its film again, though closed in death.

It is with Envy, Sir, a law,
To find in every fame a flaw;
Enough you boast for Envy's tooth, a mountain:
Pure flowing from the Muse's hills,
Let Envy mud a thousand rills,
You still remain a full and beauteous fountain.

Sir, should you through the country pass,
And put up at the Horse, or Ass,
Blue Boar, or Magpie, Ram, or Goat, or Bear;
At once the people of the village
Would leave their tools, and quit their tillage,
To take in wonders at the eye and ear.

Were Pidcock through our isle to go,
And, Sir, present you for a show,
What towns, what cities, would your form amuse!
He would get money to some tune!
More, Sir, than by his huge Baboon,
His wondrous Elephant, and Kangaroos.

Fools who would throw you into shade,
Declare no genius is display'd,
Nature, originality, sublime,
No ease, no humour, and no wit :—
Sir, let fools say what fools think fit ;
Trust to that upright Scrutineer, call'd Time.

Your rival Brothers of the Quill,
Are Moles beneath their dirty hill ;
That darksome labour, and the field destroy :
Or just like Beetles, from the ground
That rise, and hum, and buz around ;
And, reeling, every Traveller annoy.

Abhorrent of the spectred shade,
Your mighty mind for light was made ;
You for the regions of the Stars were born :
So like the Lark, with liquid lay,
Impatient of the coming day,
That mounting breaks into the beams of morn.

You're a nice Candle, let me say,
Burning with mild and steady ray :—
But let a saucy Moth desert his hole,
And flap the flame with wanton wing ;
We hear him his own requiem sing,
Stretch'd midst the altar's fire, a shrivell'd coal.

Your soul is full of Summer weather;
A Zephyr that scarce moves a feather:
But when your vengeance wakes upon your foes,
Farewell the smiling Cherub mien;
The Jove of wrath at once is seen;
Flame in your eye, and thunder on your brows.

Then, lo! the Spirit of the Storm,
Wild bursting forth, a giant form,
Lashing the surly billows to a roar;
That heaves old Ocean from his bed,
Bids him disgorge his swallowed dead,
And pour his wrecks upon the foamy shore.—

Sir, like a Traveller at some stile,
That wearied stops to breathe awhile,
The Muse one minute shall suspend her Lays;
Or like a Miller's, Sir, my wheel,
Fatigued, shall some small respite feel:
And so I close the flood-hatch of your praise.

PART II.

SEVEN cities of the Grecian world
Pull'd wigs, pull'd caps, foul language hurl'd ;
On Homer's birth-place, proud t' exalt their horn :
Pray let us take especial care,
Not thus to kindle up a war
By not informing folks where you were born.

Cornwall and Devonshire, perhaps,
May for your birth pull wigs and caps :
Now, Sir, I do not really mean to quiz ye ;
Was it in Dodbrook that the light
First enter'd on your precious sight ;
Or, Sir, at gallant Foy, or Mevagizzy ?

Sir, I believe that I can guess :
Your birth-place Dodbrook deign'd to bless ;
Famed for white ale, and bullocks, ewes, and rams.
'Twas in this spot your genius rare
Did first inhale the vital air,
And caught the tender spirit of the Lambs.

Of what religion are you, pray ?
I think, Sir, I have heard you say

The Quaker's, void of noise and ostentation;
And to the great, sublime, all-wise
Creator of ten thousand skies,
That silence is the highest adoration.

Oh! would the great Longinus rise,
And on your Labours cast his eyes,
Touch'd with what rapture would he read your Rhyme!
Soon would he cry, "O Men of Metre,
Hide your diminish'd heads at Peter!
Here burns the Bard; here towers the true sublime.

" Here glows of Poetry the soul;
Here Fancy's boundless oceans roll.
To him, what are ye? Crackers, and a Bomb.
Compared to him, ye rhyming men,
The Bird of Jove, and humble Wren;
The Pyramids, and some poor Turkish Tomb.

" Of this rich Gem of lucid nature,
Ah! could ye imitate the water;
Obtain the mantle of high-mounting Pindar;
Though not up near him, cheek by jowl,
Ye still might be a Lump of Coal,
That flames and warms with very little cinder."—

I know that Flattery's apt to wound ;
There's Rum, there's Brandy, in the sound :
Yet, not to inebriate Geniuses like you ;
You, Sir, are proof against this spirit.
But there's a proverb upon Merit ;
Which says (the proverb), "Give the Devil his due."

A little flattery's right : I dare
Tell men of genius what they are ;
A pretty stimulus to emulation.
A Farthing-candle merits praise :
Even Canning has his tiny rays,
Though born not to illuminate a Nation.

The little Dew-drops on the field
Possess a splendour ; though they yield
To sparkling Diamonds, yet they have their hour :
They charm us with their elfin light ;
At morn the Nymphs and Swains invite ;
Adorn and feed the herbage and the flow'r.

Ah ! should I pull off a Wren's head,
And strike the little Warbler dead,
Because like Philomel not loud and clear ?
Or break Arachne's tender line ;
Whose silken texture can't confine
Hyrcanian tigers, or a Russian bear ?

Ah! when, Sir, you resign your breath
(For Verse has no effect on Death,
Ne'er melted his dull leaden ear, by metre),
A thousand beauteous eyes in gloom,
Will drop their pearls upon your tomb;
Poor mourning Pilgrims at the shrine of Peter.

Sir, Sir, you never ought to die;
But, like Elijah, mount on high:
Not like a paltry, crawling worm, expire.
A Bard of your transcendent fame,
If not a chariot, sure might claim
A handsome curricule or gig of fire.

Where are the Princes of the land,
And Men of Rank, a chosen band?—
Betting on Lewes or on Brighton course.
Sancho, Pavilion, and Squire Mellish,
Have spoil'd for Pegasus all relish;
Poor Pegasus, the Muse's favourite horse.

Lo! liveries on the Racer wait;
He eats, and drinks, and sleeps, in state;
So cropp'd his ears, so comb'd his tail and mane:
While Pegasus neglected lies
Upon a dunghill, shuts his eyes,
And lean and ragged grazes through a lane.

Is't possible with all your powers,
With all your Poetry's fine flowers,
That you should gain no patronage, no pension?
'Tis strange; 'tis passing strange, indeed :
This when Posterity shall read,
What will it say? " Impossible ! invention."

Amid the swallowing gulf of Time
What wrecks, alas, of Prose and Rhyme !
But, lo ! this gulf shall not thy bark devour :
Lo ! all sails set, I see it brave
The fury of the thundering wave ;
Wind on the quarter, fourteen knots an hour.

Lord, Sir ! you don't know half your fame :
When dead a century, your Name
Will, Snow-ball like, increase with rolling years ;
Even your worst Song, which you may call
A common vulgar tune, that's all,
Will then be deem'd the Music of the Spheres.

Yet with your mountain of high merit,
And with your ocean of proof spirit,
You gain no praise, no favour, from Reviewers :
Who call your lucubrations, stuff ;
Not fit to wrap up cheese or snuff ;
Scarce fit to travel through the common sewers.

Folks will inquire about your size ;
Your hair or wig, your nose, your eyes ;
Whether you were not taller than a steeple ;
In conversation, hawk or dove ;
Whether, like other men, made love ;
Wore clothes, and eat and drank, like other people.—

Excuse this tribute of fair praise,
Due, Sir, to your immortal Lays ;
Sincere is this Address, or Ode, or Letter.

Perchance your modesty may blush :
It is your failing, Sir ; but tush !
No man admires you more, or likes you better.

ONE MORE PEEP
AT THE
ROYAL ACADEMY;
OR,
ODES TO ACADEMICIANS,
&c. &c.

*Sunt quibus in Satyra videar nimis acer, et ultra
Legem tendere opus, &c.* HORACE.

SOME folks declare (to wound my dove-like nature),
I mingle too much acid with my satire;
Too prone to smile at Garters, Stars, and Strings,
And take strange liberties with Queens and Kings;
Roast on my ordeal, like an inquisition,
Peer, parson, poet, pimp, academician:
While others swear, two bastards of Apollo
(The Bellman and Mathias) beat me hollow.

ODES

TO THE ACADEMICIANS.

The Bard, after a long absence, saluteth the Royal Academy.—He singeth, in a Strain of high Panegyric, of Himself—yet acknowledging the malevolent Depredations of Time on his Person.

AGAIN th' Academy I greet ;
Once more, my graphic friends, we meet :
Shake hands. Ah ! why the greeting hand withdraw ?
Lo ! by your looks, ye seem to say,
“ Avaunt, thou vagabond ! away !
We'd sooner take the Devil by the paw.”

Well, well ; once more the Bard appears ;
He sings, in spite of rolling years :
Time has not stolen one atom of his fire.
The Muse, unconscious of decay,
Still pours the proud Pindaric Lay,
Still strikes with equal energy the Lyre.

Now cries the Critic of my Rhyme,
“ How darest thou dream of the sublime,

And fancy that it e'er inspired thy Odes ?
How darest thou take a Pindar's name ;
To steal into the dome of Fame,
And place thy Momus by the side of Gods ?"—

I own that Time, to my surprise,
Has done some mischief to my eyes,
And done that mischief much against my will ;
But as the Bulfinch, beyond doubt,
Sings better when his eyes are out,
Why not the Songster of th' Aonian Hill ?

Time too has chosen to efface
The fine Apollo form and grace ;
And somewhat bent to earth my lofty head :
Yet, though the knave has touch'd my hand,
The Goose-quill still it can command,
And o'er the snow the feather'd Giant lead.

Time has made free too with my features ;
Those pretty inoffensive creatures,
That never yet were cruel to the Fair :
Spoil'd my poor lip, and dimple sleek,
Run his hard ploughshare o'er my cheek,
And stolen the blushing roses that were there.

Time too, I own, my mouth has enter'd;
To steal some pearl the rogue has ventur'd,
And given a lisping to my tuneful tongue:
But, thank the Muses for their care,
And Phoebus, of his tricks aware,
Safe is my brain, the fount of flowing Song.

Th' Academicians would rejoice
If Time had also stolen my voice:
But while that voice exists, by Heavens, I'll sing.
Yet mind me; while I pour my Lays,
To Justice I my altar raise,
Too virtuous to profane the Muse's spring.

It certainly must be confest,
I come a most unwelcome guest;
'Mid sheaves of corn, a sort of wicked weevil.
As for R. A.'s, I briefly tell 'em,
Fiat justitia ruat cælum;
Although they sooner would behold the Devil.

WEST.

The Bard complimenteth Mr. West on his Lord Nelson—acknowledgeth his Powers in a certain Department of the Art; but biddeth him beware of the Dangers of Classic Ground.

Now let me turn to Mister West :
Thy Nelson, it must be confest,
Proves that thy Muse of Painting is not dead.
'Midst works of merit be it placed :
The Hero's form is not disgraced ;
Which adds a leaf of laurel to thy head.

At small defects I scorn to carp ;
This would be prying much too sharp :
I think this Piece will help to boil thy pot.
And should it a good turbot gain,
As Poets are a famish'd train,
Send the poor Bard an invitation-note.—

Why will not Mortals be content,
And walk the road which Nature meant,
And not eternally with Genius war?
And yet 'tis passing strange, though true ;
They keep th' impossible in view,
And bid defiance to their ruling star.

The men in Miniature who shine,
Pant to extend their little line,
And paint the forms of Goddesses and Gods ;
And then, like Phaeton, the fool,
A puppy of Ambition's school,
Disgraced they tumble from the bright abodes.

And 'tis in Music just the same :
The tuneful Nymph, or tuneful Dame,
That in cantabile delights the soul,
The sweet simplicity forsakes ;
From octave leaps, to octave takes,
And seeks to triumph in bravura howl.

The Lap-dog just as well might say,
“ I think I'll hunt the Hare to-day,
And in proud triumph lead the Hound or Beagle:”—
Or Sparrow on the chimney-top,
“ I hate this life of chirp and hop ;
I'll drink the solar blaze, and mount an Eagle.”

West, let me as a friend advise :
From classic ground withdraw thine eyes,
Nor fancy from sublime to gather glory.
Attempt not things beyond thy reach :
The Pebble on the sandy beach,
Can ne'er expect to rise a Promontory.

FUSELI.

The Poet attacketh Mr. Fuseli for attempting sublime Subjects—also for vainly supposing he hath caught a Shred of the Mantle of Michael Angelo.—He commendeth his Picture of Beaufort, but hinteth a Suspicion of its being a smuggled Affair—He wondereth that the Ghosts of Shakspeare and Milton do not leave their Tombs, to punish the Painter for the Disgrace brought upon them by the Imbecility of his Pencil.—The Poet concludeth with Advice of much Humanity.

AH, Master Fuseli! are you here,
 To whom Abuse's speech is dear;
 Whose jaundiced eye can rarely merit see?
 Well, since thy penchant is a grin,
 It will not be a mortal sin
 To give the World a gentle grin at thee.

What Demon put it in thy head,
 To fix on Beaufort's dying bed?
 Was it, the rage of Criticism to rouse?
 Speak: was it thy ambitious hope,
 With Reynolds, of high fame, to cope;
 And envious tear the laurel from his brows?

Fuseli, thou callest Beaufort thine:
 Speak truth, is this thy own design?

But mum, this is a very ticklish theme.

The palsied hand, that ne'er was found
To lift a weight beyond the Pound,
Will ne'er be thought to raise a Weaver's Beam.

Thy friends, or rather foes, declare,
Thou often dost sublimely dare,
And makest Michael Angelo thy model;
Moreover, that thou dost inherit
Large portions of that Painter's spirit.
God still their tongues, or mend each crazy noddle!

They tell thee that thou art a Whale,
Thy mind on Nature's noblest scale.—
The folk who flatter thus, mean arrant mockery.
They call thee a fine China jar:
But this I humbly beg to bar;
They should have said, a pipkin of brown crockery.

Now let not wicked people say,
I wander far from Truth away:
Truth, heaven-born Truth, presides o'er every stricture.
Fuseli, indeed I don't deny
Thou e'er hadst Michael in thine eye;
But say, thou never found'st him in thy picture.

How dares thy hand, that cannot hit
The features of a poor Tom-tit,
Attempt the Eagle's fury in its flight?
That cannot paint a tame Tom-cat,
Or muzzle of a Mouse or Rat,
Attempt the lordly Lion in his might?

Oh! why in colour dip thy brush,
And, mad, upon thy ruin rush,
And yield thy back to meet the lash of Satire?
Thy blue and green flesh (let me say)
No compliment to Beauty pay:
A putrid carcase is not charming nature.

Fuseli, whose hand with Nature wars,
Inform me, what provoked thy stars
To make thee serve a prenticeship to Paint?
What crimes have thy forefathers done,
That thus they should condemn the son
To bid him daub the cloth with Devil and Saint?

Thou really wantest not discerning;
Hast gain'd a little classic learning,
And mayest in thy proper sphere be jogging:
And, as ill-nature much is thine,
A pedagogue had been thy line;
Then, like Orbilius, thou hadst shone in flogging.

There are some rooms thou callest *thine,
Replete with workmanship divine
Of Grecian art ; the Connoisseurs don't doubt 'em :
Say, Fuseli, did these rare Antiques
Ne'er give thee grins, and cuffs, and kicks,
For daring to inform thy boys about 'em†?

Lo, from their graves, in glory laid,
Each Bard, a long-lamented shade,
Shall start with horror from his sweet repose :
The Ghost of Shakspeare shall arise,
And Milton with his darken'd eyes,
To pull the daring dauber by the nose.

Thou hast a place, both nice and snug ;
Good victuals, and a good warm rug :
Let not a false ambition prompt thee further.
Then bid thy cruel labours cease,
And let the canvas sleep in peace,
Nor make it cry out “ Murther ! murther ! murther ! ”

The Lord is call'd a man of war ;
Beyond thy powers how distant far !

* As Keeper of the Royal Academy.

† It is in Mr. Fuseli's department to superintend the young Students of the Antique Academy.

For, shouldst thou dare attempt the Form, I fear
Thy mangling hand would make sad work ;
And, with the fierceness of a Turk,
Cut down the Thunderer to a privateer.

REMARK.

Mr. Fuseli should expect no lenity from the rod of Criticism, after having himself uttered the following sarcasm upon a Brother-artist, Opie, at a time too when he was in apparent friendship with that ingenious Painter. “Dere is dat poo-re Dogue Opee : de failow can paaynt notin but Teeves an Morederers ; an wen de Dogue paaynts a Teef or a Morederer, he lookes in de glaas.”

LOUTHERBOURG.

The Poet, as formerly, findeth Fault with Mr. Louthembourg for his volcanic Landscapes—maketh a splendid Comparison—giveth good pecuniary Advice—complimenteth him—and endeavoureth to beat him out of his Belief in the Metalleity of general Nature.

A CRITIC always should be just ;
Illiberality's a rust
Which dulls the edge and splendour of his knife.
There should not reign a mean hostility ;
But friendship, tenderness, civility ;
And Art and Criticism be Man and Wife.

A vulgar World delights in glare,
Adores whatever makes a stare ;
The sober tints of Nature they despise :
And thus they like the pomp of Pride ;
While Modesty, disdain'd, decried,
Roams some pale solitude with downcast eyes.

I bade thee, certain years ago,
In Landscape no complexion show
Of warming-pan, brass candlestick, or kettle :

My eloquence could not persuade ;
 As if a brazier born by trade,
 We see the staring culinary metal.

The Scullion, Cook, and Kitchen-maid,
 Are vastly fond of stiff brocade ;
 With cabbage-roses deck'd, a gaudy train.
 This really is a vicious taste :
 And, much like theirs, is thine unchaste ;
 French frippery has too much engross'd thy brain.

But of the stubborn World, I fear,
 In vain my counsels strike the ear ;
 Proudly they treat those counsels with disdain :
 The flint and steel of Peter's wit
 Not even a single spark can hit,
 T' illumine their dark tinder-box of brain.

There is a Mineral that bright is,
 By learned chemists call'd pyrites
 (Mundic in Cornwall), which contains a store :
 The Bag-men*, as they travel by,
 Survey it with a raptured eye,
 And fill their pockets with the treacherous ore.

* Persons travelling for mercantile orders, commonly styled knights of the bag.

With Poetry 'tis just the same :
How Doctor Darwin won a name,
By glittering, tinsel, epitheted Rhyme !
Divine Simplicity was fled,
Driven, banish'd, dared not show her head,
Whose powers alone support the true sublime.—

Once more, give ear unto a friend ;
Even now 'tis not too late to mend :
But, if thou merely mean'st thy works to sell,
Then pour thy yellows, purples, greens,
And reds, and blues, for rural scenes ;
And make thy burning Skies as hot as Hell.

I grant thy execution neat ;
And grant, in little thou art great ;
But take a hint, and not a hint improper.
Learn, Louthembourg, to thy surprise,
That grass and water, cows and skies,
Are things which Nature never makes of copper,

Grieved should I be to rouse thine ire ;
But be not so profuse of fire,
Nor flame so furiously upon our eyes :
Let not thy hills be quite so hot ;
Where really one might boil a pot,
And roast a leg of mutton at thy skies.

JOHN LANE.

The Bard exhibiteth Symptoms of Surprise and Pleasure at the Mary and Christ of Mr. Lane, a very young Artist—evinced his Preference of the sublime to the humbler Branches of the Art, and concludeth with a just Satire on himself.

WHAT have we here? A charming Picture,
Bidding defiance to sharp stricture.
Ye Farthing Rushlights that around us wink,
Oh! hide each poor diminish'd head;
Of competition be afraid,
For verily with shame ye ought to shrink.

A youth whose years are just nineteen,
Who scarcely aught has done or seen,
And never yet beheld the Gods of Rome;
While your small Lights, as I have said,
Should hide each poor diminish'd head,
This stripling's Torch illuminates the Dome.

I hail thy genius: mind thy hits;
Beyond the reach of damning Wits,
To court th' Historic Muse be thy ambition.

Prophetic, I aver thy line
Amid the Roman school will shine,
And not disgrace the great Carrache or Titian.

Now should our Bishops drop the saint,
Revoke anathemas on paint,
And suffer Saints and Martyrs in Saint Paul's,
(Who for their good opinions died,
Boil'd, roasted, carbonaded, fried ;)
Thy hand should tell their story on the walls.

Let others search the ragged cot
For brooms, joint-stools, plate, pan, and pot ;
I mean not on such genius to be bitter :
But were I free to choose a name,
I should not covet a Dutch fame,
That hunts for immortality in litter.

To move a Mennow who would wish,
In paltry brooks a paltry fish,
While Nature offers him to roll a Whale ;
Unmatch'd, with mighty fins to sweep
The boundless region of the deep,
And sport amid the thunders of the gale ?—

And this to me may be applied.

The World will cry, "Where is thy pride,
To put thy Muse on Academic Odes ;
When, if she chose it, she might sport
Amidst the grandeur of a Court,
And strike the Lyre to Goddesses and Gods?"

TO WILKIE.

The Poet congratulateth Mr. Wilkie (a very young Artist) on his Performances—but adviseth him to exert his Genius in a higher Sphere of the Art.

WILKIE, an honour to thy Nation,
Accept the Muse's admiration :
Thou givest to Johnson's envious tongue the lie,
Proclaiming that on Scottish ground
No plant of genius will be found ;
Which totis viribus I dare deny.

I think thou mayst a Hogarth shine ;
That wit and humour both are thine,
No common present from the Delian God :
Then try thy wing, exert thy power ;
Below thee leave Teniers and Brouwer,
And prove a Prophet in the Man of Ode.

TO TURNER.

The Bard maketh a Bow to the Genius of Mr. Turner, and expresseth his Wonder at the Absence of his Landscapes.

TURNER, whatever strikes thy mind,
Is painted well, and well design'd ;
Thy rural scenes our plaudit must obtain :
Though Nature (and where lies the harm?)
Has given thee not a giant form,
The Dame has placed the giant in thy brain.

Say, why are not thy Landscapes here,
Landscapes where truth and taste appear ;
That prove thy pencil's powers, and grasp of mind ?
Who nobly canst exalt thine head ;
Who, like Eclipse*, canst take the lead,
And leave with ease thy rivals far behind.

* A celebrated Race-horse.

TO BACON.

The Poet informeth Mr. Bacon of his Progress in the Art of Sculpture—adviseeth him to be expeditious in his Improvements, on account of the rapid Strides of an elderly Gentleman called Time.—He lamenteth the Want of Patronage to Sculpture—and sigheth for the Return of Athenian Days.

BACON, I think thou dost improve ;
But prythee, somewhat faster move :
These works display more fire and spirit in ye.
Time flies : accelerate thy pace ;
Although thou catch not in the race
Phidias, Praxiteles, or even Bernini.

Shame that, in this our wealthy isle,
Poor Sculpture is not seen to smile ;
Forced, nearly forced, to beg her humble bread :
While every face-maker can feast,
Quaff with his Lordship wines the best,
Whose art can scarce pourtray a poor Calf's Head !

Oh, when will ancient Greece revive,
Where Sculpture taught her Forms to live ?

(Poor Dame, in Britain put upon the shelf!)

Where Hero, Demigod, or God,

Full often, as the streets he trod,

Scarce knew th' ingenious marble from himself.

TO GARRARD.

The Poet uttereth very handsome things of Mr. Garrard—and adviseth him to support his proper Dignity, and despise the Academic Honours.

GARRARD, thou Myron of the age,
 Whose works the eye of Taste engage,
 Where is thy Cattle, that delight affords?—
 What! none? Now, Garrard, to be free,
 More pleasèd indeed am I to see
 A thinking Bull's head than a thoughtless Lord's.

Refused the Academic crown,
 Thou lovest nothing of renown :
 Trust to true genius, which thou dost inherit ;
 Beyond the reach of Envy's breath,
 The cold, the chilling blast of Death,
 For ever warring with the blooms of Merit.

Th' Academy (ah, fie upon her!)
 Can now confer no crown of honour ;
 She asks submission mean, and oaths most hearty.
 She hunts not for ingenious folk :
 The pencil's powers are now a joke ;
 She only wants a tool to serve a party.

In vain thou knockest at the door ;
Knock at th' Academy no more,
And to such small ambition bid adieu.
Who on a Mouse's paltry Hole
Would fix the wishes of his soul,
While Fame's fair Temple opens to his view ?

TO NOLLEKENS.

The Bard singeth tothe Praise of Mr. Nollekens, but condemneth him as the supposed Executioner of a certain Bishop's Sentence on the Bosom of a beautiful Greek Vestal.

WITH pleasure, Nollekens, I see
The Muse of Sculpture wake in thee;
And Britain, who has been so long asleep.
Well; since thy works such worth display,
Brisk, stir thy stumps, and work away;
And with the gems of Athens, Britain heap.

How could thy sacrilegious hand
Obey the Bishop's dread command,
And slice the bosom of the Grecian Maid?
That Phidias' angry Ghost would rise,
With mealy face, and saucer eyes,
To break thy chisel, wast thou not afraid?

Oh, where was Venus in that hour,
To snatch the Vestal from thy pow'r?
An action so barbaric chills my blood.

Now do not, Nollekens, dissemble :
Did not thy hand with horror tremble,
And thy two eyes let fall a plenteous flood?

How did the Bishop's wife behave,
On this most sacrilegious shave?
Did not the Lady smile upon the garble?
She might ; for Ladies old and dry,
Inspired by Jealousy, can spy
A dreaded rival in a piece of marble.

TO DUBOST.

IN Mistress Hope, Monsieur Dubost,
Thy Genius yieldeth up the Ghost ;
In truth, in Portrait thou art not at home.
Why wander from thy proper sphere?
Now, had thy Damocles* been here,
Thy Slave had tower'd the Tyrant of the dome.

* A most masterly Picture by this Artist, and purchased by Mr. Hope.

ODES TO THE HEADS.

The Bard addresseth, in plaintive Ditty, the Heads of the Lord knows who, painted by the Lord knows whom, and executed the Lord knows how.

LADIES and Gemmen, Masters, Misses,
I dare not compliment your phizzes;
Indeed, fit subjects for the lash of Satire.
If Truth conduct the Painter's brush,
What madness bade you hither rush,
Such melancholy sad burlesques on Nature?—

Thou poor sour Face, who seem'st to sigh
Because thou art hung up so high,
So near the window, prythee do not growl:
Thou need'st not feel a great alarm;
Jack Ketch had done no mighty harm,
If out o' window he had hung thy jowl.—

And who art thou, so round and fat?
Why didst thou quit the Brewer's vat?—

But tell me, vulgar gentleman, who art ?

I am no Edipus, indeed ;

And yet thy occupation read :

That is, a running footman to a cart.

TO A FEMALE HEAD.

PERT, smirking Miss, you seem to sally
From Dyot Street, or Black Boy Alley ;
And no small consequence you seem to feel.
Pray, Miss, go back ; your trade pursue ;
Put on your cover-slut of blue,
And stick to tripe, sheep's-trotters, and cow-heel.

TO A MAN'S HEAD.

SAY, who art thou, devoid of grace,
With round and dull unmeaning Face,
Whose head-piece seems to want a further stuffing ?
Speak : camest thou, by vain-glory won,
To prove that Nature, in her fun,
May on a pair of shoulders place a muffin ?

TO

THE SOMBRE FACE OF PARSON CODMAN.

“ANGELS and Ministers of Grace defend us!”

What, Copley, dost thou hither send us?

Is it a “goblin damn’d,” who in his dark hole

Has just been dining upon pitch and charcoal?

Zounds! ’tis a man, and yet a very odd man:!

Ladies and Gentlemen, ’tis Parson Codman.

Squire Copley, was it meant in fun,

To fabricate this thing forlorn?—

What has th’ unhappy Parson done,

That thou shouldst hang him up to scorn?

Perchance ’twas modesty, t’impart

Thy humble knowledge in the art.

Yet *certain proofs the Bard incline

To think this virtue never thine.

* Let not Mr. Copley shrink at the introduction of the word proofs, which the voice of Scandal might construe into a squint at a suspected transaction of past times.

TO THE PORTRAIT OF HELEN.

SWEET Helen, with thee in the vale,
With rapture my hours have been crown'd,
When the Turtle was telling his tale,
And the Lambkins were sporting around.

In the cottage I too have been blest,
When thy beauty the cottage adorn'd;
And when thy soft hand I have prest,
I have fancied my youth was return'd.

But why, my sweet Girl, art thou here,
With Mop-squeezers, Venders of Cheese,
With the Calf, and the Bull, and the Bear?
What horrid companions are these!

And where is thy form and thy grace?
Where those eyes that with lustre should shine?—
Dear Helen, I look on a face
That never, ah never, was thine.

Painters seldom in beauty succeed;
Grace and Canvas but seldom agree:
Thou hast honour'd the painter indeed,
But the knave has done nothing for thee.

TO A HEAD.

You are a Taylor, Sir, I guess,
Just whipp'd into his Lordship's dress ;
Leap'd from your board, no Mercury so nimble :
But, from your board when pleased to skip,
Why leave behind, good Master Snip,
Your good friend Goose, the needle, thread, and thimble?

TO TWO HEADS.

AND who art thou, with face so full?
I ween, thou keepest the Black Bull,
Red Lion, White Horse Cellar, or Brown Bear.—
And, Madam, you there by his side,
I guess, are Boniface's Bride :
Methinks the tap-room is your proper sphere.

TO A MINIATURE PORTRAIT OF A YOUNG LADY, LATELY DECEASED.

THE Nymph, by the Graces adorn'd,
Who led all the Loves in her train,
By the Lyre of the Muse shall be mourn'd,
While the Lyre has a chord to complain.

Sweet image that never wilt fade,
In thee lives her form, and her bloom.
When in thee I behold the dear Maid,
I forget that she sleeps in the tomb.

TO A FEMALE HEAD.

You, Madam, this fine Dome adorning,
Rise early every Monday morning,
To join your linen, soap, and lie, and tub ;
Then take a glass of comfort for your spirits :
Your Sisterhood with rapture hail,
Enjoy the jest and smutty tale ;
Like quality, without the blush of shame.

TO ANOTHER.

WELCOME, sweet Miss, in ochre bloom,
Trick'd out to grace this glorious room;
Hopp'd from your humble bulk; behind a string,
Where an odd slipper and odd shoe,
Where laces, yellow, red, and blue,
And wig and comb, in graceful order swing:—

A watch of gingerbread, one patten,
A shoe-string, and a stripe of satin;
A handkerchief of check, that makes a blaze;
A various tribe of love-sick sonnet,
Fur-tippet, muff, and rusty bonnet;
An infant's pudding, and a pair of stays.

TO ANOTHER FEMALE HEAD.

AND, bulky Ma'am, of the same school,
Like Patience on a three-legg'd stool,
Accept my bow; behind the lines suspending
A flannel wig, and half a shirt,
Not much the whiter for the dirt,
Gowns without tails, that cry aloud for mending:—

A child's cap, torn by time and rockings ;
 Two mittens, from two old black stockings ;
 A ragged parasol, a leathern cat ;
 David the King, in gingerbread ;
 King Solomon without his head,
 Devour'd by some damn'd jacobinic rat.

CONCLUSION.

Now to be serious, O ye men !
 (Few Eagles, and too many a Wren,)
 How dare ye fill the room with such pollution ?
 Will Justice say, while thus ye hang
 So sad and villainous a gang,
Yourselves should not be led to execution ?

How cruel to keep Genius out,
 To favour fools and rabble-rout !
 Where is the just and independent spirit ?
 Ah ! dinners and a glass of port
 Can favour trash of every sort,
 And thus exclude the works of real merit*.—

* It is a shameful and notorious fact, that dinners, patronage, and favouritism, have been uniformly the means of introducing performances beneath the dignity of criticism, to the exclusion of works deserving the public attention.

Great George, in all thy wrath arise,
Turn to thy Royal Dome thine eyes,
And smartly kick each Academic tether :
Or, should this deed disgrace thy glory,
As sounding not sublime in story,
Bid Sam the Porter knock their heads together.

A SOLEMN,
SENTIMENTAL, AND REPROBATING,
EPISTLE
TO
MRS. CLARKE.

Dux Fœmina facti.

HEAVENS! what is all this hurricane about?
'Tis Woman, Woman, raises all the rout.

EPISTLE TO MRS. CLARKE.

THE Bard that oft to Love has pour'd his Lays,
And tuned to Phyllidas the Harp of Praise;
(For lo, mere Touchwood, form'd of fond desire,
A sparkling eye could set his Heart on fire;)
With deep reluctance now assumes the rod,
To punish that fair Master-piece of God.

Few are the men that feel the soul's Queen-passion
Call'd Love, have scaped from Lady-fascination.
How few the Josephs that adorn the times !
Let truth be told : even I, the Man of Rhymes,
Have oft approach'd the vortex of Seduction,
Stalk'd the wild precipices of Destruction.
A simple, nibbling Mouse (and nearly taken);
Much have I marvell'd, how I saved my bacon.

Heavens, what a dire confusion Beauty makes !
The Horse Guards tremble, and old Windsor shakes.
Like Bees, the Mob around Saint Stephen's swarms ;
And every street and alley feels alarms :
Men, women, coaches, gigs, each other jostle ;
And thou the cause of all this horrid bustle !
Hotels and tap-rooms sound with mingled din,
And every coffee-house is on the grin.
From morn to eve, from eve to midnight dark,
Nought strikes the ear but " Duke and Mistress
Clarke !"

Nay, too, the Parrot, and the simple Starling,
Cry from their cages nought but " Duke and Darling !"
In vain the heavy horse parade the town ;
Neigh bold defiance, while their riders frown :
The Mob surveys them just like braying hacks,
From door to door with dogs' meat on their backs.

Each day we hear a miserable tale .
See, by the Commons, Clavering sent to jail ;
Dismiss'd the staff, in durance vile to dwell,
And join the piteous sighs of Sanden's cell !—
See poor O'Meara, with an alter'd face,
Who preach'd to Majesty with Paul-like grace !

He damns the ladder of that exaltation,
And blushes now to meet a congregation.
“Farewell,” he sighs, although so vastly clever,
“Farewell the Mitre and Lawn-sleeves for ever !
Yet not that loss alone calls forth my tears ;
The Hussy robs my life of twenty years.”—
Behold the Tonyns, all with ire inflamed ;
All, for the silly Major, all ashamed !
And see, Miss Taylor, to thine arts a fool,
Has found a Spunging-house, and lost her School.
The mighty Castlereagh himself may fall,
The pompous pillar that supports us all :
I hear the crack, and mourn it most sincerely ;
And Ireland too will mourn, who loves him dearly :
Ireland, to Castlereagh that so much owes ;
Her Union,—present, and her past, repose ;
And fine fertility, the eye that greets ;
For docks and grass adorn old Dublin’s streets.

Raised by thy witcheries, to fright our eyes,
Ghosts of long-buried Depredations rise ;
But, thanks to our good Ministerial train,
Will soon be banish’d to their tombs again.
In Sparta thus confusion reign’d and strife,
When wanton Paris stole the Monarch’s wife.

What Imp of Darkness whisper'd in thine ear,
To force from every loyal eye a tear,
“ Rush on the world, and, with unblushing face,
Obscure the glories of the Brunswick race?”
Deceived by thee, has dauntless Wardle dared
To take the lordly Lion by the beard :
Soon on his head the Demagogue shall draw
(Or Justice sleeps) the thunder of his paw ;
And Folkstone, with his democratic pipe,
Shall rue his rage, and gasp beneath his gripe.
Sir Francis too will feel not soft rebuke,
Though guarded by the sevenfold shield of Tooke :
Patroclus' valiant self to hell was thrown,
Though in th' immortal arms of Peleus' son.
Nay, gifted with the swallow of a whale,
Even I, the Bard of Bards, believed thy tale ;
But now the phalanx of the Court I join,
And see black forgery lurk in every line.

Hark ! Whitbread opens ; all the Patriots cheer him :
The walls re-echo, “ Hear him, hear him, hear him !”
Charm'd with each word, to Whitbread's powers they look,
And mark in Fancy's eye a flying Duke.
Thus, 'mid the wood when Snowball gives his tongue
(Snowball, the truest of the tuneful throng),

The peal begins, the sounds of rapture flow :
“ Hark, hark to Snowball ! go to Snowball, go.”
Horns, hounds, and men, the hills with triumph stun ;
Sly Reynard now is seen upon the run.

Now to the City let me turn mine eyes,
Where foam the waves, and winds of discord rise.
Fired by th’ electric speech of Harvey Coombe,
The Livery-tribes with plaudits shake the room.
Fired by the fuse of Waithman’s elocution,
With Babel tongues they thunder “ Resolution ;”
With Babel tongues insult the poor Lord Mayor,
And put great Gog and Magog* on the stare.
In vain he tries to tell a simple tale
(For Sprats may sing Te Deum o’er a Whale):
Regardless of gold chain, and pomp and place,
They howl him home, in sorrow and disgrace.
Thus, when the Bird of Wisdom leaves his bower,
O’er hills and valleys in broad day to tower ;
The small pert Tenants of the Hedge rush out,
To put the solemn Traveller to the rout ;
Magpies, and Jays, and Ravens, Rooks and Crows,
Spit in his face, and pull him by the nose :

* The two wooden Giants in Guildhall.

Unheard he hoots ; the chattering, croaking train,
Tumultuous, drive him to his hole again.

Dear Delicacy, at thy shrine I bend ;
Oh haste thee, Goddess, and our manners mend :
A Gothic race to some refinement raise ;
For even our Quality have dirty ways.
Much like French Cooks ; who, though in omlets great,
Spit in the frying-pan to prove its heat ;
And, spreading rolls in winter (mode uncouth!),
First warm the slice of butter in the mouth.

Too prone are Mob to pull their Princes down,
And smother with their greasy Hats a Crown.
With hawk-like eye, they wait an evil hour
To strike, and paralyze the arm of Pow'r :
To hold a proud dominion o'er the Court ;
With sacred Freedom, like Napoleon, sport ;
Whose wanton rage has handcuff'd Europe's Kings,
And put her Princes all in leading-strings.—
Sad knaves, no gratitude their bosom warms ;
Forgot the glory of the Hero's arms :
Forgot the hosts that bled beneath his lance,
Who Britain saved, and curb'd the pride of France ;

And stripp'd, in spite of cold and stormy weather,
The crowing Gallic Cock of every feather.

Shall Tape-men, Snuff-men, and such servile fellows,
Wild roaring, of Sedition blow the bellows?
Shall Salt, and Fish, and Paper, low-bred crew,
Instruct the Lord's Vicegerents what to do;
Stop of an Orator the opening weazon,
And banish Members without rhyme or reason?—
How dare the rogues indulge the lawless riot?
Even let them gorge their turtle, and lie quiet.
What is their province, but to eat and drink?
How dare they have the impudence to think?
Presuming Imps, that fancy a dull Cit
Possesses sense and breeding, taste and wit,
Like those bright Bucks that grace a birth-night ball,
And sauntering lounge through Bond Street and Pall Mall!

As well might Dogs, their sprawling legs that sport,
Presume to dance a minuet at Court.

The Man of Livery, matters rarely minces;
Hear what the leveller says of foreign Princes:
“ Cross, cross the breed, degenerating fast,
Or ouran outangs they must sink at last.”

Perchance, of Courts, too high we prize the scenes ;
The nods of Monarchs, and the dips of Queens :
And fancy fools that claim the Royal eyes,
In science deep, superlatively wise.
Yet is a reverence due to dips and nods,
Though not the gracious presents of the Gods.
True ; little folks, that Royalty behold,
Are apt to think it of superior mould.—
As through a lane a mighty Monarch past,
A Village Maid her eyes of wonder cast
Broad on the form that Courtiers all adore ;
(For Madge had never seen a King before.)
The Girl, exclaiming, to her cottage ran :
“ Look, Mother ! Mother, look ! the King’s a man ! ”—

“ When Nature forms a Prince, she culls with care
The best materials for the Royal ware ;
But when a subject, careless, takes her broom,
And makes him from the sweepings of the room.”
Such of Court-adulation is the song ;
But Flattery often oils a Courtier’s tongue.

“ Tried in the crucible of Truth, behold,
The slander’d Youth shall come forth sterling Gold ;
While thou shalt shock our sight, a motley mass,
A mixture vile of Brimstone and of Brass.”

Thus cry the Members of Administration,
Whose heads contain the talents of the Nation.
Hawkesbury and Castlereagh transcend all praise :
And Canning is the wonder of our days ;
For though not French our Secretary speak,
He thunders Latin, and Bæotian Greek ;
Frights with grand phrase the Plenipoes around ;
And, when he fails in sense, succeeds by sound :
Like Esop's long-ear'd Animal, whose din
Perform'd such wonders in the Lion's skin.—
Such are the Pilots Heaven has deign'd to form,
To steer the old State Vessel through the Storm.

At this, thou bid'st the Bard and Verse go whistle :
Then read, and tremble at, my next Epistle.

A SECOND SOLEMN,
SENTIMENTAL, AND REPROBATING,
EPISTLE
TO
MRS. CLARKE.

A SECOND
EPISTLE TO MRS. CLARKE.

No longer now the Duke excites our wonder,
'Midst "gun, drum, trumpet, blunderbuss, and thunder*;"

Amidst his hosts, no more with rapture dwells
On Congreve's rockets, and on Shrapnell's shells;
But quits, with scornful mien, the field of Mars,
And to Sir David's genius leaves the wars.

Now in dull Windsor-rides the Youth is seen;
Now, in dull walks to Frogmore with the Queen;
At Oatlands now, where pigs and poultry charm,
Like Cincinnatus in his Sabine farm;
Now, o'er a lonely dish in Stable Yard,
Without a Friend, and (strange!) without a card.
Now, as the humour is disposed to vary,
O'er melancholy tea with Mistress Cary;

* A line from Pope.

For invitation-dinners soon grow slack,
When Fortune on a Favourite turns her back :
Now, at tame Whist, with Lady Charlotte Finch,
Who feels of sharp Economy the pinch ;
With other superannuated Souls,
Who mourn, through winter drear, the loss of coals*.

How few, of this our Money-scraping Isle,
Whom Fortune favours, have deserved her smile !
How few like Bosville, even of lofty quality,
Expand the noble doors of hospitality ;
To sacred Friendship free libations pour,
And give an age's pleasure to an hour ;
Yet, o'er the glass, can hear the Beggar's cry,
And steal the tear from Misery's melting eye ;
Contemning gold, as splendid dross at best,
That sleeping loads the half-starved Miser's chest !
Give some all Mexico, they still are poor :
Pour down their throats her Gulf, they pant for more.

Enchantress, listen to the tale I tell.
The men who venison to his Highness sell,

* Coals, that important article of domestic felicity and convenience, have been for some time withdrawn from the Palace of St. James's on account of the scantiness of the Royal Finance ; and the poor Pensioners obliged to send their Beef and Mutton to a Bakehouse.

Nay, even poor pepper, vinegar, and mustard,
 Crumpets, and Yorkshire-cakes, and cream, and cus-
 tard,

To Heaven their eyes of disappointment turning,
 Make a long face, and put their doors in mourning.
 The fierce Hussar, his soul inflamed with ire,
 In sorrow, flings his whiskers in the fire.
 The turban'd Blacks no more their pomp display;
 But cast their cymbals, in their wrath, away.
 From all the ranks are heard the plaintive hums,
 And melancholy damps the muffled drums.
 The high Ambassador, with so much glee
 Who parted from his boots and shoes for thee,
 No more to Court-preferment turns his views,
 But turns reluctant to his boots and shoes ;
 Hums o'er his lapstone tunes of doleful grace,
 Less with Morocco* pleased than Gloucester Place.

Such is thy power ; yet let me not conceal,
 But draw from dark futurity the veil.
 The hour, the splendid hour, is on the wing,
 When in proud triumph Wimbledon shall ring,

* Morocco ambassador, was a punning appellation given by Mistress Clarke, perfectly tranquille before the great and awful Tribunal of the Nation, to Mister Tom Taylor, shoemaker in Bond-street, and a favourite missionary of both parties.

Blackheath again shall lift her drooping head,
 And shouts of triumph fill the Park parade.
 Yes ; shall the Hero to his rank return,
 While Hate shall foam in vain, and Envy burn ;
 And, spite of thy poor fabricated story,
 Reblaze the Sun of Military Glory.
 'Tis but a passing cloud obscures his ray ;
 At most, the darkness of a short-lived day.
 The Bird of Jove, by an unlucky ball,
 May lose some feathers of his wings, and fall ;
 Awhile may feed on snails, and hop the ground ;
 Till Time renews his plumes, and cures his wound :
 Then, with new vigour imp'd, he mounts the wind,
 And leaves the groveling grubs of earth behind ;
 Sublimely soars, scarce conscious of the blow,
 And darts disdain upon the World below.

He comes, the Hero comes, in all his might ;
 And, clothed with terror, puts his foes to flight.
 Thus, once I saw a Country Bull, at ring,
 Break, in his rage, the rope, with sudden spring :
 Cobblers and Butchers, Taylors, fall or fly ;
 While hats, caps, wigs, and aprons, mount the sky ;
 Sport of the winds, o'er trees and chimneys borne,
 That proved the prowess of his head and horn.

Enchantress, yes, (for oracles I tell ;)
The Youth shall rise, and mock thy every spell ;
Stamp with eternal infamy thy name,
Mock thy dark wiles, and cover thee with shame.
Then heed the ticklish humours of the times :
Though Justice loiter, she may catch thy crimes.
In spite of those two fascinating eyes,
The Youth in awful Majesty may rise ;
Lift his bold arm, that even the Thunder dreads,
And tear perhaps thy tender Form to shreds.—
Thus have I seen, with moralising look,
Cabbage and turnip-tops obstruct a brook :
By calm degrees, up swells the crystal flood,
Superior rising, not to be withstood ;
It bursts the boundary, with furious sweep,
And whelming drowns the garbage in the deep.

Perhaps thine art creates a reformation !
A tub for whales, in Wisdom's contemplation.
What madness centres in that word " reform !"
Who would destroy a garden for a worm ?
Who, but a Bedlamite, would fire his house,
To wreak his vengeance on a pilfering mouse ?
To use an humble simile, as pat ;
Beat in his scull, to crush a teasing gnat ?

Why banish charming Bribery from the Nation;
 Which gives that blessing Gold a circulation;
 Bids the bells ring; with spirits fires the Votes;
 Buys for their Wives new caps, and gowns, and coats;
 Gives consequence to Butchers, Taylors, Tanners;
 Finds for their Daughters Music and Court-manners;
 Inspires their hearts, to scorn with noble pride
 The clumsy cleaver, goose, and horrid hide;
 To nought but titled Lovers yield an ear,
 As Joans and Nans have won full many a Peer?—
 What beauteous Insects from corruption spring;
 Leave humble dirt, and sport the gilded wing!
 What Flowers of vivid hue, and rich perfume,
 To stable-litter owe their balm and bloom!
 If this my subject then I fairly handle;
 Be Counties, Boroughs, sold by inch of Candle.

Grant that a few Commissions may be sold:
 Lo, mighty Marlborough gave up fame for gold!
 Grant that the Hero may, for once, be wrong;
 Why sound his error with a trumpet-tongue?
 Take from Sir Joseph's book a leaf or two*;
 Great Man, who makes his annual tour to Kew;

* Sir Joseph Banks annually volunteers his services as grand puffer, or barker, at Ram-fair, held near the Pagoda, at Kew; from whence he sets off to Windsor, with the profits of the sale, for the benefit of his Royal Master.

With Christie's elocution puffs the Rams,
With metaphoric splendour gilds the Dams;
Hides rotten feet beneath the flowers of fame,
And sends with credit off the blind and lame.

Be censure silent on the Soldier's Fund:
What is it?—a mere rill, at most a pond;
How trifling, to the Treasury's boundless ocean!—
Cheese-paring Windham, how d'ye like my notion?
Let Ridicule enjoy, with hearty laugh,
Commission'd boys, and striplings on the Staff:
Ere long, may babes our Army List adorn;
And, what may more astonish, babes unborn.
Napoleon dares not seize our goods and chattels;
We trust our safety to the God of Battles:
Yet let me say (nor will it be denied),
Dame Fortune rarely joins the weakest side.

Fair Sinner, ere I close these solemn Rhymes,
Receive a little comment on the times.
Fanaticism, a tyrant, rules the hour:
As Locusts thick, her Imps of frenzy pour;
O'er Nature's smile diffuse a spectred gloom;
And blast, with canker'd breath, her cheerful bloom:
Saints who the Lord on sacred Sunday seek,
And hand and glove with Satan pass the week;

Who sigh for Heaven, yet God in Mammon see,
 And pick a pocket on the suppliant knee;
 One eye to God, lamenting moral evil;
 The other, winking down upon the Devil:
 One voice to Heaven, "To good my heart incline;"
 And one in whispers, "Satan, I am thine:"
 Maim busts and statues that display the nude,
 Yet clasp, in secret dalliance, flesh and blood;
 Load with anathemas the Comic Muse,
 And lead a wanton Laïs to the stews;
 Preach Heaven-born Charity towards the Poor,
 And Dog-like bark the Beggar from the door;
 Preach sweet benevolence, and hang a Cat
 Whose famish'd stomach takes a simple sprat;
 Preach patience, and, with phrase too bad to utter,
 Knock down the Cook because she oils the butter:
 Fools who pretend Heaven's wondrous scheme to scan,
 And impious make th' Almighty less than man.

Such is the modern apostolic race,
 Reform'd, regenerated rogues of *grace.

* New apostles are hourly multiplying. They are even rising from the Navy and Army, where one could not have expected an existence. At Camden Town, adjoining to the Metropolis, a set of New Apostles of a very humble sphere indeed have made their appearance: one Page, minister and chimney-sweep; one Francis, minister and cobler; one Graham, minister and a lame

The rage of those apostles thou wilt rue :
 Those Gospel Bloodhounds will thy paths pursue ;
 And hunt thee to the bed of lawless blisses,
 Perhaps to Wardle yielding balmy kisses.
 Perchance with other Dukes thou may'st be tripping :
 Dread then a sheet, a Bridewell, or a whipping ;
 For limbs like thine (if true be Rumour's tale)
 Suit bonds of Venus better than a jail.
 Yes, those apostles will thy wanderings watch ;
 And, should their art thy vagrant beauty catch,
 In vain Repentance pours her doleful yell ;
 For Mercy knows not where the Impostors dwell.

beggar ; and one Blackburn, better known by the name of Tommy the Goose, a horse-whipper of carpets, and clerk to the aforesaid most respectable Interpreters of the Gospel, and maestro di Capello (aliàs Proprietor) of a room called Camden Town Chapel, who lets out his ash chairs, joint stools, and crickets, to the children of the holy seed, drawing, like Saint Hill, Saint Huntington, Saint Frey, Saint Medley, and other celebrated Saints, a most comfortable subsistence from the pockets of Ignorance and Credulity. Saint Frey has lately undertaken the arduous, yet lucrative, labour of converting Jews to Christianity. Strongly suspecting the purity of the motive for this Herculean labour, the Poet has expressed his sentiments in the subsequent lines :—

RELIGIONS form a thriving trade ;
 Nice tools, by knaves for Mammon made.
Saint Frey, with Christian-like exertion,
 Well fills his fob by Jew-conversion :
 Place more emolument in view,
Saint Frey becomes a sterling Jew ;
 Unblushing, feels the World's derision ;
 Sells Christ, and suffers circumcision.

Like David, with whose works we're well acquainted,
Our modern Saints declare they have repented ;
And, since the vigour of their youth is lost,
And catch and glee have yielded up the ghost,
" Be joyful in the Lord " is on their tongue,
" And come before his presence with a song."
The Man whose soul the blacker vices taint,
Now, for Heaven's glory, makes a damn'd good Saint :
Thus Heads of Whitings, graced with modest light,
Stink first, and then illuminate the night.
Such are the saints that bless our ears and eyes :
Speak, Wilberforce, if I am forging lies.

Here ends my Satire.—Should my Sovereign smile,
Admire my loyalty, applaud my style ;
And, knowing well a Poet's empty dishes,
Say thus, " Let Peter share our Loaves and Fishes ;"
By Heavens, in honour of his high commands,
I'll steal a coat, or borrow, to kiss hands :
For, unlike Bishops*, 'tis my firm intention
To cry out, " Yes, my Liege," for Place or Pension.

* The " No-lo episcopari" of our Bishops is still proverbial ; and pronounced on every creation, with all the evangelical solemnity of a Custom-house oath.

CARLTON-HOUSE FETE;

OR,

THE DISAPPOINTED BARD;

IN A

SERIES OF ELEGIES:

TO WHICH IS ADDED,

CURIOSITY IN RAGS;

AN ELEGY.

—Hinc illæ lacrymæ!

YET to provoke and mortify me more,

(Scarce crediting my two astonish'd ears,)

Yarmouth and Bloomfield sent of cards a score,

Inviting dead folks; dead, ah! dead for years. ELEGY II.

CARLTON-HOUSE FETE.

ELEGY I.

The Poet lamenteth, in the Strain of the Son of Jesse, his hard Fate, but not quite destitute of Hope.—In the Language of Music, follows a long String of sharps in a Key illustrating the Subject, and displaying the Fertility of the Poet's Imagination.—Great Expectation on Account of Honour conferred on Mr. Sheridan.—The Poet's Humility in wishing even to be seated with the degraded Commons of England, upon the Grass in the Garden, under Canvas.

IN grief, I sat upon the bank of Thame ;
 (But not, thank God, a captive, like the Jews*;)
And when the Jubilee† to memory came,
 Tears burst in torrents from my Lady Muse.

Yet, lo, one beam, one solitary ray,
 Pierced the dark cloud that wrapp'd my sandy seat ;
A great, sublime, a wonderful display
 Of Eastern Grandeur at the Prince's Fête.

* “ By the rivers of Babylon, there we sat down ; yea, we wept when we remembered Zion.”—Psalm cxxxvii.

† During which the unfortunate Bard remained entirely unnoticed.

“ Here,” said I to myself, “ I build some hope,
(Perchance a slight foundation, rather rotten :)
No longer doom’d in solitude to mope,
At Carlton Fête I may not be forgotten.”

Sharp as a pining Maid expects the Post,
That brings epistle full of lovesick sighs;
Or as the Dog in seeming slumber lost,
Who slyly winks, to snap the teasing flies :—

Sharp as, amid the fields of air, a Kite,
In hopes of feasting on a barn-door fowl;
Or as for mice, amid the dusky night,
O’er hill and dale the solitary Owl :—

Sharp as a Bailiff for a hiding debtor;
Or as the hard Churchwarden on the poor;
Or bilious Critic on a word, or letter,
To scalp his victim author o’er and o’er :—

Sharp as an Epicure upon the haunch,
His two eyes jealous of the favourite fat;
Or on the turtle, to enlarge his paunch
With thrice the quantity would fill a hat :—

Sharp as the Bank upon a doubtful note;
Or hungry Frenchmen for a limb of frog;
Or Borough-monger for a casting vote,
Intent to sell poor Freedom like a Hog:—

Sharp as a trading Justice for a bible,
To give the oath, no matter false or true;
Or dread Sir Vinegar to seize a libel,
And strike th' offending dog with vengeance due:—

Sharp as Sir Vinegar, who look'd in vain
To shove his bottom into Mansfield's place;
Or as Jack Ketch surveys the felon train,
In hope of necks to meet his rope's embrace:—

Sharp as Lord Puzzle for his office-fee,
To keep his poverty-struck house, so poor;
Where none my Lord and Lady Puzzle see,
Save keen Economy, who bolts the door:—

Sharp as our Alexander, gallant York,
Look'd out for poor Sir David's resignation;
Who now (for merit miracles can work)
O'er Slander triumphs, and resumes his station:—

Sharp as Marcellus for the rapturous hour
That yields the Dame whom every charm adorns;
When kind Cornutus takes his prudent tour,
And calmly in his pocket puts his horns:

Exulting thus, in language rather coarse;
“What’s wife to honours?—stuff, beneath my care:
Make me, ye Gods, but Master of the Horse,
The Devil may be the master of my mare:”—

So sharp I listen’d, yea with full-stretch’d ear,
To every knock, no matter soft or hard;
At once, in Fancy’s eye, I saw appear
A Royal compliment to me the Bard.

Said I, “If Sheridan a favourite be,
The moral Mentor of the Princely mind;
Some compliment will come to moral me:
The Lyric moralist must favour find.”

Yes, to myself I whisper’d (not in joke),
“At Carlton House I sure shall eat, and quaff;
Although not cheek by jowl with Royal folk,
Yet under canvas with the common raff:”—

Raff that we Britons with our freedom trust,
Yet now consider'd as mere reptile things ;
Raff that can form a Monarch from the dust ;
Raff that confers a Majesty on Kings.

ELEGY II.

A most pathetic Question.—The Poet's heavy Complaint.—Mr. Weltjie passeth high Panegyric on the Bard—knoweth his Poetry by heart—inviteth the Bard to Dinner—a broad hint to certain Princes.—Mr. Weltjie wisheth the Bard to be his Biographer, proudly insinuating that his Life would be a more interesting morcean to the Public than the exalted Life of Colonel Hanger—intimateth a Desire of the Prince to peruse the Poet's delectable Effusions.—Great Character given by Mr. Weltjie of his Royal Master.—The Poet again, in the sublime Strain of the Royal Psalmist, voweth Acts of Gratitude to the Memory of his old departed Friend Weltjie.

IN sackcloth still and ashes must I weep?

Yes, in his solitude the Poet mourns.

Gold fills the House of Carlton, what a heap!

But not to him the Age of Gold returns.

No, not one grain of favour have I found;

Nor seen indeed the shadow of a card:

Thus are my sanguine hopes all wreck'd, and drown'd;

Such for my loyalty the rare reward!

Yet to provoke and mortify me more,

(Scarce crediting my two astonish'd ears,)

Yarmouth and Bloomfield sent at least a score,

Inviting *dead folks; dead, ah! dead for years.

* This was literally done by those two Ministers appointed to the card department; who seem on this occasion to have acted in diametrical opposition to the

How often Weltjie to my flatter'd ear
Hath said, and given my heart sweet palpitation ;
“ Docter, I tell you vhat : by Gote, I swear
You be de bestest Poet in de nation.

“ I likes your Louziad ; oh, dam pretty ting ;
I laughs to zee you vling about your squibs :
An den de Apple Dumplins an de King ;
Mine Gote, I laughs until I breaks my ribs.

“ Den Whitbread Brewhouse, an poor Passon Yong ;
Docter, I can remember dem by rote :
And Docter, minds, I neffer tells you vrong ;
De Deffil take me, all be true by Gote.”

How often has he said, “ Come, come, an dine
(I knows you love goot eating) pon a buck :
An den I gif you dam goot glass of vine ;
I gif you too one roast anchovy* duck.

old adage, which says, “ A living Dog is better than a dead Lion.” One would imagine that the noble Lord, and the brave and experienced Colonel, were put sadly to their trumps for want of a complete company, by being forced to beat up for volunteers among the tombs.

* Muscovy.

“ Den, Docter, you muss taste my pretty pork ;
 Bester dan oder peeple pork by half :
 I knows dat you vill play goot knive an vork ;
 An mind, I zuckles de yong pigs myzelf.

“ Den after dinner you sal taste my vruit :
 I gif you for to eat zome nice umbrellas ;
 Dere’s in my gardin zome dat’s defflish goot :”—
 Kind Weltjie simply meaning, his morellas.

Delighted with my Lyric Lucubration ;
 Fond of the Poet, and the Poet’s name ;
 Such was the generous German’s invitation.—
 Blush, Princes, that ye have not done the same.

How oft he ask’d me, “ Vil you vrite my Life,
 An vrite me zometing comikal in rhyme ?
 But dont zay not a vord about my Vife.
 Mine beat George Hanger Life ten touzand time.

“ But, Docter, zend de Prince your Vesses, pray ;
 He vish to have dem in de mornin early :
 He tink you too great Poet of de day ;
 He love your funning, now I tell shinshereely.

“ Now, Docter, zoon you zometing goot vill zee ;
I knows de Prince do zometing goot intend :
Den zend His Royal Highness rhyme by me ;
De Prince he neffer do forget old vriend.”—

King of the Cooks, once of Pall Mall the glory ;
No matter where thy birth, or who begat thee ;
Pleased with thy broken English, and quaint story,
With thee I oft have laugh'd, and sometimes at thee.

Peace to thy shade, O Weltjie ! Many an hour,
In Pall Mall, Hammersmith, and Turnham Green,
My soul has felt thy fascinating pow'r,
That from the gloomiest heart could chase the spleen.

Yes, Weltjie, thou shalt gild the page of Fame :
For thee, the Muse shall draw the teeth of Time ;
Th' insatiate Tyrant shall not eat thy name :
Such are the powers of Rhyme, immortal Rhyme.

O Weltjie, to all parties so well known ;
So great thy talents, what a burning shame
The Red Book, the Court Calendar alone,
Should give posterity a simple name !

Companion thou of Princes and of Peers,
Of Baronets and Knights the constant crony :
Thou by thy converse oft didst charm their ears ;
And, what delighted more, didst lend them money.

If I forget thee, Weltjie *, and thy dinner ;
Thy tales of palaces, thy wit, thy punning ;
May Fame proclaim me an ungrateful sinner,
And this my fiddle-hand forget her cunning.

Yes, Weltjie : if thy Ghost unhappy roam,
Because I've not fulfill'd my just devoirs ;
Believe me, I will satisfy thy tomb,
And give the gossip Public thy Memoirs.

* " If I forget thee, O Jerusalem, let my right hand forget her cunning."
Psalm cxxxvii.

ELEGY III.

The Lucubrations of the Poet are carried to Carlton-House, but produce no remuneration.—History of Bards of old Times.—The Poet boasteth of the high Powers of his Muse and Harp, had they been invited to the Fête.—A natural Suggestion relative to the Ghost of Kien Long.—The presumed Generosity of Mr. Perceval.—A pretty Comparison between Ministers in general, and a Birch Rod.—A further Boast of Powers of the Harp and Song.—The Cruelty of Oblivion.

ELATE, to Carlton-House my Rhymes I sent,
 Before the Poem met the public eye :
 Which gain'd applause, the Poet's great intent ;
 But nought besides, I say it with a sigh.

Strange, that the Prince forgot my Song and Lyre,
 Whose taste in music is so very pretty ;
 Whose touches on the Bass possess a fire,
 Surpass'd alone by Crossdill and Cervetti.

Yet, dare I say a Prince can be surpast ;
 Excell'd by groveling subjects, herd unclean ?
 Is it not blasphemy, to boast a taste
 To rival that of Prince, or King, and Queen ?

In days of yore, Bards ate and drank with Kings ;
 Courtèd, caress'd, invitèd to each rout :
Are modern Bards such sad degenerate things,
 That I and my poor Harp were both kept out ?

As scenes sublime demand a strain sublime,
 How had I call'd upon the Muse of Fire !
How had I summon'd all the powers of Rhyme,
 And wakèd the loudest thunder of the Lyre !

Sounds that had travell'd ocean, reach'd Pekin :
 The present Emperor's ear had caught the Song ;
The Verse had ravish'd every Mandarin,
 And sooth'd the shade of Brother-Bard Kien Long.

Who knows but that the good old Monarch's Ghost
 Assumed behind the Regent's chair a station ;
Pleased with the lustre of the scene, and cost ?—
 The cost ? Poh, poh ! a fleabite to the Nation.

This Perceval will pay, and with a grace.
 Old England weak ! her Treasury's a Giant :
Besides, if Ministers will keep their place,
 Like Rods they merit, they must all be pliant.

Are there deficiencies of Civil List,
 Works of high wisdom that expence demand ;
 With much humility the Throne is kiss'd,
 The Budget gapes, and Taxes load the land.

Yes : raptured had I struck the harp of Fame,
 And sung the splendid beauties of the Fête ;
 Described each dress, immortalized each name,
 And given Posterity th' illustrious treat :—

Sung boiling Gudgeons*, given for Fish of Gold ;
 In streams that through the table should have
 play'd :

Superior to the Arabian Nights of old ;
 Surpassing all that has been sung or said.

How had these mounted on the wings of Ode,
 As much of fame the Lyric Muse bestows !
 Now, like a Worm along the humble Sod,
 They crawl through Newspapers in languid Prose.

* These humble representatives of fishes of gold, were, by the heat of the lamps, chandeliers, and the good company, completely boiled, and fit for dishing up ; and, instead of exhibiting their intended sportive recreations, were seen floating in a melancholy and lifeless posture, between the tin banks, on the watry element.

Ode is a Sun that undecaying shines ;

A Giant, placing mortals 'midst the Gods :

The brain that owns it, boasts the gem-clad mines ;

Even Kings have gain'd celebrity from Odes.

Raptured I too had sung Britannia's boast,

The polish'd converse of the Heir Apparent.—

Good Heaven, what valuable things are lost,

As Horace mourneth, quia Vate carent !

Oblivion, that sly mute, that creeping jade,

(As pleased to drown a wise man as a fool,)

Is ever busy at her secret trade,

To sink a name or virtue in a pool.

ELEGY IV.

The Poet lamenteth the Omission of certain interesting Exhibitions that might have afforded Pleasure in Pastry to the Multitude.

WHAT pity that no wash-tub did appear,
To show Trafalgar's Battle, and the Nile's;
With pretty little paper ships of war,
To launch the thunder of the Queen of Isles !

What pity there was not a baker's tray,
With troops of gingerbread upon the plain ;
Horse, Foot, engaged, and spreading dire dismay,
And cutting, thick as Hops, the French in twain !

Sure, gingerbread might well portray a scene,
A Duke's full levee after scenes of woe ;
A Duke in converse with his gallant men,
And smiling upon Greenwood, Cox, and Co.

What pity, gingerbread did not display
Our British hero from his chariot flung ;
Hurl'd from the regions of celestial day,
A second Phaeton, to mud and dung :—

Now nobly scrambling on his legs again,
 'Midst gazing armies, and a mighty shout ;
The reins resuming with a just disdain,
 And scornful kicking dull Sir David out !

How far superior to a China view ;
 Where neither genius, taste, nor fancy, dwells :
Monkeys and mandarins, a motley crew,
 Bridges, pagodas, swings, and tinkling bells !

Yet let us not of such a scene despair :
 Some pastry-cook the miracle may bake ;
The Royal Duke, Sir David, and the Car,
 All nicely mounted on a nice twelfth cake.

ELEGY V.

A most solemn and pathetic Address to the Muse.—The Poet recounteth the Princely Honours paid to him in past Times, with a most deplorable Contrast of the present Day.

MUSE, sing the reason why I was omitted :

Was it that Dame Fitzherbert proved my theme ;
In favour once, who, flatter'd and bedittied,
Of Crowns and Sceptres dared indulge the dream?

Was it because I touch'd the string of praise
To Her whose heart even Envy must revere?
Was it because I wish'd her happier days ;
And from the lid of grief to steal the tear?—

There was a time, a nod would bless mine eyes :
There was a time, I gain'd a gracious smile.
My nose was, like my garret, in the skies :
“ My room,” I cried, “ will flow with wine and oil.”

So sweet a Prince's smile, sublime his nod,
We scarce can fancy vulgar earth could mould him.
Gull'd man who gains them! he becomes a God :
Saint Paul's is scarcely large enough to hold him.

Too soon my buds of hope resign'd their bloom ;
Too soon the gloom of disappointment mine :
Oil, not a spoonful, flow'd into my room ;
No, nor a piteous nipperkin of wine.

Ah ! no ; I found no meaning in the nod :
Ah ! no ; no meaning in the gracious smile :
In vain, with consequence the ground I trod ;
Like Homer's Neptune, striding many a mile.

For Fortune therefore I must longer wait ;
Hang on the willows my mute Harp* ; and fear
That, if I hung myself, my hapless fate
Would scarcely force from Carlton-House a tear.

* " We hanged our harps upon the willows," &c. Psalm cxxxvii.

CURIOSITY IN RAGS.

Curiosity depicted.—Lamentable Confusion at Carlton-House during the Exhibition after the Grand Fête.—A sublime naval Comparison.—Fortitude of the Ladies.—A Compliment to the undaunted courage of Lord Yarmouth and Colonel Bloomfield.—An Address to the Muse.—A circumstantial Account of the Ladies' Progress in their vulgar and penitential Robes, from Carlton-House to their respective Habitations.—A short and decent prayer for his Royal Highness.

WHAT evils Curiosity produceth !

Yet nothing can the madding rage restrain :
 Whate'er the danger, not a Nymph refuseth ;
 Though Death frown'd near, to cut her form in twain.

Vain were the efforts of a Milton's pen,
 That paints a diabolic rout so well,
 To give with truth the horrors of the scene ;
Such squeezing, swearing, tearing, squeak, and yell.

Ah me, what petticoats were lost, and torn ;
 Pathetic subject for the mournful Muse !
 Gowns and pelisses felt a state forlorn ;
Baskets of bonnets, and whole tubs of shoes.

The golden chain forsook the bosom's charms,
With many a necklace form'd of pearls and beads :
Bracelets deserted from their taper arms,
And wigs in tatters left their lovely heads.

Thus at the glorious struggle of the Nile,
On which our British history justly brags ;
Yard-arm and yard-arm meeting, (dread turmoil !)
The sails and rigging were reduced to rags.

Regardless of their Backs, amidst the squeeze ;
As Velvet soft, and fair as Alpine Snow ;
The *kallipugé charms, the legs, and knees ;
They urge their dangerous way to see the show.

Their limbs so delicate, and skin so white,
And then their swelling bosoms all so bare,
Fix'd (for what Youth could wink on such a sight ?)
Fix'd every orb of vision on the stare.

Yes : even with common decency to war,
Did novelty their gentle bosoms harden ;
For soon indeed were numbers of the Fair,
Like Mother Eve when entering Eden's garden.

* Character given by the polite Athenians to one of their plump Venuses.

Yet if the mother of the World could err,
 (For in his trap old Satan surely caught her,)
We should not therefore make a mighty stir;
 But yield to mercy, and forgive the daughter,

Yet let me sing in thunder of applause,
 How Yarmouth, Bloomfield, not a fear betray'd;
But through the windows, stripp'd of all their gauze
 And muslins, lugg'd full many a fainting Maid.

Now, if you please, my Lady Muse, relate
 What did the Nymphs who all their vestments lost;
As many a Nymph, the lean as well as fat,
 Saw not the sight, by cruel Fortune crost.

Forced to their homes unwilling to depart,
 They stalk'd forlorn along the grinning streets,
Deep-blushing, loaded with a heavy heart,
 Huddled in aprons, table-cloths, and sheets.

Yea verily, the Nymphs were forced to roam;
 Yea, left by sad misfortune in the lurch;
In sorrow, all bare-headed, to their home,
 As though they had done penance in a church.—

Such was the scene, with which no scene compares ;

And long indeed will Dame and Damsel rue it :

Such was the piteous posture of affairs ;

Pray God, the modest Regent did not view it !

THE END.

INDEX.

- ABINGTON*, Mrs. i. 30.
- Academic chair*, ode to, iii. 48.
- Academic ode*, ii. 509.
- Academic Procession* to St. James's, iii. 269.
- Academicians*, Loyal Odes to disloyal ones, ii. 379.
- Academy* (Royal), i. 82, 84, v. 369-70, 380-1. Unaccountably named royal, iii. 396 note. Joy of the academicians on Peter's taking leave of them, i. 125.—account of their dinner, 129. The exotic R. A.s attacked, 164. Peter takes final leave of the R. A.s, 166. See also the preceding articles.
- Achilles*, ii. 34.
- Actor*, story of one who discovered his forte by accident, i. 30-1.
- Addington* (Mr.) chosen speaker, ii. 383. Ode to him when chancellor of the exchequer, iv. 354. Pitt's praises of his ministry, 369 & note. Address to him, v. 205. See also iv. 345, v. 161, 164, 172, 193; and Perring, Horrors, and Sidmouth.
- Address to my Book*, ii. 485.
- Adversity*, hymn to, iv. 154.
- Affectation*, ode to, ii. 310.
- Agamemnon*, i. 198.
- Agnes* (Saint), legend of, ii. 430.
- Aide-de-camp* in a battle, simile of, i. 407.
- Aldermen*, death of, v. 266.
- Alexander*, ii. 23.—and Bucephalus, iii. 377, 387.—and Parmenio, at the house of Pindar, ii. 308.
- Alligator*, simile of, iii. 22.
- Amati*, a fiddle-maker, i. 156.

- Ambition*, iii. 21. Its powerful effects, i. 306-7. Picture of its progress, iii. 349-50.
- Amelia*, princess, his majesty's aunt, i. 400, iii. 361.
- America* has foolishly lost the charms of royalty, ii. 413, iii. 146.
See also iii. 298, 334.
- Anacreon*, ii. 344. Quoted and translated, ii. 379, iii. 137, iv. 379.
Lines to him, iv. 65. Anacreon to his Lyre, 216.
- Anacreontic Society*, address of Apollo to, iv. 162-3.
- Anacreontics*, iv. 35, 56, 63, 67, 70, 75, 88, 102, 104, 138, 184.
- Ancients*, ode on, v. 119.
- Angling*, v. 97-8, 109, 151, 153.
- Antony*, Saint, i. 162.
- Antijacobin Review*; its founders, and their hostility to Peter, iv. 334.
See also iii. 496 note, 502.
- Antiquities*, curious ones, ii. 75-6, 365, iii. 185 to 187, v. 306 to 308.
Manufactured, iii. 188.
- Antiquity*, deference paid to it in the arts, i. 155 to 157.
- Ants*, their labours, iii. 223.
- Aphorisms*, iv. 17, 58, 75-6.
- Apollo*, elegy to, ii. 276. Invocation to, i. 210-11. Story of Apollo and Marsyas, 84.
- Apology for Kings*, ii. 480.
- Apostles*, specimens of the new ones, v. 404 note.
- Apple-dumplings* and King, story of, i. 458.
- Arden*, Pepper, i. 158, ii. 96. Ordered to look after Peter, i. 464.
- Aris* the jailor, iii. 491, iv. 439, 460, 462-3, 479, v. 139, 161, 198, 242.
- Artists*, advice to mercenary ones, i. 135-6. Should not be superior to a hint, 142-3. See also Painters.
- Artois*, count of, iii. 442.
- Ascot races* visited regularly by their majesties, ii. 354, iii. 352.
- Ass*, ode to, ii. 459. Elegy on, when dying, 518. Simile of one on the pavement, 433.
- Asturias* (prince of), his fracas with his wife and father, i. 182.
- Atkinson* (Kitt), his airing on the pillory, i. 108, 181-2.
- Attorney-general* to be dreaded, ii. 409. A sour one, v. 411.

- Aubert* (Mr.), an eager astronomer and meteorologist, ii. 73, 282.
Auckland, lord, iv. 351. His Triumph, or the Death of Crim. Con., 299. See also Eden.
Auctions, royal, at Kew, v. 402 note.
Augusta, princess, i. 158, 294, 461.
Augustus, ii. 24, iii. 379.
Authors and booksellers, iv. 135-6.
Avarice, description of, i. 300, ii. 192, 221-2, iv. 236.
Aylesbury, lord, i. 483.
Ayloff, sir Joseph, ii. 293.
Azid, or the Song of the Captive Negro, iv. 97.

B.

- Bacon* (Mr.), sculptor, i. 157, iii. 396, v. 367.
Bagshot-heath, camp on, iii. 123 to 130.
Bajazet and Tamerlane, ii. 97, 186.
Bakewell the grazier, ii. 496.
Ballads, New-old ones, v. 85. See also Songs.
Bankruptcy, father's advice to a son concerning it, iv. 525.
Banks (sir Joseph), important Epistle to him, ii. 43. Story of Sir Joseph and the Emperor of Morocco, 85. Sir Joseph and the Thief-takers, 178. Sir Joseph and the Boiled Fleas, 279. Ode on the report of his being made a privy-counsellor, iii. 454. His peculiarities of taste, ii. 257-8. His scheme of erecting a throne for himself, iii. 411. His early propensities, iv. 20. Is a puffer at the royal auctions, v. 402 note. See also i. 210, 253, 285, 306, ii. 147, 208, 264, 267 note, 293, 303, 341, 354, 375, iii. 186, 333, 398, iv. 6, 41, 237, 382, v. 131-2, 144-5, 307.
Banti, iii. 390.
Bar-maid, ode to a pretty one, iv. 60.
Barn, odes to one, ii. 306-7.
Barracks, increase of, iii. 412.
Barrere, iv. 81, 86, 88.
Barret (Mr.), character of his pictures, i. 36.

- Barrington*, Daines, ii. 74, iii. 186. - Story of him, i. 120 note.
Barrington the pickpocket, iii. 179.
Barry, Mr. i. 81.
Basilisk and bird, simile of, iii. 412.
Bastille, ii. 424.
Bat, elegy to, v. 314. Simile of the bat and insects, ii. 410.
Bate, Joah, esq. i. 421 note, 505, iii. 85.
Battledore and shuttlecock, story of a royal game at, iv. 313.
Bawd dying, story of one, iii. 220.
Beauty (female), its frailty, ii. 404-5. Its influence, v. 29, 30, 33, 36, 41-2. Lines and ode to an unfortunate beauty, ii. 8, 194. Portrait of a country one, v. 29. Imprecation on venal beauties, 312. See also Frail.
Becket (St. Thomas), miracles performed by him, iii. 202.
Beckford, alderman, ii. 220.
Bed-chamber lords, ii. 125. Lines to a nest of them, 209.
Bedford, duke of, v. 252.
Bedlam broken loose, ii. 441.
Bee, elegy to, v. 294.
Beggar, address to a blind one, iv. 53. Count Rumford's exploits among the beggars of Munich, v. 133 note.
Belgrave, lord, iii. 493, 495 note, iv. 332-3, 339. Lord Belgrave and his Motions, iv. 512.
Bell-wether, simile of one, iv. 427.
Bella, lines to, v. 323.
Beloe, Mr. iv. 338, v. 229, 280-1, 302, 315.
Benwell, Sarah, i. 114.
Besborough, earl of, i. 133.
Betty, master, v. 316.
Bienséance described and illustrated, ii. 201-2.
Billington, Mrs. ii. 56, 155, 499, 509.
Bird's nest, iii. 223.
Birds saluting a country wedding, v. 82. Invitation to the birds in winter, 104, 152-3, 287.
Birth-day ode, i. 480.
Bishops; the present ones characterised, and contrasted with their

- predecessors of old, iv. 276-7, 284, 310. Evangelical solemnity of their constant refusal of the mitre, v. 406.
- Blackburn*, a new apostle, v. 405 note.
- Blagdon*, Dr. ii. 71-2, 84 note, 90, 94, 282, iv. 41.
- Blanchard* the balloonist, i. 153.
- Blandford*, marchioness of, iii. 14 note.
- Bloomfield*, colonel, v. 414, 429.
- Blue-stocking club*, their hostility to Peter, ii. 277, iv. 282. Ode to them, iv. 288 (see also 296).
- Blushes* very scarce, v. 31.
- Board of green cloth* stint the king in fruit, i. 178 note. Disturbed at one of their meetings, ii. 488 note.
- Boatswain* and boy, story of, ii. 149.
- Bolton*, serjeant, iii. 41.
- Bookbinding* practised by the king, i. 519.
- Booksellers*, Peter complains of them, v. 124, 158. See also Authors.
- Borough-votes*, their importance, v. 298-9.
- Bosville*, Mr. v. 398.
- Boswell* (Mr.); congratulatory Epistle to him, on his Tour to the Hebrides with Dr. Johnson, i. 317.—postscript; the Doctor's opinion of his literary powers, 331. Compared with Mr. Bruce, ii. 349-50, 373. Designs to write the life of sir Joshua Reynolds, iv. 210. See also i. 306, ii. 265-6, iii. 43; and Bozzy.
- Botany-bay*, i. 437.
- Bowyer* the antiquarian, ii. 140-1, 270 & note, 301.
- Boydell*, Mr. ii. 131, 344.
- Boys and girls*, ode for them, on love, iv. 31.
- Bozzy and Piozzi*, a town eclogue, i. 335.
- Braham*, Mr. v. 183.
- Bribery*, inquiry concerning, v. 225 to 230. Its recommendations, v. 402. See also Horrors.
- Brick-maker* and king, story of, i. 431.
- Bridegroom* on the night before his wedding, simile of, ii. 96.
- Briefs* read in churches, parties benefited by them, i. 235.
- Brighton*, iv. 386. Future duchess of, v. 179.

British Critic, its hostility to Peter, iv. 338. See also iii. 496 note, iv. 383, v. 229 note, 280, 300, 301.

British Museum, v. 289, 302, 308 note.

Brodum, Dr. v. 138.

Brook overcoming trifling obstructions, simile of, v. 401.

Brook Watson, lord-mayor, iii. 445, iv. 417.

Brother Peter to Brother Tom, i. 499.

Bruce (Mr.), complimentary Epistle to him, ii. 347. Ode to him, 373. See also iv. 10.

Brudenell (lord), his treachery to the prince, ii. 121, 339. His amorous contest, and defeat, 148. Lord Brudenell and the Eunuch, a tale, 153. See also i. 395, 507, ii. 208, 243, 260, 417, 487, iii. 13, 298, 300, 350, 400, 430, v. 321; and Cardigan.

Brunswick, prince of, ii. 120.

Bryant, Mr. i. 51.

Bubble and squeak, simile of, i. 192-3.

Bulk, its recommendations, i. 66. But not in men nor women, iv. 82, i. 443.

Bull breaking loose while baited, simile of, v. 400.

Buller, judge, ii. 96, iii. 71, 202, 289, 300, 347, 400, 426, 430, iv. 6, 120, 322. Fable of his wig and Mrs. Robinson's handkerchief, iii. 105. Ode to him, iv. 147. Sketch of him, 209.

Buller, dean, i. 264 note, 265 to 267, iii. 472, 474.

Bullocks, the Royal, an elegy, ii. 512. See also Horse-chesnuds.

Bulse, the famous diamond one, i. 214, ii. 18, 19.

Buonaparte, invitation to, v. 187. Would favour Peter, 248. See also iii. 497, v. 390, 403.

Burdett, v. 241-2-3, 388. See also Middlesex.

Burgoyne, general, i. 309.

Burgundy (duke of), his advice to a poet, i. 440.

Burke (Mr.), odes to, i. 412, iii. 35. His exploits against Hastings, i. 409-10. His plan of reform, 178. His latter sentiments of kings, ii. 392. See also i. 190, 343, ii. 217, iii. 307, iv. 41.

Burnet, mayor of Exeter, iii. 470, 481.

Burney, Dr. i. 414-15.

Burney (miss), her novels, i. 195.

Bute, lord, ii. 110.

Butler the poet, v. 247.

Butterfly sporting, iii. 223. Address to, iv. 232. Ode to, 237.

Buxom Nanny, i. 189.

C.

Cadogan, lady, iv. 321.

Caermarthen, lord, i. 131.

Calchas, i. 533.

Caligula, iii. 246.

Camden-town, nest of new apostles there, v. 404 note.

Camel and monkey, simile of, iii. 42-3.

Canary islands, ii. 361.

Candle, address to, iii. 191. Simile of, iv. 330.

Canning (Mr.), first brought forward as a prodigy, iii. 493 note, iv. 333. Probably the author of the puerile letter to Buonaparte, iv. 337. National provision made for his relations, iv. 360, 471-2, v. 171 to 178, 215, 227. His services in the affair of Pitt's statue, iv. 492, v. 173. His marriage, v. 174. Talks Latin and Greek to the foreign ambassadors, v. 393. See also iii. 488, iv. 339, 377, 524, v. 162, 317, 343.

Canning, Bet, iii. 187.

Canute (king) and his nobles, a tale, i. 467.

Card-parties, royal, ii. 498.

Cardigan, lord, ii. 465, iii. 59, 122, iv. 397, v. 119, 182. See also Brudenell.

Carey, Mrs. v. 397.

Carlisle, lord, i. 7. His fits of poetical inspiration, iv. 409-10.

Carlton-house, i. 401, v. 167. Carlton-House Fête, v. 407.

Caroline, queen, i. 197 note.

Carpenter, general, i. 504, iii. 355 to 357.

Cartwright, major, v. 274.

Castlereagh (lord), v. 393. A great favourite in Ireland, 387.

Cat transformed, fable of, iii. 458. Similes of a cat with her kittens,

- i. 446-7, iv. 289.—of a cat and singing-bird, ii. 218.—of cats mousing, v. 266.
- Cat's paw*, fable of, iv. 355.
- Cats* contrasted with dogs, iv. 22. Ode to eight belonging to a Jew, ii. 174.
- Caterpillar* in its changes, similes of, ii. 260, iii. 280.
- Catharine*, empress, i. 96, 254, 442, ii. 249.
- Cathcart*, lady, iii. 334.
- Cato*, his reproof of the augurs, iii. 254. Borrowed the wives and daughters of his friends, iv. 320.
- Cattle* and murrain, story of, iv. 208-9.
- Catton* (Mr.), character of his pictures, i. 37.
- Catullus* quoted and translated, ii. 329.
- Cecilia* (St.), iv. 223. Odes to, iii. 90, v. 122. Invocation to, iv. 160.
- Cedar*, simile of, iii. 463.
- Celebration*, an ode, iii. 269.
- Celia*, ode to, iii. 180.
- Cerona*, marquis of, excessively fat, i. 25.
- Cervantes*, v. 247.
- Cervetti* the musician, v. 419.
- Chamberlin* (Mr. Mason), character of his portraits, i. 26.
- Chambermaid* and flea, simile of, iii. 176.
- Chambers* (sir William), addressed on the election of Royal Academicians, i. 82, 85. Ode to him on his buildings, 121. See also i. 16, 134, 248, 264, ii. 134-5, 403, 534, iii. 341 note.
- Chapman* (Dr.), his thesis, ii. 203.
- Charles II.*, i. 476, v. 247. A saying of his, v. 244.
- Charles XII.*, i. 199, iii. 64.
- Charlotte*, lines to her on new-year's day, iv. 221.
- Chartres*, duke of, i. 61.
- Chastity* cannot stand against love, ii. 528.
- Chatham*, first earl of, iii. 500-1, iv. 486-7, v. 274. Present earl of, iii. 400, v. 227.—how created F.R.S., ii. 60 note.
- Chatterton*, i. 50.
- Cheerfulness*, and not melancholy, acceptable to heaven, ii. 247-8, 414, iii. 370.

Chemistry, political, iv. 374.

Chesterfield, late earl of, ii. 408, iii. 42. Present earl of, iii. 307, 327.

Chimney-sweeping, ingenious invention for, v. 143 note.

China views described, v. 424.

Chloe, lines to, ii. 320, 326, iii. 190, iv. 52, 193, 197, 205. Epigram to, v. 325.

Choleric character, ode on, iv. 213.

Cholmondely, lord, i. 509.

Choristers in a cathedral, iv. 292.

Christie the auctioneer, ii. 383, v. 403.

Christina, queen, i. 125.

Churchill, ii. 235, v. 314.

Churchwardens feasting on children, iii. 89.—tale on this subject, 110.

Cibber, Colley, i. 90.

Civil list, its deficiencies, i. 196 note, ii. 530, v. 421. Its debts paid, iii. 418. See also More Money! throughout.

Civil wars, a misnomer, ii. 475.

Clarence, duke of, iii. 499.

Clarges, lady, i. 414.

Clarke (Mrs.), Epistles to, v. 383, 395.

Classics, similes on modern translations of them, iv. 6, 7.

Claude, i. 67, 116.

Clavering, general, v. 386.

Clive, lord, i. 215.

Clouds, electric, similes of, ii. 394, v. 282. See also Sun.

Coals withdrawn from the usual allowances at St. James's palace, v. 398 note.

Cock on a dunghill, simile of, i. 439.

Cockatrice and bird, simile of, iii. 412.

Codman, parson; ode on his portrait in the exhibition, v. 375.

Coffee, ode to, iv. 40.

Cold-bath Fields prison, iv. 454, 460 to 462, v. 242.

Collins's poems, lines to a young lady with them, iv. 101.

Colossus of Rhodes, i. 219, iii. 11.

- Colquhoun*, justice, iv. 425.
- Combe*, alderman, v. 389.
- Commissions* (military) given to children, v. 403.
- Common-councilman* at a city-feast, ii. 409.
- Commons* of England degraded at the fête at Carlton-house, v. 412-13.
- Compassion*, different sorts of, iii. 239.
- Complaint* of Mirza, iv. 200.
- Concerts*, royal, ii. 498. See also Sunday.
- Conductors*, question concerning the superiority of blunt or of pointed ones, ii. 60 note, iii. 454 note.
- Confians*, count, i. 130.
- Congreve's* rockets, v. 397.
- Conscience*, invocation to, i. 211 to 216.
- Constancy* praised, iv. 207. Song of, 141. See also Variety.
- Content* described, i. 232-3, v. 268.
- Convention-bill*, ode on, iii. 373.
- Conversion* of the Jews attempted by a modern saint; and lines on this subject, v. 405 note.
- Cooks* and scullions, their indignant resistance to the order for shaving them, i. 187 to 201. List of the unhappy sufferers in the execution of that sentence, 201-2. Their consultation in the larder, 226 to 234. Their petition, 235. See also ii. 391, 392. Peculiar cleanliness of French cooks, v. 390.
- Copley*, Mr. i. 126, v. 375.
- Coquet*, song to one, v. 331.
- Corinna*, two characters, iv. 396 to 399, v. 179.
- Corneille*, iv. 183.
- Cornwall* (Mr.), speaker, ii. 121.
- Cornwallis*, lord, iii. 176.
- Cornwallis* (archbishop) allowed his wife to have routs and cards on Sunday, ii. 21-2.
- Correggio*, i. 101. Anecdote of some of his pictures, 55 note.
- Corruption* and ordure produce objects of beauty, v. 402.
- Corydon* and Delia, simile of, ii. 411-12.
- Cosway* (Mr.), character of his pictures, i. 31-2, 63-4.

- Cosway* (Mrs.), character of her pictures, i. 31-2, 50, 75, 79.
- Country hoyden*, ode to one, iv. 126.
- Country squire* on the eve of his marriage, ode to one, iv. 197.
- Courtenay*, Mr. i. 376.
- Courtiers*, their manners, ii. 14, 397 to 399, 411, iii. 254, iv. 343-4, v. 118, 156. Their constancy, iii. 60-1. Simile concerning them, ii. 264. Compared to dancing dogs, iii. 333.
- Courtown*, lord, iii. 332.
- Courtship*, different modes and specimens of, iv. 107, 110, 115.
- Coutts* the king's banker, ii. 495, v. 235.
- Cowper*, v. 247.
- Cox* and Greenwood, army-agents, v. 423.
- Credulity*, simile on, iv. 362.
- Crickets*, v. 70.
- Crim. con.*, on the practice of giving excessive damages for, iv. 217 to 219. See also Lord Auckland's Triumph, 299.
- Critics*, address to, iv. 13, 14. See also Reviewers.
- Crossdill* the musician, v. 419.
- Crows* (young ones) and young wrens, fable of, v. 111.
- Cuckold*, a complaisant and prudent one, v. 412.
- Cuckoldom*, state of, described, ii. 402-3. Downfall of cuckoldom, iv. 306 to 308, 318 to 323.
- Cumberland*, duchess of, iii. 299, 300.
- Cumberland* (Mr.), his plays, i. 195.
- Cummings* (Mr.), his time-piece, i. 196 note.
- Cunning* a pretty tutor for kings, iii. 177.
- Cur* begging a smile, simile of, ii. 389.
- Curiosity in Rags*, v. 427.
- Curll* the bookseller, i. 330 note.
- Curtis*, lord-mayor, iii. 426, 429.
- Cutler*, sir John, iv. 365.
- Cynthia*, lines to, i. 112, ii. 9, iv. 98, 221. Invitation to, iv. 21. Address to, 75. Songs to, i. 159, iv. 130. Elegy to, v. 292. Ode to Cynthia in town, 117.

D.

- Daisy*, lines to, v. 87. Simile of one planted by a child, i. 516.—
of one on a mountain, ii. 271.
- Damer*, Mrs. ii. 23, iv. 505 note.
- Dance*, Mr. i. 96.
- Dandelion*, iv. 385, 389.
- Daphne*, or the song of the shepherdess, iv. 117.
- Darwin*, Dr. v. 361.
- Dauphin*, how disposed of in the revolution, iii. 248 to 250.
- David*, king, i. 179, ii. 421, iii. 52, iv. 189, 217, 329, v. 304, 380,
406.—and Uriah, i. 457.
- Davies*, Dr. iii. 353 note.
- Dead* folks invited to an entertainment, v. 414.
- Delia*, songs to, i. 160, ii. 177. Lines to, ii. 325, iv. 121. A pastoral elegy, iv. 175.
- Delicacy*, apostrophe to, v. 390.
- Delille* the poet, odes to, iv. 81, 85, 92.
- Democrat*, hint to a poor one, iii. 363.
- Denbigh*, lord, i. 483.
- Dennis*, St. i. 61, 163.
- D'Eon*, miss, i. 443, iii. 187.
- Devil*, his humour, ii. 158. Ode to him, 159. Some lords in arrears with him, iii. 60.
- Devonshire*, duchess of, i. 158. Petition to Time in her favour, ii.
189.
- Devonshire dialect*, poems in, iii. 465 to 483, iv. 107, 429 to 495.
- Devonshire Hob's* love, iv. 107.
- Dew-drops*, simile of, v. 343.
- Diamond-pin* and farthing-candle, a fable, iii. 262.
- Dick* (sir John), knighted for his skill in making crout, i. 306, 509,
ii. 122, 209, 243.
- Dinah*, or my lady's housekeeper, a tale, iv. 186.
- Dinner* of the Royal Academicians, account of, i. 129 to 135.
- Dinners*, experimental, v. 137 note, 144 note.

- Disappointment*, song of, iv. 247.
- Discord*, description of, i. 250 to 252.—of her cave, 252 to 254.
- Distinctness* in painting, i. 66-7,
- Doctors*, tale of, iv. 362.
- Dodd* (Dr.), story concerning his execution, iii. 290.
- Dogs* contrasted with cats, iv. 22. The old shepherd's dog, a tale, 23. They dream, v. 71. Simile of dogs and an alligator, ii. 244. —of a Newfoundland dog and a puppy, i. 405.
- Dolben*, sir William, iii. 367.
- Dolphin* and shark, simile of, v. 34.
- Domitian*, ii. 404, iii. 405.
- Donithorne* (Mr.), elegy to, v. 264.
- Drake*, sir Francis; some account of this knight, contrasted with his great namesake, i. 223 to 226. His office at court, ii. 488. See also i. 301 note, iii. 122.
- Drake*, Mr. v. 200, 227 note, 276.
- Dreams*, indulgent, i. 247-8.
- Dress* (female), various remarks on, iv. 311, v. 32.
- Druid* hymn to the sun, iv. 51.
- Drunkenness* personified, ii. 455, 472.
- Dryander*, Jonas, ii. 59 note, 281-2, iv. 237, v. 145.
- Dryden*, i. 122, v. 246.
- Dubost* (Mr.), painter, address to him, v. 372.
- Duchess* (old), simile of one, i. 155.
- Dumpling* in the pot, simile of one, i. 184.
- Duncan*, lady Mary, i. 407-8, ii. 354, iii. 201, 393, iv. 6, 397.
- Duncannon*, lady, i. 158.
- Dundas*, Mr. i. 410, ii. 111 note, 340, iii. 229, 301, 323, 329, 343, 364, 375-6, 387, 391, 400, 418-19, 421, 427, 432, 439, 444, 461, 488, 490, 492, 500, iv. 231, 360. Goes drunk to the house of commons with Pitt, iii. 302 note. Ode to him on his retreat from power, iv. 375. See also Melville (lord).
- Dundas* (sir David) succeeds the duke of York as commander in chief, v. 397. Resigns again to the duke, 411, 424.
- Dunstan*, St. i. 179, iii. 203.
- Duplicity*, or the bishop of old, a tale, iv. 284. See also 296.

Durham (bishop of) and his lady, their remarks at the opera, iv. 302, v. 32.

Dutch poet, a great one, i. 66.

E.

Eagle slightly wounded, simile of, v. 400.

Earthquake at Jamaica, simile of, ii. 449.

Economy, its proper limits, ii. 190.

Eden, Mr. ii. 40, 97. See also Auckland.

Edgecumb, master, ii. 355. See also Mount Edgecumb.

Eel and cook-maid, story of, iii. 178.

Eggs and bacon frying, simile of, v. 61.

Eglintoun, lord, i. 262.

Egotism defended on authority, iii. 139 to 141.

Eldon, lord, iv. 510, v. 189, 220 note, 259, 335, 411. Portrait of him, v. 282-3.

Elegy on the death of a musical friend, iv. 160. Love-elegies, v. 8 to 16, 21, 23. Political elegies, see Tristia throughout. See also Carlton-house Fête.

Elephant presented by the nabob of Arcot to our queen, and returned on his hands, iii. 320. Ode to it, 365.

Elizabeth (queen), her behaviour to her parliament, iii. 446 to 448. Ballads supposed to be written by her, v. 85, 93. See also v. 98, 105, 110.

Elizabeth, princess, iii. 306, v. 57.

Ellenborough, lord, v. 282.

Elwes, Mr. iv. 365.

Eneas and Dido, ii. 396, iv. 99, 100.

England a milch-cow in the hands of Pitt, iii. 298.

Ennius, iii. 140.

Envy and jealousy prevalent among the Royal Academicians, i. 150-1, 101.

Epicure contemplating a haunch, v. 410.

Epigrams, iii. 190-1, 328 note, iv. 138.

- Epitaphs*, iv. 125, 212, 398. One proposed for Peter, v. 249.
- Equality*, strange changes that it would produce about courts, i. 283-4, 297.
- Erskine*, ii. 89, iii. 46. Elegy to him, v. 259.
- Eton college*, king's visits to, ii. 530.
- Euripides*, elegy on his grave, iv. 128.
- Evening* personified, iii. 98, iv. 391.
- Excise*, ii. 339. Its cause, 316.
- Exciseman*, story of one, i. 193.
- Exeter*, Royal Visit to, iii. 465. See also i. 264 note, ii. 356.
- Exeter*, lord, i. 408, 506.
- Exhibition*, criticisms of some ladies at, i. 40-1. Condition of painters in, 99, 100.
- Expostulatory Odes* to a Great Duke and a Little Lord, ii. 213.

F.

- Fair weather* prayed for, iii. 277.
- Fairfax* (Edward), ballad supposed to be written by him, v. 105.
- Fairies*, their address to some ladies of Cornwall, iv. 220.
- Falcon*, simile of, iii. 340.
- Falling Minister*, Epistle to one, ii. 105.
- Fame*, general eagerness for, i. 62. Should be courted but not ravished, 152. True distinguished from false, ii. 62. The path to the temple of Fame is difficult, 371, 486.
- Fanaticism*, its prevalence, v. 403.
- Farewell odes* for 1786, i. 123.
- Farmer's* blunder on being presented to the king, iii. 478.
- Farnese Hercules*, cast of, ii. 535 note.
- Farquhar*, sir Walter, iv. 474, 484.
- Fashion* characterised, i. 37-8.
- Fasts*, how kept by the dignified clergy, iii. 371. Their efficacy, and proper nature, 406.
- Fat*, its inconveniences, i. 23 to 26.

Fayette, ii. 392.

Feather of the angel Gabriel's wing, i. 93.

Finch, lady Charlotte, v. 288-9, 398.

Fish, ballad to one, v. 108.

Fishes, the king delighted with a draught of some, iii. 334.

Fitzherbert, Mrs. ii. 108 note, v. 179, 425.

Fitzjames, duke, i. 130.

Flattery, iv. 259. Peter disclaims it, i. 44. Is the road to fortune, 99. Contrasted with fair praise, 389 to 391. Its proper limits, ii. 237. Short-lived in comparison with truth, 259. Stomach of kings for it, 393. Ode on, iv. 41.

Fleas of Teneriffe, elegy to, iii. 169.

Flies, lines to two drunken ones, iii. 167, iv. 410.

Flints; invention of flaying them, and turning them to jelly, v. 133.

Fog and Cesar, a tale, iii. 355.

Folkstone, lord, v. 388.

Foote, i. 346.

Fortescue, lord, i. 414.

Fortune, lines to, ii. 314, 326. Peter's toilsome but fruitless search for her, v. 284.

Fox, Mr. i. 108, 177, 190, iii. 297, 392, 506, iv. 447-8, 466, 523, v. 172, 241, 243, 252, 335. His libel-bill, iii. 52. Elegy to him, v. 273.

Fox bagged, simile of one, ii. 373-4.

Frail beauties, Peter's tenderness for them, iv. 270, v. 59, 155-6.

Obliged to pay fees for practising, iv. 372.

France, iv. 396. See also French.

Francis, a new apostle, v. 404 note.

Franklin, Dr. ii. 60 note, iii. 454 note.

Frederic the Great, i. 441.

French, their modern sentiments of kings, ii. 407, 392, iii. 18. Their revolutionary proceedings, ii. 424, 442, 455, 474, 477-8, iii. 146, 148 to 150, 248 to 250, 329, iv. 92-3. Ode to them on these subjects, iii. 351. Their national character, ii. 456 to 458, iv. 34-5, 83-4. Their conduct in retreats, iv. 471. French liberty, 86-7. French taste; ode on it, 183. French painting, i. 106-7.

- Frey*, a modern saint ; lines on his enterprise of converting Jews to christianity, v. 405 note.
- Friend* in disgrace, lines to one, ii. 327.
- Friendship*, ballad on, v. 115.
- Frogmore*, iii. 304. Economy there, i. 303. Frogmore Fête, an ode for music, iii. 306.
- Frogs* and boys, fable of, i. 78. Frogs and Jupiter, iii. 258.
- Frost*, the king's bailiff, iii. 329-30.
- Froth* (lord), and his dog Faddle, iv. 503 to 505.
- Fruitful wife*, story of one, ii. 195 to 198.
- Fuseli* (Mr.), his character as a painter, v. 354. His abuse of Opie, 358. See also 281, 303.

G.

- Gainsborough* (Mr.), examination of some of his pictures, i. 22, 56, 75. See also 515, iv. 383.
- Galloway* (lord), turns off his taylor, and why, ii. 122.
- Gallus*, translation from, iv. 84.
- Gambler*, story of an insolvent one, iv. 525.
- Gambling wives*, how they pay their debts of honour, iv. 322-3.
- Game-laws*, v. 56.
- Gardeners* of Windsor, a tale, ii. 521. See also 497.
- Garnet*, Dr. v. 132.
- Garrard* (Mr.), painter ; advice to him, v. 369.
- Garrick*, i. 9. Story of him, 154.
- Garvey*, Mr. i. 80, 126.
- Genius*, lines on, iv. 101. Peter's universal reverence of it, ii. 262-3. Apostrophe to, v. 281. Its poverty, i. 52. See also v. 120.
- Gentleman's Magazine*, ii. 260, 267 to 273, 287 to 294, 298 to 301, 400, v. 307.
- George II.*, i. 90, 196 note.
- German band*, story of one brought to England, i. 510.
- Gibbet* of a malefactor in chains, simile of, iii. 297.
- Gibbs* (sir Vinegar), attorney-general, v. 411.

- Gideon* (sir Samson), and his lady and daughters, i. 393-4.
- Gifford*, his history, character, and present honourable employ, iii. 493 note, v. 59. More on this subject, iv. 331 to 333. See also iii. 497 note, iv. 524, v. 281, 303, 315.
- Gingerbread* exhibitions of appropriate subjects, suggested for a celebrated entertainment, v. 423.
- Glass*, lines on one, v. 86.
- Gloucester*, duke and duchess of, ii. 145, 208, 303 : 158, 431, iii. 300 : i. 181.
- Glow-worm*, ii. 375. Ode to, 375. Lines with the gift of one, v. 106.
- Gold*, mischiefs of its discovery, v. 309.
- Good Friday*, a tale, iv. 59.
- Goose* in a lane, simile of, ii. 226.
- 'Goosy, goosy, gander,' air of, v. 317.
- Gordon*, duchess of, iii. 502.
- Gordon*, lord George, i. 60 note, 253, 257, ii. 440, 443.
- Gottingen*, the king's favourite university for his sons, i. 213, ii. 531, iii. 177, 361.
- Gough* the antiquarian, ii. 267, 292, 299, iv. 242. Elegy to him, v. 306.
- Graham*, Dr. v. 140.
- Graham*, a new apostle, v. 404 note.
- Grasshoppers* excommunicated by a popish bishop, ii. 81.
- Gratitude* compared to a pine-apple, iii. 441.
- Great Cry and Little Wool*, v. 159.
- Great men* are supported by the people, iii. 31 to 33. Their real characters are mistaken by the mob, 232 to 235, 354. Reverence due to greatness, ii. 399, 400. It attracts envy and ridicule, 428-9.
- Grenville* (Mr., now lord), ii. 124, 338, iii. 308, 400, 403, iv. 359, 471, v. 223, 228. Elegy to him, v. 250.
- Gretna Green* marriages, iv. 240-1.
- Grey de Wilton*, lord, iii. 86.
- Grief*, ballad of, v. 89.
- Grose*, judge, v. 225 to 230.

- Grosvenor*, earl of, iii. 493, 494 note, iv. 307, 332.
Gudgeons (boiled) intended to imitate living gold-fish, v. 421.
Guido, i. 146, 155.
Guillotine, hymn to, iv. 16.
Gulls, method of catching these birds, i. 59. Simile of a gull in a storm, ii. 242.—of a tame one, 423.
Gwynne, colonel, iii. 333, iv. 458.

H.

- Habakkuk*, ii. 358, v. 248.
Haggerdorn, madame, i. 256.
Hair Powder, a plaintive Epistle to Mr. Pitt, iii. 283. See also 323.
Hamilton (sir William), his present to sir Joseph Banks, ii. 66 note. His antiquarian manufactures, 66-7. Lyric epistle to him, iii. 185. See also ii. 304, iv. 6.
Hamlin the tinman, Epistle from him, v. 211. His death and epitaph, 256 to 258.
Hampden, lord, i. 414, 509.
Handel, i. 514, iv. 249. Anecdote of him, i. 419.
Hanger, colonel, v. 416.
Happiness depends on the will, ii. 414-15.
Harcourt, lord, ii. 243. His project for feeding the king's cattle on horse-chesnuds (see Horse-chesnuds), 340.
Harcourt, lady, i. 483.
Hardinge, Mr. ii. 227.
Hardy the shoemaker, iii. 504.
Hare in the snow, simile of, iii. 389-90.
Harrington (miss), lines on, iv. 216.
Hastings, Mr. i. 343, 409, 412, ii. 19, 217, iv. 41, v. 129 note.
Hastings, Mrs. ii. 342.
Hasty pudding, operation of taking one by siege, v. 141 note.
Harveys, parson, iv. 324.
Hawke, admiral, i. 130.
Hawkesbury, old lord, ii. 208, 259, 303, 390, 417, 487, 495, 506, iii. 30, 43, 59, 298, 300, 308 note, 347, 355, 387, 400, 427, iv. 227,

245. Tale dedicated to him, iii. 68. See also Expostulatory Odes, Jenkinson, and Liverpool.
- Hawkesbury*, young lord, ode to him, iv. 348. Writes in magazines, v. 55. See also iii. 488, iv. 377, v. 393.
- Hawkesworth*, Dr. ii. 65 note.
- Hawking*, ballad on, iv. 201.
- Hawkins*, sir John, i. 329 note, 342.
- Hayley*, Mr. ii. 245, 260 note, 276, 287, 299, 333, iii. 398. Character of his rhymes, ii. 258, 267.
- Heads*, odes to some in the exhibition, v. 373.
- Health*, ode to, iv. 202.
- Heard*, sir Isaac, iii. 400, iv. 358.
- Heber*, Mr. i. 33.
- Heberden*, Dr. v. 165.
- Hectic*, story of one and his wife, ii. 419.
- Hedge-sparrow*, ode to one nursing a young cuckoo, iv. 63.
- Hedgehogs*, fable of, iv. 365.
- Helen*, ode on her portrait, v. 376. Lines to Helen in town, 327.
- Hell* broken loose, ii. 441.
- Hen* with one chick, simile of, i. 516-17. Simile of hen and chickens, iv. 523.
- Heron* on the sea-shore, simile of, ii. 426.
- Herschell* (Dr.), his glass, and the king's speculations and journey through it, i. 210, 307. The doctor's astronomical discoveries, ii. 67 to 69.
- Hilario*, his vicissitudes, v. 253-4.
- Hill*, sir Richard, iii. 367-8. See also Rowland.
- Hobart*, Mrs. i. 108.
- Hodges*, Mrs. iv. 321.
- Hodsell* (Mr.), ornaments in his kitchen-garden, ii. 143.
- Hogg* the bookseller, iv. 322.
- Holderness*, lady, iii. 312 note, 338.
- Holland*, the second lord, iii. 297 note.
- Holland*, Mr. i. 401 note.
- Homer*, ii. 34, v. 246. His freedom in recording the mutual abuse of the gods, i. 268-9. Translation from his hymn, iii. 140.

- Hone* (Mr. Nathan), character of his portraits, i. 46. His death lamented, 103.
- Honesty*, limits to its efficacy; and story on this subject, iv. 480 to 482.
- Honour*, its inconsistency, v. 191.
- Hope*, v. 250.
- Hope*, Mr. v. 372 note.
- Horace* quoted, and translated, i. 1, 27, 203, 383, 449, ii. 77, 347, 445, 460, iii. 62, 140, 317, 373, 383, 437, iv. 1, 253, v. 201, 231, 245, 347, 422. Imitation of, ii. 115.
- Horror*, images of, i. 177 to 183.
- Horrors of Bribery*, v. 211.—postscript, 225.
- Horse-chesnuts*, the king's experiment of fattening his cattle on them, ii. 249, 340. Elegy on this subject, 512.
- Horsley*, Dr. ii. 53, iii. 411 note.
- Hospitality* and benevolence rarely united, v. 398.
- Hotham* (admiral), ode to him, iv. 231.
- Hound* giving his tongue, simile of, v. 388.
- House*, Sam, i. 180.
- Hoy*: see Tales (iv. 379).
- Humble beginnings* necessary in the progress to excellence, i. 19, 20.
- Hunt*, royal, iii. 156.
- Hunter*, John, ii. 69, 70 note.
- Huntington*, the coal-heaver and saint, v. 405 note.
- Hurricane* expected, i. 296.
- Husbands*, simile on some promoted by love, ii. 450. A complaisant and prudent one, v. 412.
- Hutton*, Dr. ii. 53.
- Hymen*, odes to, ii. 418, iv. 327.

I.

- Imhoff*, Mrs. iii. 338.
- Incedon*, iii. 309, iv. 163, v. 272.
- Inconstancy*, apology for, iv. 225. Lines on an inconstant, v. 91, 328.

- Incurious* country-lasses, story of some, i. 41.
Independence, apostrophe to, v. 268.
India, progress of young adventurers at, iii. 291. Famine in, 20.
 A motive for our military exploits there, 498.
Informers, iii. 501. Odes to one, 420, 423:
Innocence, ode to, iii. 222. Contrasted with guilt, 184. The Island of Innocence, v. 147.
Inquisitiveness recommended, i. 491 to 493.
Ins and outs, odes to, iv. 341.
Invitations sent to dead folks, v. 414.
Irony, ode to, iii. 39.
Isaiah, his satire, iii. 489, v. 304.

J.

- Jackson* (Dr.), story of his disappointment, iv. 249-50.
Jails a sort of purgatory to poets in their road to fame, i. 208. See also Prisons.
James I., his sentiment on the itch, ii. 384.
Jealous the thief-taker. See Townsend.
Jealousy, ode to, iv. 68.
Jenkinson, ii. 110, 339, iii. 418, 432, 439, 444, 461, iv. 357-8, v. 273.
 See also Hawkesbury (old), Expostulatory odes, and Liverpool.
Jenny's complaint, iv. 25.
Jeremiad addressed to George Rose, iii. 460, 462.
Jessica, elegy on, v. 329.
Jewess and her son, a tale, ii. 191.
Jews in St. Paul's church-yard, i. 389. Lines on the enterprise of a modern saint, of converting the Jews to christianity, v. 405
 note.
Joan of Naples, anecdote of her, iv. 414.
Job and Satan, ii. 243.
John and Joan, a tale, iii. 450.
Johnson (Dr.), anecdote of him, iii. 410 note. His loyalty, i. 361 note.
 See also i. 9, 76, 183, 306, 326 note, 493 note, ii. 265, 268, 366, iii. 42, 273, iv. 3, 210-11, 282, v. 230, 297, 365; and Boswell, and Botzy, throughout.

- Jones* (widow), her successful contest with the king, i. 426 to 429.
Joseph and Potiphar's wife, v. 285, 308.
Jubilee of the year 1809, v. 409.
Judge, portrait of an infamous one, iv. 147 to 150.
Julia, or the Victim of Love, v. 3 to 24.
Junius, ii. 235.
Jurymen, ode to, iii. 427.
Juvenal quoted, and translated, i. 166, ii. 213, iii. 1, iv. 302, v. 211.

K.

- Kallipugé* charms, v. 428.
Katerfelto, i. 61, ii. 367, v. 131.
Kauffman (Angelica), character of her pictures, i. 39.
Kearsley, Peter's original publisher, ii. 359, 386.
Kemble, Mr. i. 479.
Kenyon, lord-chief-justice, iii. 71, 202, 288, 426, iv. 6, 218-19, v. 220 note.
Keppel (bishop), anecdote of him, v. 41.
Kien Long, emperor of China, odes to, iii. 137. His panegyric on tea, iv. 36-7. See also iii. 312 note, v. 420.
King, his taste for painting, i. 90, 515 to 517.—for music, 252, 393, 396, 514. His treatment of the empress of Russia's application for his portrait by Reynolds, 96. Simile on his conversation, 221. His contest with Wilkes, 240.—with the widow Jones, 426 to 429. Walks through Herschell's telescope, 307. His knowledge of minute things, 325, 456, 518-19, 531-2. His interview with Dr. Johnson, i. 326 note. His communicativeness, 326. His tender heart, 358. His generosity to madame Mara and Mrs. Siddons, 396 to 399. His instructions to Pitt, 400-1. Forbids oratorios at Drury-lane, 424-5. Subscribes to a concert, 426 note. His husbandry, 434, ii. 334, 413, 495-6, 533, iii. 95, 154, 330, 332, 346. His religion, i. 438-9, 505. His fondness for Peter's verses, 464, iii. 172 note, ii. 487.—will not have him prosecuted, iii. 44-5.—ode on this subject, 59. His exploits at reviews, i. 475-6, ii. 354, 534. Contrasted with Charles the Second, i. 476. His virtues too exalted for Peter's sight, 477.

His fortitude in his son's illness, 478-9. Loves some arts, 480. His visit to Whitbread's brewhouse, 480 to 496.—this visit commended, 498. Offended at his cooks' wearing scratch-wigs like his own, 511-12. Binds books, and sends his old clothes abroad to his relations, 519-20. Threatens to set off for Hanover with his money, 521. Orders his laureat to be more moderate in praising him, 529-30. His poverty, ii. 17 to 20, 147, 431, iii. 162. Is somewhat reformed by Peter, ii. 49 note. Keeps no company that dares be wiser than himself, 56. Interferes in a philosophical dispute, 60 note. His usual questions to sir Joseph Banks, 63. Peter's attachment to him, 218-19, i. 512-13. Peter praises him for one thing, ii. 226. Watches the queen's diamond petticoat all night, 354, 503 note. Examples of his humour, 355 note, iii. 330, i. 307. His patronage of genius and the arts, ii. 344-5, 394, 404, 417, 425, 501-2, iii. 144, 278, 396 note. His tenderness toward the funds of the Royal Academy, iii. 273-4. His generosity, bounty, &c. ii. 433, 495, 524, iii. 157 to 160, 236, 291-2, 334 to 337, 339, 366, 480. His visit to Salisbury cathedral, ii. 480 to 482.—to Wilton-house, 483. His visits to Eton college, 530. Epigram on the stone thrown at him, iii. 190. Performs a minuet with dancing dogs, iii. 19 note. Ode to him on Pitt's retreat from administration, iv. 345 (see also 488, 507, 368-9). His electioneering, 451-2. His illness in 1802, v. 163 &c. 189. Elegies to him, 237, 241, 245. Story of the king and the brickmaker, i. 431.—of the king and the apple-dumplings, 458.—of the royal sheep, ii. 25.—of the king and parson Young, 31.—of Solomon and the mouse-trap, 182.—of Cesar and the fog, iii. 355. See also i. 45, 100, 108, 361 note, 445, ii. 249, 266, 275, 363, 369, 370, 392, 434-5, 521 to 525, iii. 36, 50, 128, 130 note, 187, 300, 315 note, 352, 395, iv. 395, 437 note, 464, v. 43, 131, 223, 381, 406: and throughout the articles Lousiad, More money, Royal tour, Royal visit, and Tears of St. Margaret; and Mill, Presents, Steel-traps, and Townsend.

King of France, anecdote of one, i. 465 6. Story of one and a lady, iv. 313.—of another and his confessor, 317-18.

King of Mosquitoes, dialogue between him and Peter, ii. 506 note.

King of Naples, his economy, ii. 334.

King of Prussia, iii. 301 note, 347.

King of Sicily, story of one and a poet, v. 277-8.

King of Spain, i. 182-3. The king of Spain and the horse, a tale, ii. 150.

Kings not more than common men, i. 196 to 198, v. 392. Their gluttonous appetite for praise, i. 388, ii. 393. Peter's former and present sentiments of them, ii. 239 to 241, 246-7, iii. 354-5, 357, v. 118-19; (see also i. 460 to 462, ii. 408, 450 to 452, iii. 68, 147, 295-6, 347.) French sentiments of them, ii. 392, 407, iii. 18. Peter must have them, i. 454 to 457, 532, iii. 321. They should be spoken of freely, ii. 224. Are not to be compared with logs, 231-2. Are fond of obedience, 389, 432. Their conduct toward poets, 469. Exalted ideas of royalty, entertained by little folks, v. 392. Apology for Kings, 480. Rights of Kings, 379. See also Princes.

Kiss, anacreontics on one, iv. 35, 67, 75. Song on kissing, iv. 22. Kisses are the food of love, v. 64.

Kite beset by rooks, simile of, ii. 227. Simile of a kite and small birds, iii. 22.—of a paper kite, iv. 490.

Knack in doing things, i. 142.

Knight and rats, tale of, iv. 95.

Knight (Mr.), his character as a legislator, man of taste, and poet, iii. 397 & note. See also v. 302.

Knighthood declined by Peter above all things, ii. 41. His estimation of this honour, 407, 481-2. Its effects, iii. 279-80. Elegy on its present disgraced state, v. 261.

Kosciusko reads Peter's works in prison, iv. 281.

Kynaston (Mr.), of Leatherhead, i. 181 note.

L.

Lackington the bookseller, iv. 135.

Ladies, their criticisms at the exhibition, i. 40. Ode to the ladies of England, iv. 70. Woful picture of ladies in distress, v. 427 to 429.

Lady who wished not to be admired, lines to one, iv. 181.

Lais, i. 64. Ode to, ii. 321.

- Landlord*, portrait of a jolly one, v. 26-7.
- Landscape-painters*, advice to them, ii. 137.
- Lane* (Mr.), character of his pictures, v. 362.
- Lane* the bookseller, iv. 135.
- Lap-dog* and coachman, a tale, iv. 77.
- Larder*, economy of the royal one, i. 226-7.
- Lark*, ballad to, v. 109.
- Latin*, its use in funeral sermons, iii. 54-5.
- Lauderdale*, lord, iii. 130 note.
- Laughing*, unfairness in, exposed, i. 113-14.
- Laura*, lines to, ii. 10. A pastoral song, v. 332.
- Laureat*, his pitiable situation in the present reign, i. 110, ii. 451-2.
 Directions for, i. 387 to 389. Instructions to a celebrated one, 471.
 Advice to the future Laureat, ii. 329.
- Laurence* (Mr.) recommended by the king, but rejected by the Royal Academicians, ii. 381, 426, 432 note.
- Lauzun*, count of, i. 130.
- Leather guns* invented by the duke of Richmond, ii. 144 note, iii. 430.
- Leeds* (duke of), description of his personal appearance, iii. 87.
 Anecdote of his conversation with Peter, and its result, iv. 243 to 246.—song on this subject, 247. See also ii. 208, 259, 303, 340, 390, 417, 487, iii. 13, 43, 59, 85, 92, 300, iv. 227; and Expostulatory odes, throughout.
- Leg of mutton* boiling, simile of, i. 283.
- Lennox*, general, iii. 245 note.
- Leo X.*, iii. 401.
- Lesage*, v. 247.
- Lettsom* (Dr.), his famous beets, ii. 72.
- Lever*, sir Ashton, ii. 76.
- Lewis XIV.*, i. 44-5. Died lousy, ii. 416.
- Lewis XVI.*, i. 61, ii. 423, iii. 201 note, iv. 94.
- Lewis XVII.* See Dauphin.
- Lewis XVIII.*, iii. 442.
- Liberty*, ballads in praise of, v. 96-7.
- Liberty's* last Squeak, iii. 415.
- Library*, Peter's described, v. 301 to 303. Royal libraries, iii. 95-6.

- Life*, hymn to, iv. 229.
- Lightning*, simile of, iv. 516.
- Linnet* caught by bird-lime, simile of one, v. 47.
- Lion* ship of war, ode to, iv. 233. Lyric epistle to, iii. 132.
- Liverpool*, earl of, iii. 488, v. 119, 182, 260. See also Jenkinson, and Hawkesbury (old).
- Livery* of London, ode to, iii. 437. Their violence in the affair of Mrs. Clarke and the duke of York, v. 389. Reprimanded on this account, 391.
- Lizards*, how the queen's are fed, ii. 488 note.
- London*, scenes in its streets, iii. 100, iv. 435.
- Long*, Charles, iii. 488, iv. 360, 377.
- Lonsdale* (lord), commiserating Epistle to, iii. 1. Ode to him, on his prosecuting Peter for that Epistle as a libel, 41.
- Lord*, lines on a new-made one, iii. 191. Advantages of this title, 107.
- Lord-mayor*, transitory grandeur of this station, i. 308.
- Loretto*, our Lady of, i. 143, iii. 200, 208.
- Lousiad*, Canto I., i. 169.—incident on which the poem is founded, 171.—argument, 173.—the subject proposed, 175.—first appearance, and behaviour, of the louse, 176.—horror of the king at the sight, 176.—his exclamation, and speech to the queen and princesses, 183-4.—he interrogates the pages, 185.—behaviour of the queen, and of the pages, on this great occasion, 185-6.—the king resolves to have his whole kitchen shaved, 186.—spirited speeches of the intended victims, 187 to 201.—list of the unhappy sufferers, 201-2. Canto II., i. 203.—argument, 205.—invocation to the muses, 207; to Apollo, 210-11; to conscience, 212.—some account of madame Schwellenberg, 217.—her behaviour, and dialogue with the king, on the affair of the louse, 220.—some account of sir Francis Drake, 224.—council held by the cooks in the larder, 226.—their speeches, 228 to 234.—their petition, 235. Canto III., i. 241.—argument, 243.—description of night in the palace, 245.—visit of Fame to the cave of Discord, 250.—Discord visits the king and the cook-major in assumed forms; her dialogues with them, 254, 256.—the major calls up the cooks, to prepare for a contest, 260.—dejection of the major, 267. Canto IV., i. 271.—argument, 273.—morning of the important day, 275.—the cooks are inspirited by their wives and daughters, 276.—dialogue of the clerk of the kitchen with the cooks' wives, 278; with the cook-major, 286.—the resolution for shaving is declared absolute by the clerk of the kitchen, and confirmed by the king, 287-8. Canto V., i. 289.—argument, 291.—two of the princesses intercede for the cooks, 293-4.—despondency of the cooks, 295.—the cook-major's pathetic appeal to the king, 297-8.—answer of the queen, 299.—the king offers to pay for the wigs, but retracts this promise, 300, 305.—his final order for the shaving, 305.—the cooks submit, 309.—the king triumphs, and justifies himself, 311.—speech of the louse to him, 311.—the king's furious reply, 314.—the louse is transferred to the sky as a new planet, 314-15.

Loutherbourg (Mr.), character of his pictures, i. 26, 125, v. 359 to 361.

Love contrasted with matrimony, ii. 318-19. Economy and moderation in love recommended, 320, 526, iii. 213 to 215, iv. 227-8. Charms of variety in love, ii. 421-2, iv. 225-6, 228, 316. General influence of love, iv. 7, 8. Ode for boys and girls on this subject, 31. Hymn to love, 131. Its symptoms, 151. Ballad of love, v. 88. Ballad to authors that endite on the passion of love, 114.

Love-feasts of the methodists, iv. 324.

Lover's petition, v. 90. The lover's pity, a ballad, 92.

Loyalty a bird of passage, iii. 60.

Lucan quoted, and translated, iv. 341.

Lucan, lady, i. 141.

Lucretius, iii. 140.

Luther, his reformation, i. 161.

Lynch (Dr.), melancholy event in his family, ii. 110 note.

Lyric odes to Royal Academicians for 1782, i. 13.—for 1783, 47.—for 1785, 71.—for 1786, 123.

M.

- Macartney* (lord) and his ship, pair of lyric epistles to, iii. 119.—
ode to the ship on her return, iv. 233. See also iii. 144, 310-11.
- Mucaulay* (Mrs.), the historian, i. 183, ii. 247.
- Macbride*, captain, i. 18.
- Macdonald*, attorney-general, ii. 343, iii. 44.
- Macklin*, Mr. ii. 131.
- Macpherson*, i. 319.
- Maddox*, counsellor, iv. 452-3.
- Madeira*, island of, ii. 363.
- Madrigals*, iv. 118, 176, 196, 225.
- Magpie* peeping into a bone, simile of, i. 484. Magpie and Robin
Redbreast, a tale, ii. 471, 474.
- Maids of honour*, i. 249. Obligated to provide their own bed-linen,
ii. 499, 532, iii. 431.
- Mainwaring*, Mr. v. 242. See also Middlesex election, throughout.
- Malmsbury*, earl of, iii. 387. His embassy, 393.
- Manchineel-tree*, simile of, ii. 487.
- Mandeville*, ii. 360.
- Mansfield*, lord, i. 60, 76, 77.
- Mansfield* (sir James), chief-justice, v. 411.
- Mara*, madame, i. 424, ii. 56, 155, 499, 509. Their majesties' generosity to her, i. 396-7.
- Marchesi* the singer, i. 285, ii. 155, 354, 528, iv. 6, 520.
- Margate*, praise of, iv. 386.
- Margate-hoy*, ode to one, iii. 62. See also Tales.
- Margaret* (St.), her lamentation, iii. 81-2.
- Marian's* complaint, iv. 9.
- Marlborough*, the great duke of, ii. 69 note, 192, v. 402. The present
duke, ii. 69, 208. The duchess, iii. 14.
- Married men* should wear winkers, v. 39.
- Marsyas*, story of, i. 84.
- Martial* quoted, and translated, iii. 27.
- Martyn*, Starling, i. 105, ii. 207.
- Marvel*, Andrew, ii. 35.

- Mary*, queen, i. 483. Princess, v. 57.
- Maseres*, baron, ii. 53.
- Maskelyne*, Dr. ii. 53.
- Mason* the poet, i. 9, ii. 333, iii. 398.
- Master of the horse*, this situation sought in exchange for that of master of the mare, v. 412.
- Mathias*, iii. 500 note, iv. 266, 331, 339, v. 26, 302, 347.
- Matrimony* contrasted with love, ii. 318-19. Is now much abused, iii. 217. Similes on, 450, v. 39, 61.
- Maurice*, parson, v. 280-1, 290, 302.
- Mawbey*, sir Joseph, i. 395, ii. 121, 209.
- May-day*, iv. 89.
- Medley*, a modern saint, v. 405 note.
- Melancholy*, iv. 50. See also Cheerfulness.
- Melville*, lord, v. 253. See also Dundas.
- Melville* (sir James), ballad supposed to be written by him, v. 98.
- Menage*, iv. 242-3.
- Merit* described, v. 234-5. Merit and money seldom meet, iii. 241.
- Merlin*, v. 131, 132 note.
- Methodist chapels*, the scenes of love-affairs, iv. 324. Description of the new saints, with examples, v. 403, 404 and note, 406.
- Mevagizzy*, a fishing-town in Cornwall, i. 119, ii. 426.
- Meyrsbach*, Dr. v. 138.
- Mice*, ode to two in a trap, iv. 119.
- Michael Angelo*, his abuse of Raphael, i. 95.
- Middlesex election*, Devonshire epistles on, iv. 429.
- Mill of charity* in Windsor park, iii. 319. Ode to it, 359.
- Milliner*, ode to a pretty one, iii. 182.
- Millman*, Dr. v. 165.
- Milton*, ii. 229, 418, iv. 128, 135, v. 120, 246, 427.
- Ministers* compared to rods, v. 420.
- Miser* and dervise, a tale, iv. 120.
- Misery* often the child of folly, iii. 442.
- Mistresses*, apology for keeping them, ii. 318.
- Mob* hired to huzza and clap the king, i. 496 note, ii. 146, 532.
Their propensity to pull down princes, v. 390.

- Moderation* in enjoyment recommended, iv. 227-8, 329-30. Ode on, 239.
- Modesty*, hymn to, ii. 11.
- Money* compared to a common girl, iii. 33.
- Montague*, duke of, i. 483.
- Montague*, Mrs. ii. 277.
- Moon*, simile of, v. 261.
- Moore* (Dr.), archbishop of Canterbury, iii. 336.
- Moore*, general, v. 185 to 187.
- More* (miss Hannah), praised by the reviewers, i. 7. Expostulation to her, iv. 278-9 (296). See also i. 195, ii. 22, 277, 289-90, 299, v. 48; and Nil admirari, throughout.
- More money!* or Odes of Instruction to Mr. Pitt, ii. 489.
- Morning*, simile of, ii. 195. Visits Peter's cottage, i. 531.
- Morning Chronicle*, iii. 360.
- Morocco* ambassador, v. 399.
- Moss* (parson) curtails the church-service on account of dinner, iii. 407.
- Moth* burned, ballad on, v. 95. Similes of, 157, 339.
- Mount Edgcomb*, lord, ii. 339, 355 & note, 466 note. Lady, i. 248, ii. 466.—stanza on the death of her pig, ii. 324, 355 note. See also Edgcomb.
- Mouse* visits Peter, v. 239-40. See also Mice.
- Mousehole*, a fishing-town in Cornwall, i. 119-20.
- Mozer*, Mary, i. 114.
- Mudge*, Dr. ii. 69.
- Mudie*, miss, v. 316.
- Mulgrave*, lord, ii. 72.
- Murray*, general, iii. 247. See also Pulteney.
- Muses*, invocation to, i. 207, 209.
- Musician*, lines on the death of one, iv. 160, v. 323.
- Myself*, ode to, i. 119. Epistle to, v. 334, 341.

N.

- Nabob* and a beggar, story of, i. 229.
- Nancy* of the Rose, lines to, iv. 103.
- Narcissa*, elegy to, v. 284.

- Nares*, parson, iii. 496 note, iv. 338, v. 141, 229 & note, v. 280-1, 290, 301-2, 315.
- Nature* should not be copied by artists, i. 65.
- Nebuchadnezzar*, i. 198, ii. 20, iv. 204, v. 135 note.
- Negro* and mule, story of, iv. 527.
- Nelson* (lord), lines to, v. 325. On his taking the command of the fleet off Cadiz, 326.
- Nero*, iii. 405.
- New-old ballads*, v. 85.
- Newfoundland dog* and puppy, simile of, i. 405.
- Newspaper-editor*, character of one, iv. 420 to 425.
- Nichols* (John), benevolent Epistle to him, ii. 253.—his Answer, 285. Epitaph for him, 305. Lines on his Progresses of Queen Elizabeth, 324. See also ii. 140-1, 245, iv. 242, 382, v. 303.
- Nicholson* (Margaret), her tremendous attempt on the king, i. 438. Her knights, 494-5. See also ii. 203, 533, iii. 418.
- Nicolai* the page, ii. 499 note, 532, iii. 122.
- Night*, descriptions of, i. 245, iii. 81, iv. 391-2, 509, v. 58-9.
- Nightingale*, lines to, iv. 185.
- Nil admirari*, or a Smile at a Bishop, iv. 253. Peter's own review of this piece, 294.
- Nile* complimenting Mr. Bruce, ii. 364, 369. Battle of the Nile, v. 428.
- Noah* and his ark, iii. 352.
- Nollekens* (Mr.), address to him, v. 371.
- North*, lord, i. 24, 45, 190, 215, 460, v. 172.
- Novelty* necessary to enjoyment, ii. 526. Mistake of the notion that there is none under the sun, v. 119-20.

O.

- Oak*, simile of one, iii. 12.
- Oberon* the fairy, his threat, v. 102.
- Obia-man*, story of one in Jamaica, iii. 209-10.
- Oblivion*, her activity, v. 422.
- Ocean* in a storm, similes of, iv. 343, v. 340.
- Ode*, one of Peter's destroyed by rats, i. 118. Excellence and value of ode, v. 422.

- Ode upon ode*, i. 383.—apologetic Postscript, 449.
Odes of importance, iii. 27.
O' Kelly, count, i. 108.
Old maid, story of a proud one, iv. 18.
Old Simon, a tale, iii. 51.
O' Meara (Dr.), disappointed of a bishopric, v. 386-7.
One more Peep at the Royal Academy, v. 347.
One Thousand seven Hundred and ninety-six, a satire, iii. 383.
Opera. See Durham.
Opera-singers, iv. 413.
Opie the painter, i. 57-8, v. 358.
Orange, family of the prince of, iii. 307.
Oratorios, the king's, in Tottenham-street, i. 424 note, 425 note, ii. 17 note.
Ordinary under ground described, ii. 274.
Organ rejoicing, iii. 90.
Orleans, duke of, i. 130, 135.
Orson and Ellen, a legendary tale, v. 25.
Osgar's prayer, iv. 170.
Osnaburgh, bishop of, i. 504. See also York.
Otaheitans, their freedom in love, ii. 315.
Otway, v. 246.
Out at last, or the Fallen Minister, iii. 485.
Overture, complaint concerning, v. 123.
Ovid, iii. 140. In banishment, 41, v. 246.
Owl, address to, iii. 93. Simile of a German one, v. 167.—of an owl flying in the day-time, 389. Fable of the owl and the parrot, iv. 33.—of the owl courting an eaglet, 350.
Oxford, lady, iii. 399.
Oysters, a royal saying on eating them, v. 244.

P.

- Page*, a new apostle, v. 404 note.
Pages, their pride hurt by dining with a hair-dresser, i. 180 note.
Paine (Mr.), Odes to him, ii. 437. Song by him, 442. See also ii. 479, 486, 491, iii. 128, 174-5, 403, 421, 424, iv. 16, v. 54.

Painters, advice to very young ones, i. 19. Directions to artists in general, 65. Young artists reproved for their propensity to envy, 101.—cautioned not to be vain of applause, 103-4.—recommended to improve their education, 110.—advised to reverence antiquity, 146. Subjects for Painters, ii. 129. See also Landscape, and Portrait.

Painting, influence of fashion on it, i. 37.

Palace, description of night in, i. 249.

Palmer (Mr.), his generosity to the king, and how returned, ii. 68
note.

Paris and Menelaus, v. 387.

Park, the musicians of this name, i. 114.

Parkinson, Mr. ii. 76.

Parr, Dr. ii. 467-8.

Parrots asking and telling news, simile of, i. 483.

Parson in quest of preferment, iv. 399. Tale of the parson, squire, and spaniel, ii. 36.

Parson-dealer, story of one, ii. 198.

Parsons the musician, i. 393, 416, iii. 83, v. 118.

Passions, ode on, iv. 328.

Pastry-cooks, use of pretty girls in their shops, v. 35.

Pathetic odes, iii. 227.

Patience, ode to, ii. 206. Images of, v. 264 to 266.

Patroclus in the armour of Achilles, v. 388.

Paul, emperor of Russia, iii. 497, v. 56.

Paulet, lord, iii. 333.

Pea growing, simile of, iv. 218.

Pembroke, earl of, ii. 481, 483.

Penn (William), Nathan, and the bailiff; story of, iii. 165.

Penny (Mr.), character of his pictures, i. 37.

Penny-post, Pitt's imposition on; and elegy on this subject, iv. 501
note.

Pentreath, Doll, i. 120.

Pepys, Dr. v. 165.

Perceval, Mr. v. 420.

Perring, lord-mayor; Epistle to him, v. 201.

Peter, czar, i. 19.

- Peter's pension*, a solemn Epistle, ii. 1.
- Peter's prophecy*, or the President and the Poet, ii. 43.
- Peterborough* (earl of) and the mob, a tale, ii. 193.
- Peters*, Mr. i. 132. Character of his pictures, 39.
- Petit-maitre* and the man on the wheel, a story, ii. 202.
- Petition of the cooks*, i. 235.
- Petticoat*, lines to a white satin one, iv. 45. A petticoat watched all night by a king, ii. 354, 503 note.
- Petty* (lord Henry), elegy to him, v. 252.
- Phyllida's complaint*, iv. 90.
- Piccadilly duke*, ii. 95. See also Queensbury.
- Pictures*, cautions in choosing them, i. 155.
- Pig hanging in a gate*, simile of, ii. 210-11. Fable of the pig and the magpie, 250.
- Pilchards* celebrated, i. 119-20.
- Pilgrims* and peas, story of, i. 143.
- Pindar* the Greek poet, i. 15, 49, 62, ii. 459, 466.
- Pindar* (Peter), i. 49 to 52. Sells his goods too cheap, 69, 122. Fable addressed to him, 78. Visits some relics in France, 92-3. Tells the secret of his love, 111, 159, ii. 360.—his taste in that passion, i. 442-3.—his sentiments on matrimony, ii. 318-19, 418, v. 311. Is of no party, i. 411. Would refuse the laureatship, 447-8, ii. 336-7. His powers of song and satire, i. 453.—nevertheless, his satire and character are humble, iii. 427 to 429, 433-4, v. 292-3. His address to one of his odes, i. 466-7. Declines a pension from the king, ii. 16, 17, 20, 21. Is difficult to be bribed, 35. Anticipated idea of Peter in the Fleet, 141. Defends himself against the charge of always harping on one topic, 229-30. Hints of his personal appearance, 501, 342 (v. 350-1). Hostility and envy which he has to encounter, 234, 242, 244-5, 276, v. 292. Effects of his appearance at St. James's, ii. 243-4. Compared to Churchill and Junius, 235.—to Mr. Paine, 440. His apology for his miscellaneous publications, 305. What would be his conduct if he were king, 338 to 345. Has been a traveller, 361-2, v. 284, 309. How highly he would esteem royal condescension, ii. 412-13. His remonstrance on being deemed a turncoat, 447. Complains that the king is not generous to him, 500-1. His tenderness of heart, 515-16. Narrowly escapes prosecution, iii. 43 to 46, iv. 227.—ode and fable on this subject, iii. 59, 68. His passions and desires are moderate, 364, v. 310. Has dealt in praise as well as censure, iii. 394-5. Powerful effect of his verses, 504, ii. 49 note.—they are read by some great people, iv. 281. He complains of the booksellers, v. 124-5, 158. His disappointments, 264 to 266, 284-5. Is willing at last to accept a place or pension from his majesty, 406. Is unnoticed and disappointed at the jubilee, and at Carlton-house fête, 409, 414, 426. Complimented by Weltjie, who vouches for the truth of many of his stories, 415. See also v. 52 to 54; and Myself, and Kings.

Pindariana, or Peter's Portfolio, iv. 1.

Pinetti, signor, iii. 341 note.

Piozzi, Mrs. ii. 277. See also Thrale, and Bozzy.

Pitt (Mr.), his hostility to the prince, ii. 107, 109, 127, 259, iv. 491.

Ode on Messrs. Pitt and Co., ii. 115. Lines to him, 431. Odes of Instruction to him, 489. His consistency in the matter of reform, iii. 250-1, 345, 347, 404, 454, iv. 355, 489, 500, v. 162, 197-8, 274. Goes drunk to the house of commons with Dundas, iii. 302 note. His testimony at the Old Bailey on Horne Tooke's trial, 303 note, 419, iv. 489-90, 500, v. 199. His Flight to Wimbledon, iii. 343. Ode to him on the convention-bill, 377. He despises the attacks of the people, 388. Amount of his feats, 405 to 413. Odes on his retreat from power, iv. 345 to 378, (and see 443-4, 469 to 474, 488, 525.) Compared to a cathartic, 364. Fable for him, 365. His poverty, 484 to 486, v. 195. His illness, iv. 474, 483-4. His military exploits in retirement, v. 184 to 188. His return to power, 205-6. Does not love women, iv. 502 note, 507 note, v. 196, 199, 200. Whether "a heaven-born minister," v. 200, 227, 276. His death, 242-3, 250, 266. See also ii. 147, 259, 303, 316, 338, 468, iii. 161, 229, 303, 320, 358, 364, 391-2, 400, 402-3, 421, 427, 430, 432, 439-40, 445, 449 to 453, 457, 460-1-2, iv. 231, 443, 463, v. 130, 139, 141, 218, 220, 223, 255, 279, 285; and Falling minister, Great cry and little wool, Hair-powder, Lord Belgrave and his motions (v. 512 to 528), Out at last, and Statue.

Planta, Mr. ii. 282.

Plymouth, description of; and story of the Plymouth carpenter and the coffins, i. 535.

Plymouth, lord, iii. 402.

Poets anciently much esteemed and privileged; and their different treatment now, iii. 93 to 95, v. 296, 304 to 306, 420. Their general poverty, ii. 453, v. 234, 246-7.

Pointer half-starved, simile of one, ii. 393.

Poissardes, their disloyalty, ii. 407, 440, 474.

Pontopidan, ii. 360.

Poor Tom, a song, iv. 414.

Pope, ii. 192, iv. 71-2, 413, v. 26, 314.

Pope, epistle and odes to the, iii. 195, 213, 217.

Porteus (bishop), his generosity, iii. 399. Tries hard for the bishopric of Durham, iv. 310 note. Fragments of his history and character, v. 46 to 49. Elegy to him, 288. See also iv. 387; and Nil admirari, throughout.

Portland, duke of, i. 190, iii. 36, 320, 387, 393, 427, v. 172.

Portrait-painters, advice to them, i. 158.

Poussin, i. 155.

Poverty the only support of subordination, iii. 18, 19. Apostrophe to it, 275.

Praise, its good effects, i. 94. Fair praise contrasted with flattery, 389-90.

Pratt, miss, i. 414.

Prayer of a virtuoso, ii. 92.

Prayers sold, for increasing the fecundity of fowl, i. 91. Some for rain, too successful, iv. 285-6.

Prerogative personified, ii. 390-1.

Presents encouraged at court, ii. 497, 521. Living ones however not acceptable there, iii. 164, 320, 365. Sometimes sold, 320. See also iii. 134, 162-3, 312-13.

Price, Dr. i. 253, ii. 392, 407.

Pride, i. 430, v. 43-4, 110-11. Address to, i. 219, iv. 17, 18.

Priestley, Dr. ii. 478.

Priests, their manners contrasted with those of their master, iii. 390.

- Princes*, their mild nature, iii. 442-3. Princes and cats very much alike, iii. 252. Difference between the estimated and the real value of their nods and smiles, v. 425-6. Foreign princes inclined to presumption, iii. 261. See also Kings.
- Princess royal*, i. 158, 461. Solicits the king in favour of the cooks, 293.
- Princesses*, our present ones, iii. 481, v. 57, 310. Apostrophes to them, i. 185, 246.
- Pringle* (sir John), cause of his resigning the presidency of the Royal Academy, ii. 60 note.
- Prisons*, picture of, v. 155, 213. See also Jails.
- Procession* (royal) to St. Paul's, ii. 135.
- Progress of Admiration*, ii. 521.
- Progress of Knowledge*, ii. 530.
- Proh impudentiam!*, an ode, iv. 525.
- Propertius* quoted, and translated, i. 241.
- Proverbs* of economy, ii. 502.
- Prudence* characterised, i. 86-7. Contrasted with passion, iv. 93-4. Address of Prudence to Peter, v. 318.
- Prudery*, iv. 270.
- Psalmanazar*, i. 349, ii. 360.
- Puffing*, art of living by it, v. 269 to 272.
- Pulteney*, sir James Murray, iii. 498. See also Murray.
- Pursuits of Literature*, iv. 335, 266 note.
- Pye* (Mr.), the laureat, epistle and address to him, iii. 317, 319. See also ii. 451, 461, 469, iii. 379, iv. 348, v. 118, 311.

Q.

- Quacks* and regular practisers compared, iv. 203-4.
- Queen*, her economy, i. 303-4, iii. 294 note. Her German relations, i. 441-2, ii. 120, iii. 353 note. Peter is frightened from speaking of her, ii. 227. Her electioneering, iv. 451. See also ii. 125-6, 302, 386, 388, 431, 488, 502, iii. 134, 146, 293, 300, 320, 336-7, 352, 360-1, 431, 474, 481, iv. 465, 469, v. 397; and the articles Frogmore, and Lousiad (canto V.).

Queen of France, i. 444. Lines on her, iv. 65. Her address to her children before her execution, 180.

Queen-bee described, ii. 280.

Queensbury, duke of, i. 33, 394, ii. 95, iii. 299.

R.

Race for a Holland shift, story of one, iv. 273.

Raff, a term applied to the commons of England, v. 412-13.

Rain prayed for with too much success, iv. 285.

Rake (amorous), picture of a country one, v. 27-8, 65.

Ramsay (Mr.), the king's painter, i. 98.

Ramus (Billy), the page, i. 180, 277, 432, 481.

Raphael despised by Michael Angelo, i. 95. His cartoons cut down by a carpenter, 534-5.—inquiry about their further destination, 538-9.

Rat, simile of one, iv. 367-8. An ode of Peter's destroyed by rats, i. 118.

Rauzzini, iv. 223.

Rawdon, lord, ii. 144.

Razor-seller, story of one, i. 136.

Reason, her light contrasted with the meteor of error, ii. 401.

Redbreasts, ode to some in a country cathedral, iv. 291 (see also 296).

Reeves, John, iii. 380, 387, 401 note, 405, 410, 429, v. 198, 277.

Ode to him, iii. 423. Crumbs of comfort for him on the prosecution of his book, 433.

Reform, similes on the projects of, v. 401.

Relics, some curious and wonderful ones, i. 92-3, iii. 203, 208-9, v. 51.

Religion, French revolution in it, iii. 149 to 153, 200 to 208, v. 50-1.

Remonstrance, an ode, ii. 445.

Rennel, parson, v. 280-1, 302, 315.

Resignation, an ode, iii. 29.

Revenge, iv. 94-5.

Reviewers, epistle to them, i. 1. Address to them, 10. Compared to demons, v. 316. Peter himself has been a reviewer, v. 279-80. He reviews one of his own publications, iv. 294. See also i. 50, v. 269.

Reviews (military), exploits of the king at some, i. 475-6, ii. 354, 534.

Revolution-dinners reprobated, ii. 454.

Reynolds, sir Joshua, i. 16, 17, 41, 63, 81, 88, 97-8, 134, 148, 151, 153, 157, 515, ii. 381, 420, 421 note, 534, iii. 48, 50, 273, iv. 210-11, v. 354. His servile copyists, i. 33-4.

Reynolds, Dr. v. 165.

Richelieu and Maynard, story of, v. 244.

Richmond (duke of), one of king Charles's breed, ii. 144, 340.

Orders a leather cannon, 144 note, iii. 430. His economy, ii. 145 note. His military exploits, iii. 124 to 131, 244. Dedication to him, 229. Ode on him, 231. Tale of his dog Thunder and the widow's pigs, 237. His various amusements at Brighton, 244-5. His attachment to the principles of parliamentary reform, 345, iv. 489, 500 note, v. 197, 274. Theatre at Richmond house, ii. 17 note. See also i. 306, 427, ii. 111 note, 303, iii. 30, 246, 251, 300, 346, 387, 421, 427, 444.

Ridicule, qualities of Peter's, i. 463.

Rights of Kings, ii. 379.

Rigaud, Mr. i. 80, 126, 135, 157.

Rivingtons the booksellers, iv. 338, 382, v. 229 & note, 279-80, 300, 303, 315.

Robespierre, iii. 250, iv. 81.

Robinson, the king's hind, ii. 25 to 30.

Robinson, Mrs. i. 64. Fable of her handkerchief and judge Buller's wig, iii. 105.

Rochford, lord, i. 403.

Rodney, ii. 186.

Rolle (John), drills the corporation of Exeter, ii. 356, iii. 476-7.

His military exploits, iv. 431, 478, v. 42. Epistles to him, iv. 433 to 495. His jokes to the king at Exeter, 437 note. His elevation to the peerage, 445, v. 220-1. See also i. 265 note, ii. 108, 120, iii. 469, 475, v. 26.

Romish priest, tale of one, i. 521.

Rose (George), his two newspapers, iii. 329, 378, 502, iv. 387, v. 56.—ode of condolence on them, iv. 387 note. A Jeremiad addressed to him, iii. 460, 462. Ode to him, iv. 356. He is a naval character, 382. His generosity to his mother, v. 55. See also iii. 301 note, 308 note, 355, 387, 418, 439-40, 444, 488, 524, v. 119, 260, 275, 335.

Rose and strawberry, a fable, iv. 325.

Ross (Dr.), bishop of Exeter, i. 264, iii. 470-1.

Rowland for an Oliver, ii. 285.

Rowland Hill, ii. 207-8, iii. 368, 369 note, v. 138-9.

Rowlandson (Mr.), elegy to him, v. 300.

Roxburgh, duchess of, v. 297.

Royal Institution, v. 132, 138 note, 139 note, 143.

Royal tour, or Weymouth Amusements, iii. 317.

Royal visit to Exeter, iii. 465, i. 264 note, ii. 356.

Rumbold, sir Thomas, i. 410, iii. 293, 301, iv. 41.

Rumford (count), epistle to him, v. 127. See also Thompson (sir Benjamin).

Ruspini, chevalier, iii. 74.

Russell, lord William, iv. 447.

S.

St. Paul's clock, simile of, iv. 377.

St. Vincent, lord, v. 177.

Saints have lost their reputation, ii. 429-30, iii. 202 to 206. Many deprived of their honours by Luther, i. 162-3. One how treated by sailors, to obtain a fair wind from him, 164. Wholesale creation of saints, ii. 71 note. Description of the modern ones; with examples, v. 403, 404 & note, 406, ii. 161-2.

Salisbury (marquis of), lord chamberlain, i. 508, ii. 146, 243, 336, 340, 417, 470, 487, iii. 30, 43, 59, 307, iv. 383, v. 119, 183 & note, 268. His musical exploits, i. 403. Is a poet, iii. 332, iv. 409.—specimen of his poetical powers, iv. 411.

Salisbury, lady, i. 108 note, 508.

Salisbury cathedral, the king's visit to it, ii. 481.

Salvator Rosa, i. 156.

Sanden, captain, v. 386.

Sandwich, lord, i. 409.

Sappho, song to, iv. 159.

Satire, conference of Peter with, i. 73 to 80.

Satirist is a dangerous character, v. 320, iii. 389-90, 403.

Saxehilberghausen, captain, i. 441.

Schwellenberg (madame): some account of this lady; her origin, i. 217.—prodigies at her birth, 218.—her person, and situation in the queen's service, 220. Her dialogue with the king, on the great event that gave rise to the Lousiad, 221-2. Discord assumes her form, 254. She is thrown from a jackass, 307, iii. 404, 463. Ode to madame Schwellenberg and Co., ii. 316. Inquiries concerning her will, v. 129 note. See also i. 188-9, 227, 230, 239, 247, 287, 299, 388-9, ii. 116-18, 342, 391, 487, 488 note, iii. 122, 163, 198, 299, 320, 399, 417, 420, v. 220.

Scotland, elegy to, v. 295.

Scott, general, v. 175 note.

Scratch-wigs worn by the king's cooks, offend his majesty, i. 511-12.

Sculpture not patronised in this country, v. 367.

Sea-courtship, iv. 115.

Self-importance, its happiness, ii. 273.

Selwyn, George, ii. 431.

Semple, major, iii. 179.

Serres (Mr.), character of his pictures, i. 36.

Seward, miss, ii. 299. Her poetry, i. 195.

Shakspeare, iii. 192, iv. 128, v. 120.

Sharpness of expectation, similes on, v. 410 to 412.

Sheba, queen of, ii. 365, 400.

Sheep, story of some royal ones, ii. 25.

Shepherd's pipe, an elegy, iv. 426.

Sheridan, Mr. i. 190, ii. 217, iii. 433, 506, iv. 447-8, 490, 517, 523, v. 241-2-3, 252, 412. Elegy to him, v. 279.

Shield, Mr. v. 272. Lines on an accident that befel him, iv. 412.

Shoemakers, ode to them, iii. 29.

Shower, simile of one, i. 268.

Shrapnell's shells, v. 397.

Siddons, Mrs. ii. 307. Generosity of their majesties to her, i. 397, 479.

Sidmouth (lord), elegy to him, v. 255. See also Addington.

- Sidney*, lord, iv. 245.
- Silence*, picture of, i. 248. Hymn to, iv. 222.
- Simplicity*, ode to, iii. 165. Ancient simplicity, v. 110, 295. Simplicity, or the Curate, a tale, iv. 285 (see also 296).
- Skinner*, alderman, i. 109, ii. 27 to 30, 272 note.
- Sleep*, thoughts on, v. 76-7.
- Smuggling* practised at court, iii. 312, 320, 293 note, 338-9, 417, 420.
- Snell*, Hannah, i. 443.
- Sodom*, its destruction, i. 60.
- Soho*, houses of peculiar accommodation there, iv. 308.
- Soldier* and Virgin Mary, a tale, ii. 170.
- Soldier* of Tilbury fort, ode to a poor one, iii. 241.
- Soldier's fund*, v. 403.
- Soldiers*, ode to the Hanoverian ones in British pay, iii. 247.
- Solitude*, address to, ii. 473.
- Solomon*, king, ii. 365, iv. 190, 329, v. 380.
- Solomon* and the mouse-trap, a tale, ii. 182.
- Solomon*, Dr. v. 138.
- Somerset-house*, ode written after the falls there, i. 121. See also 264, ii. 134 note, 403.
- Songs* (love-), i. 159, 160, iv. 102, 106, 114, 122-3-4, 137, 146, 177, 182, 185, 224, 399, v. 16 to 19, 65, 68, 100-1, 325. Drinking-song, v. 66. Loyal song, iv. 395. Anacreontic song to my lute, 56. Pastoral song, 57. See also Delia and other names, and Ballads.
- Southern*, Tom, i. 122.
- Spallanzani* the naturalist, iii. 457 note.
- Spaniel*, simile of one, iii. 21.
- Speaker*, his usual address on the meeting of a new parliament, ii. 384.
- Spider*, similes of, ii. 56, v. 310.—of a spider and flies, ii. 372, iii. 21, v. 34. Susan and the spider, a tale, iv. 42. Fable of the young fly and the old spider, 194.
- Stadtholder*, iii. 338. See also Orange.
- Stag*, fable of one, i. 28.
- Stainer* a fiddle-maker, i. 156.

- Stanhope*, earl, ii. 392, 408.
- Stanislaus*, king, i. 440.
- Stanley* (Mr.), musician, i. 52.
- Starlings*, simile of, i. 105.
- Statue*, affair of the proposed one to Pitt, iv. 492 to 495. Epistle to the subscribers, 497. See also v. 173, 203.
- Staunton*, sir George, iii. 310, 313 note, iv. 236.
- Steel traps* set in the king's gardens, iii. 331, 335, 355.
- Sternhold's psalms*, ii. 242.
- Stone* thrown at the king, epigram on, iii. 328 note.
- Storace* (madame) refuses to sing to their majesties, ii. 499 note.
- Stubbs*, Mr. i. 29. Character of his pictures, 46.
- Subjects for Painters*, ii. 129.
- Sucking pigs*, simile of, iii. 364. An extraordinary wet-nurse for them, v. 416.
- Sultan and dog*, a tale, iv. 370.
- Sumen* of a sow, a delicate dish, ii. 66, 147.
- Sun*, ode to, iv. 178. Druid hymn to, 51. Fable of the sun and the peacock, iii. 264. Simile of the sun, v. 265.—of the sun and clouds, iii. 96, 307-8, 323-4, 325, 398, iv. 164, 394.—of the sun in a storm, ii. 427-8, iii. 93, iv. 15.—of the sun and a rock, iv. 309.
- Sunday*, its sorrows; an elegy, iii. 367.
- Sunday concerts* abolished, i. 505 to 510, ii. 20 to 23.
- Sunday schools*, v. 43.
- Sunny day* in a country town, simile of, ii. 264.
- Surry* (lord), imitations of, v. 88, 94, 106, 114.
- Susan and the spider*, a tale, iv. 42.
- Swearing* practised by fine gentlewomen, i. 222.
- Swellenberg*. See Schwellenberg.
- Swift*, dean, iv. 72.
- Swithin* (Saint), i. 268.
- Sylvester*, counsellor, iv. 452-3.
- Sylvia*, anacreontic to, iv. 138.

T.

Tales of the Hoy, iv. 379.

Talleyrand, v. 187, 248.

Taste, general decline of, v. 316 to 318. Differences of taste, ii. 471 to 474.

Tax, a new one proposed, iii. 299.

Taylor, miss, v. 387.

Taylor (Mr. Tom), the Morocco ambassador, v. 399 note.

Tea, panegyric on, iv. 36-7.

Tears of St. Margaret, iii. 77.

Tears and smiles, v. 1 to 125.

Teeth do vast execution for their size, iv. 82.

Tempora mutantur, an ode, iv. 526.

Tender husband, a monody, ii. 165.

Teneriffe, peak of, ii. 362.

Teniers, i. 113, v. 365.

Thelluson, Mr. v. 245.

Thief at the whipping-post, story of one, iv. 509.

Thompson, sir Benjamin, ii. 72. See also Rumford.

Thompson, sir Charles, i. 404 to 407, ii. 209, 243.

Thought, a new and moral and serious one, iv. 105.

Thrale, Mrs. i. 378, ii. 265. See also Piozzi.

Thrones are sacred, ii. 416.

Thrush and cuckoo, simile of, iii. 412.

Thumb of St. Thomas the apostle, i. 92-3.

Thunder, simile of a clap of, v. 168.

Thurlow (lord), his bluntness, i. 402. Is compelled to pray, ii. 148.

Opposes the prosecution of Peter, 218. See also i. 158, ii. 96, 110-11, 118, 208, iv. 6, 227, 245, v. 167, 247, 335.

Tibullus quoted, and translated, v. 3.

Time, addresses to, ii. 189, iv. 67, 184. Its havoc on Peter's person, v. 350-1. Its value to artists, i. 116-17.

Tinker and the miller's daughter, story of, iv. 46.

Titian, i. 146.

Toast-master, his absolute authority, iv. 393-4.

Tobacco-stopper, simile of, ii. 448.

- Tofts* (Mrs.), the singer, iii. 54.
Tom and Dolly, a stable cantata, iv. 110.
Tonyn, major, v. 387.
Tooke (Horne), iii. 506, v. 388.
Tooth-ache, ii. 357.
Tooth-drawing, story of, iv. 136.
Toper and flies, story of, i. 517.
Toujours perdrix, ii. 422. Story on this subject, iv. 317-18.
Townsend, Macmanus, and Jealous, the thief-takers; ode to them, iii. 173. See also 307, 328, 330.
Townshend, lord John, iv. 321.
Traveller and Jupiter, story of, iv. 144.
Tray's epitaph, ii. 37.
Trees in Richmond park cut down, iii. 327.
Trelawny, sir William, ii. 506 note.
Tristia, or the Sorrows of Peter, v. 231.
Triumph, ode of, iii. 490.
Triumph of Isis, ii. 203.
Trotter, the notorious Mr. v. 253.
Truth dangerous, iii. 389. Contrasted with falsehood, 116.
Tryon, miss, iv. 281.
Turenne, marshal, iii. 236 note.
Turner (Mr.), his character as a painter, v. 366.
Twelfth-cake, ornaments suggested for one, v. 424.
Tyler (Mr.), architect, i. 135, 157.
Tyrants, ode to, iii. 253.

U.

- Ugliness*, ode to, iv. 142.
Universities of England despised by the king, i. 455 note, iii. 313 note. See also Gottingen.
Uxbridge, earl of, i. 408, 506, ii. 340, iii. 85-6-7.

V.

- Valletort*, lord, ii. 339, 355 note.
Van Butchel, Martin, v. 131.

- Van Trump*, story of, ii. 510.
- Vanity*, ii. 509, iv. 515-16.
- Variety* in love, iv. 226, 228, 316. Compared with constancy, ii. 421-2.
- Venice Preserved* suppressed by Pitt, iii. 403.
- Venus*, address to, iv. 124.
- Vere*, earl of Oxford, ballad supposed to be written by him, v. 99.
- Vernon* (miss), an Amazonian maid of honour, i. 181.
- Veronese* (Paul), i. 146.
- Versatility*, apostrophe to, iv. 5.
- Vestris* the dancer, ii. 463.
- Vesuvius* (mount) frightened into silence, i. 77.
- Vicissitudes* of life, iii. 104.
- Village-girl* amazed at finding the king to be a mere man, v. 392.
- Violet*, ballad on, v. 107.
- Virgil*, iii. 62. Quoted, and translated, i. 13, 169, ii. 43, 85, 489, iii. 139, 195, 283, 485, v. 25, 383.
- Virtues* thrive in poetry, ii. 34. Address to them, 528.
- Virtuoso*, prayer of one, ii. 92.
- Voltaire*, i. 330. Quoted, ii. 43.
- Volunteers* at a breach, simile of, iii. 391.

W.

- Waggoner* and Jupiter, story of, iii. 211.
- Waithman*, Mr. v. 208 note, 389.
- Wales* (prince of), how treated at the dinner of the Royal Academy, i. 130, 132 3. His retirement, 214. His illness, 478-9. Attacked by Pitt, ii. 107, 109, 127, 259, iv. 491. His favourable opinion of Peter's verses, v. 416.—this however totally unprofitable to the poet, 419, 426. A decent prayer for his royal highness on a delicate occasion, 430. See also i. 190, 401, 444, 461, 513-14, 520, ii. 220-1, 226-7, 265, iii. 329, 499, v. 164, 180, 183; and Carlton-house Fête (v. 407), throughout.
- Wales*, princess of, v. 44, 121, 169, 425.
- Walpole*, sir Robert, i. 196 note. Horace, 51, 141, 195, ii. 299, iii. 14.
- Walsingham* (lord), his cunning in minute things, ii. 341.

- Walsingham* (Mrs.), her musical exploits and taste, i. 417 to 422, 506.
- War*, its national advantages, iii. 251, iv. 500. Apostrophe to, iv. 11.
- Warburton*, bishop, iv. 260.
- Wardle*, colonel, v. 388, 405.
- Warren* the perfumer, i. 40, 525.
- Warton* (Mr. Tom), the laureat, i. 109 note, 195, ii. 335, iii. 328.
See also Laureat; and Brother Peter to Brother Tom (i. 499), and Ode upon Ode (i. 383), throughout.
- Washington*, iii. 321.
- Watches* fried by a whole corporation, iii. 281.
- Water-spout*, simile of one, i. 492.
- Watkyn*, sir, i. 416, 507.
- Weather*, fair prayed for, iii. 277.—wet prayed for, iv. 285.
- Webb* (Mr.), a writer on painting, i. 141.
- Welshman* and pullet, story of, iv. 214.
- Weltjie*, the prince's cook, abuses the Royal Academicians for their treatment of his highness at their dinner, i. 132-3. His compliments and hospitality to Peter, v. 415. Invites Peter to write his Life, 416. Apostrophe to his shade, 417-18.
- Wesley* (John) and his hymns, ii. 159.
- West* (Mr.), examination of some of his pictures, i. 17, 53 to 55, 74-5, 88, 138-9, 148 to 150, 208-9, ii. 135-6, 341, v. 352. Paints by the acre, i. 88, 148, 208 note. In what respect deserving praise, 139. The king's partiality for him, and similes on this subject, 515 to 518. Epitaph for him, ii. 136. His rage against Peter, 138 to 142. Ode on his election to the presidency of the Royal Academy, iii. 48. Is near being knighted, iii. 275, 279-80. See also i. 97, 125, 210, 534, ii. 7 note, 381, 393, 421, 534, iii. 274, 278, 396, 398-9.
- Westmeath*, lady, iv. 321.
- Westmoreland*, earl of, ii. 340.
- Wet-nurse* for young pigs, an extraordinary one, v. 416.
- Weymouth*, iv. 386. See also Royal tour.
- Whale*, image of one, v. 363.
- Wheatley* (Mr.), disloyally preferred to Mr. Laurence by the Royal Academicians, ii. 382, 432.

- Whitbread* (Mr.), his oratorical exertions in the affair of Mrs. Clarke and the duke of York, v. 388.
- Whitbread's brewhouse* visited by their majesties, i. 480 to 496, ii. 259, 531.
- Whitehead* (Mr.), the laureat, i. 52, 109.
- Whiting's head*, similes of, iv. 387, v. 406.
- Widow*, ode to a handsome one, iv. 164.
- Widow of Ephesus*, tale of, iv. 401.
- Wilberforce*, Mr. iii. 367, v. 406.
- Wilkes*, John, i. 109, 240.
- Wilkie* (Mr.), his character as a painter, v. 365.
- Willippics* written by Peter, v. 277.
- Willis*, Dr. ii. 124, 496, iii. 341 note, 418.
- Wilson*, Dr. i. 183.
- Wilson* (Mr.), painter, i. 515. Character of his pictures, 27.
- Wilton* (Mr.), painter, i. 135, iii. 278.
- Wilton-house*, the king's visit to, ii. 483.
- Wind*, simile of a storm of, iii. 326.
- Windham*, Mr. iii. 392, 400, 434, 488, 500 note, iv. 360, 367, 377, 524, v. 317, 403.
- Windsor*, mother, i. 108, ii. 95, 405, iii. 63.
- Winter*, ballad of, v. 104.
- Wisdom*, her counsel to Peter, v. 290.
- Wit* compared to Time's scythe, i. 114.
- Wits* compared to loadstones, ii. 462.
- Woide*, Mr. ii. 282.
- Wolf* and lion, a tale; iii. 68.
- Wolves*, bear, and other beasts, a fable, iii. 71.
- Woman*, anacreontic on, iv. 102. Women vindicated from having no souls, i. 523. Advice to young women, iv. 325.
- Wonders*, universal fondness of, ii. 353.
- Wood*, depredations committed on that in Richmond and Kew gardens, iii. 292 note.
- Woodcock*, simile of one, i. 511.
- World*, lines on, iv. 100. Ode on its mischiefs, 167, (417.)
- Worsley*, lady, i. 179.
- Wright*, sir Samson, ii. 178.

Wright (Derby), character of his pictures, i. 89.

Wyat (Mr.), the architect, i. 121, iii. 294.

Wyatt (sir Thomas), ballads supposed to be written by him, v. 96-7.

X.

Xerxes, iv. 417.

Y.

Yarmouth, lord, v. 414, 429.

Yeardsley, Mrs. ii. 299.

York, duke of, iii. 499, v. 411, 423-4. See also Osnaburgh; and Clarke (Mrs.), throughout. His employments while out of office,
v. 397-8.

Yorke (Mr.), chancellor, his melancholy end unpitied by the author
of it, i. 215.

Young, lady, i. 506.

Young (parson) and the king, story of, ii. 31.

Young women, advice to, iv. 325.

Z.

Zoffani, character of his pictures, i. 36.

